MEMO TO: The University Community

FROM: Andrew J. Kochman

C. Scully Stikes of New Brunswick, N.J., has been named executive dean of student affairs of the University, effective June 1. The appointment is subject to ratification by the Board of Trustees.

Stikes, who is 30, is dean of students at Livingston College, Rutgers University. He also serves as associate dean of the College and is an assistant professor in two disciplines, psychology and academic foundations.

Stikes' professional experience includes four years as director of developmental services at Kent State University, Kent, O., where he also was an instructor in sociology, anthropology, and rehabilitation counseling.

A native of Louisville, Ky., Stikes has four degrees from Kent State. He received the bachelor of arts, with majors in psychology and biology, in 1967; the master of education in rehabilitation counseling in 1969; the master of arts in sociology and anthropology in 1970; and the doctor of philosophy in counseling and personnel services, with specialization in group counseling, psychotherapy and organizational development, in 1974.

Stikes has been a consultant for numerous educational institutions, professional organizations and governmental agencies, in student personnel services, human management problems, and leadership development programs.

He has conducted extensive research in foundations of student development, community psychology and counseling and is the author of a number of research articles on his specializations.

Stikes' memberships in professional organizations include the American Personnel and Guidance Association, the National Association of Student Personnel Administrators and the American Psychological Association. He has been honored by Omicron Delta Kappa Men's Honorary, Blue Key Men's Honorary, and Phi Delta Kappa Education Honorary.
