Submit your final, post-peer-review manuscript to SPARK (http://spark.siue.edu), SIUE's institutional repository, within 30 days of its publication in the journal of your choice.

No. Authors continue to have the right to choose where to publish their articles. Most publishers allow authors to deposit the post-peer-reviewed manuscript version of their article(s) in institutional repositories. For those that do not, a waiver may be claimed.

My publisher charges $____ for open access. Do I have to pay that to comply with the policy?

No! The publisher charges those fees to fund open access publication of your article at the journal’s website. The purpose of the SIU Open Access Policy is to include a free open access option by archiving the author’s version of the article in the university's own repository. There is no fee associated with this archiving function.

The policy applies to “accepted, peer-reviewed journal manuscripts” written by faculty while employed by SIUE. It does not cover non-peer-reviewed articles, books or book chapters, or other works, although faculty are encouraged to deposit such materials in SPARK when feasible.

If the standard agreement proposed by the publisher does not grant you the right to post your article in your institution's repository, you may either complete a OA Policy Waiver form for that article or ask the publisher for permission by amending their proposed Publication Agreement (we provide such an amendment form for authors to use if they wish, see http://libguides.siue.edu/spark for links to both the waiver or the amendment).

Yes! SPARK can provide a permanent and accessible location for data files (ie. for certain funder requirements for research data), conference presentations, technical reports, white papers, campus journals, books, and more!
