College students should beware of deadly meningitis

■ BY DOREEN VAN LEE
NEWS STRINGER

A recent report by the American College Health Association recommends that college students consider pre-exposure vaccinations against meningococcal and pneumococcal meningitis.

Dr. Lee Johnson of the University Health Services said that meningococcal meningitis is the most common of the two diseases. Meningococcal meningitis is transmitted through the air via sneezing or coughing and direct contact with persons infected with the disease. It is extremely important to detect symptoms before they progress because it can cause inflammation of the membranes surrounding the brain and spinal chord.

Symptoms of meningococcal meningitis may include: a rash, fever, nausea, vomiting, severe sudden headache accompanied by lethargy and a stiff neck.

The use of an antibiotic called ciprofloxacin or rifampin is recommended for those who have been exposed to the disease.

Belton appointed as new editor in chief of the Alestle

The position is finally filled after being vacant for almost an entire semester.

■ BY ZHANDA
JOHNSON
NEWS EDITOR

Danielle Belton was approved Friday by the University Publishing Board Committee to take on the position as the Alestle's editor in chief. The editor in chief position had been vacant since September 1997 when the former Editor in Chief Rebecca Hopkins, resigned.

Belton is a sophomore majoring in mass communications. She has worked for the Alestle since August 1997.

"I started off as a news reporter and two days later I was news editor," Belton said.

Belton said she is very happy to be editor in chief. The position will help her with her major (mass communication) and give her excellent experience.

Belton also said that she has always loved to write and always had an inquisitive mind. She said she has the tendency to be nosy.

Growing up Belton watched "60 Minutes," which made her want to be an investigative reporter, and was fascinated by journalists such as Mike Wallace and Ed Bradley.

"I really have a deep passion for writing and reporting," Belton said.

Belton is from St. Louis, Mo. She graduated from Hazelwood Central High School in which she also worked for the school newspaper entitled "Hawk Talk." There she wrote for the editorial page. She didn't enjoy it however, because the paper didn't represent the student body.

"It turned me off of journalism for a while," Belton said. "However, nothing can keep me from my true love."

Belton's goal for the Alestle is to work toward making it an "A" newspaper. She wants to give a top quality paper to students, staff and faculty.

"I want it to be a reflection of the university and the community," Belton said.

In the future, Belton hopes to get an internship in either radio, television or print journalism and eventually to graduate from SIUE.

"I'm proud to be part of this campus and part of the Alestle, and I'm here to stay," Belton

Students are stepping into the new year with Greek activity on campus

■ BY ZHANDA JOHNSON
NEWS EDITOR

With the start of a new semester several SIUE Greek organizations have many events and programs planned. Although some of the events are specifically geared toward fraternity and sorority members, most of them have been developed to involve all students.

Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority Inc. has several events planned for the spring semester. This Saturday the sorority will host the Central Regional Undergraduate Leadership Seminar. Alpha Kappa Alpha members from colleges in the Central Region which includes Ill., Ind., Iowa, Ky., Mo., Minn. and Wis. will be involved in this event held in Collinsville, Ill.

"The skills that the sorors will develop will lead Alpha Kappa Alpha into the next millennium," Vice President Meisha Lyons said.

Although the seminar is just for AKA's, there will be a party after the event which anyone can attend. The party will take place Friday

Good intentions can go a long way for the environment

A few good intentions and personal motivation can help the community as a whole. Conservation of the environment is a very popular slogan all over the world, but it is becoming more difficult day by day. Simple matters often create complex problems due to overuse and misuse of our natural resources, but we can minimize all those problems if we just use a little effort. For example, municipal solid waste management is an immediate, critical problem in our society. Its collection, processing and disposal is becoming an acute problem and it is increasing day by day because the amount of municipal solid waste generation is going up and the life of landfills is becoming short; setting up new landfills is difficult because of public opposition.

In the USA, we are producing an average of 6.09 lbs. of waste per capita per day and in 1990, a total amount of 190 million tons of municipal solid waste was generated. This figure is almost double the amount generated in 1960 and is rising at a rate of slightly over one percent per year (Office of Technology Assessment. Facing America's Trash: What Next for Municipal Solid Waste. Washington D.C., 1989). Across the country, the cost of solid waste collection, processing and disposal is the fourth highest category of municipal budgets. The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), state and city authorities and private companies are investing money to find out the best solution to the management problems of municipal solid waste. Upon discussion, the Madison County Solid Waste Coordinator concluded that increasing the waste collection bill per container is the only way to reduce the generation of municipal solid waste. To control the municipal solid waste management problem, the EPA adopted an integrated solid waste management hierarchy composed of the following elements: source reduction, recycling, waste combustion and land filling. The main objectives of the hierarchy is the reduction of municipal solid waste generation and the extension of landfill life. To solve the municipal solid waste management problem, the majority of research involves finding ways to reuse, recycle and create long-lasting materials. Increasing trash collection bills may be a way to control the generation of municipal solid waste, but if every individual takes a little initiative and uses good intentions, we can help society a lot and also save money.

A study was carried out on SIUE's campus to prepare a paper for CE 588 (Solid Wastes Management) about the use of handkerchiefs compared to the use of paper towels with an intention to reduce municipal solid waste generation. It was found that many people are willing to use handkerchiefs over paper towels but they didn't think about how it might be a way to reduce the generation of municipal solid waste nor that it can save money. The results show 86 percent are fully concerned about municipal solid waste problems, but only 48 percent are willing to use handkerchiefs over paper towels. Sixty-seven percent of concerned people think that the use of handkerchiefs is a step to reduce municipal solid waste generation. The average use of paper towels is eight per capita per day and about 23.5 lbs. of municipal solid waste is generated due to the use of paper towels, which is about 1.05 percent of total municipal solid waste generating (2225) per capita per year. The results of economic analysis (see graph) shows a big financial benefit from the use of handkerchiefs. The cost for paper towels is $39.21 for the same period, yet by using handkerchiefs, it is possible to minimize the rising rate (1 percent per year) of municipal solid waste generation. The amount that could be saved is $36.60 for each member of the family per year. There may be some questions that arise. For example, handkerchiefs need frequent washing. Yes, but if we are willing do a little extra work in response to our feelings and responsibilities of the problems of the nation then there will be no question concerning the conservation of the environment nor the survival of the next generation.

Letters to the editor

SIUE workers defend themselves against claims of incompetence

In response to Ellen Cottingham's comment about the icy walkways, ("Ice, Ice Everywhere...", Jan. 13, 1998"), Facilities Management is divided into different departments with different responsibilities and duties. Ellen, icy walkways are handled by the "Grounds and Moving Service." Janitors (excuse me) "Custodial Service" or "Building Service Workers," maintain the interior of University buildings. Also, "Grounds and Moving Services" are provided with the proper clothing and footwear for working outside. The several people you watched drinking coffee were probably part of "Building Services Workers" and are responsible for the safety of SIUE students and employees inside the buildings. If you're confused about the reason why the tuition continues to increase, try getting involved in the Student Government, the University Center Board or the University Housing Committee. And I do agree, the university probably needs to budget more money, so that we can have the "Grounds and Moving Service" provide around the clock safety outside. If you really want to get technical: the person or persons responsible for closing the school because of bad weather are responsible for ensuring the total safety of the students and employees of SIUE. So next time before you aimlessly point your finger, get your facts straight. P.S. I forgive you; everyone makes mistakes.

Tonya Griffin
Student Worker, "Facilities Management"
Sophomore, Early Childhood Education

In response to Ellen Cottingham's Letter to the Editor in the Jan. 13, 1998 issue of the Alestle, "Ice, Ice Everywhere...", we would like to clarify some of the incorrect information in her letter. First of all, ice and snow removal is done by grounds personnel. Custodians (janitors) have nothing to do with snow and ice removal. Grounds personnel which once numbered in the 20s is now down to a crew of seven with more roads, buildings and parking lots to take care of. On the morning in question, we started at our normal time as we were not called out early. The crew is on call-out basis after normal working hours. The workers seen drinking coffee were custodial personnel and had not yet started their shift. We, the grounds workers, put in long hours (16, 20 or 24 hour shifts) during snow and ice storms. With our crew down to so few, we doubt that your rising tuition costs are due to us. Two of our crew are currently tuition paying parents and we do not want to see abuse of our tuition dollars any more than Ellen Cottingham. We feel we do a good job with the personnel available. It would be nice to receive a pat on the back once in awhile instead of constant criticism. We do our best.

Wilkos said he uses necessary force when he intervenes onstage. "This last show, a woman was grabbing hair, and women are hard to separate. But, if you apply pressure to the wrist, they'll let go," Wilkos said.

Being on the show has also aided him at his other job as a patrolman. "I got a call last night, domestic, the whole family is fighting. And we got there and they're like, 'Oh, you're on Jerry!' and they forget about their problems. They want to know if they can get tickets, t-shirts, all that. It's kind of making me a mini-celebrity," Wilkos said.

Wilkos' primary job on the show is to protect Springer. But, would he take a bullet for his boss? "Of course I would," Wilkos said. "For one, Jerry's been very good to me, and not too many policemen get to appear on a national TV show. Second, I take a chance of taking a bullet everyday when I go to work. So, of course, I'd take one for Jerry."

Schultz defends the show against accusations that it's trash television. "That's what people want to see. We've always been a wild, crazy show," Schultz said. "It's fun now, let's ride the wave and see how long we can ride it."

As a final thought, the "Jerry Springer Show" encompasses many unique elements onstage and backstage. Sure, it can be wild and even a little bit trashy. But, it never takes itself too seriously. And it always ends on a positive message from Jerry: "Take care of yourself, and each other."

"The vaccination for meningococcal meningitis is called Menomune and has been around for years," Johnson said. "At first the vaccine wasn't pushed much because it was only good for up to 6 months."

Johnson said that the new vaccine which is called the Menomune vaccine, given by injection, will protect the immune system for approximately three to five years. To date there has been only one case of meningococcal meningitis here on campus reported to health services.

The symptoms of pneumococcal meningitis are somewhat similar to meningococcal meningitis, but a previous infection is usually present in the lungs and directly effects the middle ear or sinuses. The vaccine for pneumococcal meningitis is available at the University Health Services at a price of $15.00.

Into the FIRE

A behind the scenes look at America's hottest talk show

■ BY COREY STULCE LIFESTYLE EDITOR

The tension has peaked. The audience is hungry for blood. A terrified young man is about to tell his perky girlfriend that he has not only been cheating on her for the last four months, but it has been with a (gasp) member of the opposite sex. She responds with a sharp siap to his face. The mob cheers, and thus begins the well-oiled machine that is "The Jerry Springer Show."

Ratings for the popular talk show have soared in the last year, and frequently give Oprah, the top-rated syndicated talk show, a run for the money. Much of its success has to do with the outrageous nature and of course, the hard-working staff behind the scenes.

The audience for the show is warmed up and led, like a pack of loyal sheep, by Todd Schultz, stage manager and post-production supervisor.

"You see me because I'm breaking up fights, telling the audience what to expect, when they need reaction, stuff like that ... I give instructions to be loud and obnoxious, but only when I ask them to," Schultz said.

Schultz came to the show in early 1994 as a production assistant and became stage manager in April, 1995. He leads the audience in "oohs" and "ahhs" for added drama on the show, and quiets them when their chants of "Jerry, Jerry" carry on too long. He is also the last person to see the show before airing, and has the job of meticulously bleeping all of the foul language that the guests spew.

Guests on "The Springer Show" have to sign various waivers in order to appear. One states that if a guest is not telling the truth they could be liable for the cost of the episode, around $80,000. If a guest is going on to find out a surprise, a very popular "Springer" show style, they have to read and sign a list of 20 possible surprises.

Surprises range from a reunion, to finding out that their girlfriend is a man. They also have to sign a waiver saying their likeness on video can be used for anything, including appearing in videos like Springer's "Too Hot For TV!"

Some of the guests need special care before a taping begins. For any television program make-up and wardrobe is used and the "Springer" show is no different. According to a production assistant, some guests arrive with missing teeth, and can be sent to the dentist, per request. White-out is used for guests who have gold teeth.

Once the taping starts, Steve Wilkos job begins. He is the director of security for the show, and a Chicago police officer on the side.

"I'm almost like an audience member, except I interact if there's a physical confrontation," Wilkos said.

Wilkos said his favorite type of show is the relationship show that they do all of the time

"The show was successful [before], but now it's really taking off," Wilkos said. "I think it's the nature of the show. We do relationship shows. They're very confrontational. They're very explosive, and I think people want to see that. And I think it's something that people can relate to."

Wilkos hires other Chicago police officers for the show if needed. "If we're doing a KKK show or having 20 guests and it might get confrontational, I bring in other officers for assistance," he said.

Not 'Too Hot', not too cold

■ BY COREY STULCE LIFESTYLE EDITOR

Success in the entertainment industry inevitably means one thing: merchandising.

"The Jerry Springer Show" is no different. Lately, commercials have aired during the show hawking a video tape entitled, "Jerry Springer: Too Hot For TV!" The tape promises to feature clips that are too racy and outrageous to air on regular television.

The claim is mostly true, but the results are a bit disappointing. The tape features 45-minutes of clips from episodes of "Springer." Most of the clips feature fights from the popular relationship shows, which don't seem any more outrageous than the normal episodes (which are outrageous, but free).

The rest of the tape contains clips which feature partial female nudity. These are the only parts of the tape that could actually be construed as "Too Hot." Besides being funny, they could also be construed as sexist.

The show would have been more honestly marketed as a "Greatest Hits" (get it — fights, hits) collection. All in all, for die-hard Jerry fans, or those looking for a fun party tape, it's worth the $20.

Men's hoops end home stretch with win over Lewis

■ BY BRETT LICATA
SPORTS REPORTER

Fundamentals proved to be the back-breaker for the SIUE men's basketball team last Thursday.

The Cougars shot themselves in the foot by missing six free-throws in the final 47 seconds of regulation and opened the door for Wisconsin-Parkside to steal a victory.

SIUE had what looked to be an insurmountable 10 point lead, but with under a minute to play, Wisconsin-Parkside rallied. Wisconsin-Parkside made a three-pointer with 16 seconds to play and sent the game into overtime with the two teams tied 75-75.

In overtime, the teams went back and forth before Alfonzo Lewis of Wisconsin-Parkside had his prayers answered. Lewis drained a desperate three-pointer as time expired to give Wisconsin-Parkside the 86-83 upset.

Lewis later admitted that he didn't even see the basket when he threw up the game winning shot.

"We played well in the first half," head coach Jack Margenthaler said. "This game is a perfect example of how important good free-throw shooting is."

Allen Berry led the Cougars with 27 points and eight rebounds while Rusty Sarnes added 15 points. Last week's Great Lakes Valley Conference Co-Player of the Week, Nathan Kreke, had 10 points and seven boards.

Neil Beitzall/Alestle

Sophomore Travis Wallbaum shoots over a host of Wisconsin-Parkside players at the 86-83 loss on Jan. 15th at the Vadalabene Center.

On Saturday, SIUE failed to play smart basketball and suffered their second loss in as many games.

SIUE and Lewis slugged it out for a better part of the game. Both teams played extremely physical, but after the game was tied with seven minutes left, the Cougars lost their composure and Lewis pulled away for the 87-66 win.

"Those last seven minutes were the worst this basketball team has played all year," Margenthaler said.

"We played as individuals. We were giving them wide open shots. Nothing went right for us."

Berry had a team-high of 20 points, Travis Wallbaum contributed 15 points and pulled down nine rebounds while Rusty Sarnes chipped in with 14 points and seven boards.

The Cougars will need to regroup after dropping out of the NABC/Division II Bulletin Top 25. They will travel to Indianapolis and Northern Kentucky this week in an attempt to better their 11-4 overall record and 5-3 GLVC mark.

SIUE will be up against a solid defense when they battle Indianapolis on Thursday.

"Indianapolis is an excellent rebounding team," Margenthaler said. "They don't have outstanding stats., but they are definitely a strong team."

The nation's No. 18 ranked team, Northern Kentucky, welcomes SIUE to Highland Heights, Ky. on Saturday afternoon.

"They are very good on their home court," Margenthaler said about facing Northern Kentucky. "They are very aggressive. You can't just guard one person on their team. They have a lot of weapons that can hurt you."

Margenthaler thinks that a tough road trip is just what his team might need.

"That might be good for us right now," Margenthaler said about traveling this week. "Our main concern now is that we get back to playing as a team."

Women's hoops go 1-1 over weekend

■ BY JASON TRIPLETT
SPORTS REPORTER

The women's basketball team is packing away their home colors after edging Wisconsin Parkside and losing to Lewis University in the last two games of a four game home stretch.

Last Thursday, the Cougar women hosted a Wisconsin-Parkside team who were 1-6 in the conference and 2-12 overall.

SIUE was down at the end of the first half due to a defense that was full of holes. The non-capacity crowd watched the Rangers run an offense that centered from the post to passes on baseline. Parkside made the cuts, got the rebounds and had the Cougars down 40-30 going into the locker room.

"I told them that we can't afford to spot teams a lead and then come back in the second half," Cougar head coach Wendy Hedberg said. "We seem to have that type of game with Parkside every year."

The second half struggle for SIUE started with defense and rebounding. Each team played well on the boards with Parkside's Katie Morrissey pulling down 10 and SIUE's Kim Lowe, having a Dennis Rodman type night, fighting for 19 rebounds. Eight of the boards were on the offensive end.

SIUE picked the defense up and paid the price. Leslie Phillips and Misi Clark fouled out, but not before Clark knocked down two crucial free throws to put the game into extra minutes.

"We definitely weren't working hard on defense," Hedberg said. "Our problems throughout the game were all basic, fortunately we came back."

In the final minute of overtime, SIUE guard Erica Cory hit two free throws to make it 73-70 and then made a long pass up court to a wide open Christina Loomis. Loomis got fouled on the play and went to line to nail down the game. She missed two and the score stayed at 73-72 and Parkside got a chance to end it.

With some six seconds on the clock, Parkside inbounded the ball and made their way up court. The ball went into the hands of the off-guard Heather Bogenschneider.

A questionable call, which was commonplace in this contest, arose when Bogenschneider was fouled at the buzzer. The referees said it was after the clock read zero.

Clark led all scorers with 22 points and three assists. Alicia Harkins, Erica Cory and Kim Lowe all ended in double figures.

Parkside had three players in double digits with Bogenschneider putting in 16 and generously giving out nine assists.

Saturday's game had SIUE against a Lewis University team that is now 6-2 in the conference after beating the Cougars 86-76.

The loss for the Cougars was not without effort. Four SIUE players finished the game scoring in double figures with Clark putting in 25.

Although the Cougars outscored the Flyers in the second half 46-44, Lewis' tandem of Carey Jewell and

Cougar wrestling setting sights on future

Tired team gears up for National Duals

■ BY BRIAN ANDERSON
SPORTS REPORTER

SIUE wrestling dominated Truman State 31-12 last Wednesday, but quickly lost their momentum over the weekend in the Northern Iowa Duals, a team tournament.

The Cougars went 0-2 in the Duals, losing 38-6 in the first round to Division III powerhouse Wartburg College of Missouri. SIUE then fell to Marquette, 24-22.

Graig Panell and Demos Glass were the only winners against Wartburg, but many of the matches were close and could have been won according to coach Kristoff.

"Mental and physical conditioning is the reason we lost the way we did," a disappointed Kristoff said. "This team has a lot of talent, but they need to take responsibility for their conditioning and work harder in practice. All of our wrestlers looked tired near the end of their matches."

Titus Taylor entered the Cougar lineup at 158 pounds and looked impressive, whipping Calvin Buhler of Truman State. He was defeated 7-6 in the Duals by Div. III Wartburg's No. 1 nationally ranked wrestler.

"Titus should have won that match by at least five points. He simply got tired," Kristoff said.

Winners against Marquette were: Kevin Dunn, Tim Michel, Demos Glass, Titus Taylor and Steve Brown.

SIUE (1-4) travels to Edmond, Ok. this Friday and Saturday for the National Duals, a Division II team-tournament. The Cougar wrestlers with winning records include freshman standout, 126 pound Tim Michel (12-8); 150 pound junior, Demos Glass (10-7); 158 pound junior, Titus Taylor (7-4); and heavyweight sophomore, Steve Brown (6-4). Perhaps SIUE's top wrestler Elijah Roberts is currently pending academic eligibility.

Kellie Harmas combined for 53 points and kept the Cougars on the downside of their 12 point halftime deficit.

"We couldn't leave those two players alone," Hedberg said. "If we did they'd shoot the three, and if we pressured them they would drive and get fouled."

As a team, the Flyers shot 51.1 percent from the floor and 86.1 percent from the free throw line. Harmas hit 11 of 13 and Jewell hit 9 of 10 from the charity stripe.

Clark went 4 of 8 for SIUE from the land of three. Kim Lowe put in some good work on the glass having more of a Charles Barkley sort of night totaling 16 rebounds.

"Offensively we played good. We need to convert free throws and some of our players need to shoot a little more," Hedberg said.

The Cougar women are going to tackle a tough schedule for their four game road trip starting on Thursday with Indianapolis.
