Chancellor answers students' questions

BY PAUL HOLLOWAY
NEWS STRINGER

The topics ranged from football to shower lights when SIUE Chancellor David Werner sat down for a conversation with students.

The chancellor was accompanied by a number of department heads and administrators as he met with some 25 students, faculty and others in the Cougar Den restaurant in the Morris University Center for an hour Thursday.

"Why don't we have a football team?" one faculty member asked. She added that she raised the question herself because she knew the topic was sure to be come up.

Werner said there are many reasons why there is no Cougars football team.

Nothing sweet about diabetes

BY DAVID TATUM
NEWS STRINGER

The American Diabetes Association will hold two events at SIUE in November to raise awareness of diabetes.

The ADA is an organization that funds research and provides education and other services to people who have diabetes or whose lives are affected by it. The ADA's mission is to prevent and cure diabetes and improve the lives of all people affected by that disease.

The ADA has designated November American Diabetes Month, and the Madison County chapter will mark the month with two campus events.

The first is from noon to 1 p.m. Wednesday at the University Center between Union Station and the Office of Information. Representatives of the ADA will explain its new fund-raising marathon, set to take place in Maui, Hawaii, in March.

Dental School ready to bite the apple

BY TAMARA KANO
NEWS STRINGER

The Committee of Accreditation is visiting the SIU School of Dental Medicine in Alton this week.

The American Dental Association Commission on Dental Accreditation accredits all dental schools, dental hygienist programs and dental technology programs. Although it is a voluntary process, all schools in the country participate because dental schools have to be accredited for their graduates to receive a license.

Accreditation happens every seven years, and preparation for it takes two years. The committee hands out a set of required standards that the school needs to meet. These standards vary from very simple issues, such as having a mission statement and a four-year program, to more complex ones, such as instilling in graduates competence in treating patients.

Native American culture coming to SIUE

BY VICKI BENNINGTON
FOR THE ALESTLE

To commemorate November as American Indian Heritage month, Johnny Moses of the Nootka and Tulalip nations will bring the fun and philosophy of the Northwest coast to the SIUE Religious Center Friday and Saturday.

Moses will arrive in Edwardsville Thursday and give a presentation at LeClaire Elementary School. At 8 p.m. Thursday, he will be in the East Room of the St. Louis County Library, 1640 S. Lindbergh Blvd., to present "Northwest Coast Stories, Songs and Teachings of the Fall Season."

These teachings are a part of the Northwest's philosophical tradition.

Two events will be held at the SIUE Religious Center. From noon to 1:15 p.m. Friday, Moses will present "Spirit and Soul in Native Northwest Coast Philosophy," sponsored by the SIUE Philosophy Society. There will be a celebration from 1 to 9 p.m. Saturday entitled "A Gathering in the Si-Si-Wiss (Sacred Breath) Tradition of the Pacific Northwest Coast."

This open house event will include stories, songs, dances, teachings and feasting. The public is invited to a potluck dinner that will begin at 5 p.m. Attendants should bring a dish to share and drums and rattles to participate in the singing and dancing.

Moses incorporates laughter as one of the main elements of medicine, said Professor Greg Fields of the SIUE

Department of Philosophy.

"He is known for his good sense of humor, and his stories are very entertaining as well as illuminating," he said.

Moses lives near Seattle on the Swinomish reservation but was born in the village of Ohlat on Vancouver Island, British Columbia. His grandparents, who were knowledge-keepers and healing people, raised him. Both died in the 1980s, his grandmother at the age of 113 and his grandfather at 108.

Moses received a bachelor's degree in education at the age of 18 from the University of British Columbia. His life's work concerns storytelling, preserving the Northwest coast's traditional knowledge, and teaching the native languages of the Northwest.

Wannabes dodge party labels

BY BARBARA DUMOULIN
NEWS STRINGER

Drive down the street in any city in America right now and it is no secret that an election is taking place. But there is a secret. Many political ads do not tell voters the candidates' party or even what office they are seeking.

Adeline Petrucci, a voter who has voted in every election since Franklin Delano Roosevelt first ran for president, finds the advertising very confusing.

"They don't want people to know who the person is and whether they're a Democrat or Republican," Petrucci said. "They try to confuse us. I've heard more people say that they don't know who the candidates are, or what they're running for."

Dr. Martha Bailey, assistant professor of political science at SIUE, said the lack of party affiliation is a more recent trend in campaigning.

"Party affiliation is still an important determinant for the voter, but candidate-centered campaigning is much more common now," Bailey said. "The candidates have an interest in selling themselves."

Police incidents

Ambulances calls

On Oct. 28 at 7:04 p.m., police and ambulance responded to a call from Cougar Village where a student complained of pain in her left side. The student was transported to Anderson Hospital by Edwardsville Ambulance Service.

On Oct. 29 at 12:39 a.m., police and ambulance responded to a call from Cougar Village where a student was having pains on her right side. The student was transported to Anderson Hospital by Edwardsville Ambulance Service.

Theft from motor vehicle

On Oct. 28 at 10:47 p.m., a student from Prairie Hall reported the theft of her cellular phone from the glove box of her car. The student was unable to report when or where the phone was stolen. The car shows no signs of forced entry. The phone is valued at $130.

Theft under $300

On Oct. 28 at 3:59 p.m., a student reported the theft of his bicycle from the bike rack on the south side of the Science Building. The cable and lock used to secure the bike to the rack are also missing. There are no suspects or witnesses.

Criminal defacement

On Oct. 28 at 1:09 p.m., a student reported the keying of the left side of his car while it was parked in Cougar Village Lot 5F. There are no suspects or witnesses.

Warrant arrest

On Oct. 28 at 9:10 p.m., Erika Hollinshed, 22, of Edwardsville turned herself in and was arrested on an SIUE warrant for failure to appear/driving while suspended. Hollinshed posted $150 bond and was released.

WERNER

"It takes about $500,000 a year to run a team. This would translate to higher student tuition. Also, Title Nine, a policy that the federal government passed, says that state schools have to have equal opportunity for women and men to play school sports. This means we would either have to get rid of all other men's sports or add more women's sports, and neither are options. Plus, we have learned from other universities that most students don't attend home football games," Werner said.

One student took the opportunity to voice a frustration. She said the light above her shower has been broken since she moved into Prairie Hall, the new dormitory on the SIUE campus. The student said she'd called maintenance workers many times without success.

Werner said he couldn't answer the question, but he did ask Housing Director Michael Schultz to look into the matter for her. Schultz, who attended the question-and-answer session, said he would.

Another student, armed with facts and figures about recycling, asked the chancellor if more could be done on the campus.

Werner noted that $47,000 is budgeted to expand recycling efforts in the two residence halls which house 1,000 students.

One student asked the chancellor about the recent requirement that students pay 10 cents for each copy from laser printers in computer labs.

Werner noted that once universities did not even provide computers for students. While that has certainly changed, mounting costs require computer users to share in the expense, he said.

In response to a question about allowing fast-food restaurants to set up shop near the residence halls, Werner said state law will not permit free-standing commercial establishments on the campus.

A second conversation between the chancellor and students is set for 7 p.m. Nov. 10 on the second floor of Peck Hall.

DENTAL

According to Associate Dean Anne Boyle, the process is a self-study using the set standards as a guide. "It takes two years to go through all the standards and document them in a report. After 18 months, we have to send the report to the committee. Our report was five volumes long," Dr. Doyle said.

There are 10 members on the visiting committee which will read the report and come to the school to verify it. They will spend three days on campus, interviewing faculty and students to make sure SIU meets all the criteria.

After their visit, they will tell SIU their findings, but the final results usually take about six months. If something needs to be corrected, the committee will give the school recommendations and a certain time to fix it. Having one or more recommendations does not necessarily mean that the school will lose its accreditation. In the past, there have been schools that got eight recommendations but were fully accredited. A school that receives a recommendation has to send a report to the committee every six months until the committee thinks the problem has been corrected.

The SIU School of Dental Medicine has always been fully accredited. Boyle said that people at the school are feeling very confident. "I think we are in compliance with all the standards, but we don't really know until they come. I have been visiting other schools and think that we are pretty good in comparison to them."

Tune in to campus radio survey

Student Government is conducting a radio music survey of SIUE students. In the survey, Student Government is trying to find out students' favorite and least favorite styles of music as well as student reactions to SIUE's own radio station, WSIE, 88.7 FM.

Completed surveys should be dropped off in the Student Government office on the first floor of the Morris University Center in the Kimmel Leadership Center. For more information, contact Student Government at 650-3819.

Student Government Survey

What is your least favorite style of music?

What radio stations do you listen to the most?

Did you know that SIUE has a radio station?

Have you ever listened to the SIUE station?

Do you like SIUE's radio station?

He speaks at universities, schools, libraries, museums and hospitals throughout the United States and Canada about Northwestern religion and medicine. Last year, he addressed nurses, physicians and other health professionals at Barnes Jewish Hospital.

The Northwest culture is one of many native cultures on the two American continents. The Northwest area was one of the last to be visited by Anglo, Spanish and Russian traders, invaders and missionaries. They did not begin to arrive in that area until the 19th century, and many areas were not affected by outside influences until near the 20th century, so the traditions remained intact.

For many years, Moses and his family, including his aunt, Dr.

Vi Hilbert, have worked to preserve traditional knowledge of their native languages and culture. This includes translation and recording of the coastal Salish languages and teachings of tribal elders. Hilbert has worked on this project in cooperation with the University of Washington in Seattle. She established Lushootseed Press, which publishes the texts and translations in Salish.

The event is for anyone who would like to take the challenge of raising funds and walking or running a course in Hawaii. Each participant must raise a minimum of $3,100 for round-trip air fare to Hawaii, three nights at a hotel and entry in the marathon. The marathon already has 150 entrants from around the country.

Of the funds raised for the marathon, 75 percent will go directly to support the ADA's mission.

The second event is a free program on diabetes to take place from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 14, on the second floor of the UC. The topic of the keynote address will be "Emotions Surrounding Diabetes." There will also be workshops on women's issues, impotence, children with diabetes, psychological issues, eye care and exercise. Anyone interested in learning more about diabetes is invited to attend.

Pre-registration is strongly encouraged. To register, call 277-7116, Ext. 10,11 or 14.

POLITICS

Bailey finds the trend good and bad.

"It's good because it may be the case that you want to vote for a specific person and the party is not that important," Bailey said. "But it's also bad because it takes away the party label. That party label gives you some basic ideological information that you no longer have about a candidate. By taking away the label you take away information. You have to decode things to figure them out now."

Wayne Sinnock is a volunteer campaign worker for Bob Daiber, Democratic candidate for state representative for the 110th district.

"The biggest part of it is that 60 to 75 percent of voters don't identify with the party anymore," Sinnock said. "The party identification system was done away with when they eliminated the patronage system of rewarding party workers."

Shirley Pye, campaign worker for Ron Stephens, the Republican candidate for state representative for the 110th District, echoed the thoughts of Sinnock.

"A lot of people vote for the candidate and not just the party," Pye said. "There are no dictates from party officials on what appears on ads. It varies a lot from candidate to candidate and it depends on the philosophy of the person running for office."

Another problem for voters in the bistate area is state identification. Many television and radio ads do not indicate whether the candidate is running for office in Missouri or Illinois.

Voters can check out candidates for their own area by calling the League of Women Voters at 624-5776.

Guest column

SIU should listen, work with employees

We read the editorial by Lori Browning in the Oct. 4 edition of the Belleville News-Democrat. The subject was President Sanders' fine progress in the fight to save SIU money by eliminating wasteful spending habits.

First of all, we feel such praise is warranted. The effort that Sanders put forth on this project was long overdue. However, we are wondering if it would be considered saving money if SIUE Chancellor David Werner, other top administrators and Sanders himself received hefty pay increases ($11,000 per year in the case of Werner and Sanders). And would it really be saving university money since Sanders is also receiving $14,400 per year to cover his contribution to the retirement system? Maybe so, since no one else in the system will be receiving such a perk.

Secondly, we ask the following question: Would spending thousands of dollars of state funds, which are the taxpayers' dollars, toward fighting unions on the SIUE campus be considered savings? This is in reference to SIUE's plans to appeal an Illinois Education Labor Board decision that stated SIUE violated the law by not bargaining in good faith over large parking fee increases and thereby required SIUE to provide rebates to all union members. We will be awaiting Sanders' answer to this question.

Third, we are not "after President Sanders' head." We feel that Ms. Browning insulted us, along with other hard-working union members, by quoting that our concerns were self-centered and only based on "job preservation." We, the union members, are fighting to support our families and are facing a substantial loss to part of our income. For this, Sanders would fight also. But Ms. Browning failed to further investigate and include the fact that we, the union, have requested a series of meetings with the directors of SIUE's Dining Services and the University Center. The purpose of these meetings is to discuss ways for management and labor to improve efficiency and thereby save the university money.

In conclusion, we ask that President Sanders work with the unions on campus in a spirit of cooperation, with the goal of a better SIU system for all — administration, faculty, staff, students, labor and management alike.

Letter to the Editor

Editor's columns are stereotypical

Out of all the sections in the Alestle, the one I find the most amusing is the column by Editor Danielle Belton. Unfortunately, my amusement is not positive but, in fact, quite negative. Danielle tends to write about the most pointless, stereotypical and uninteresting topics I can imagine. Throughout the last month, I have taken an interest in jotting down particular occurrences and the problems that I have had with them.

Tuesday, Oct. 6. "Tommy University." We happen to live in a capitalistic society in which producers will not produce goods that consumers are not willing and able to buy. Obviously, people are able to buy these goods, and if you cannot, why knock the ones who can?

Tuesday, Oct. 13. "Hair there, everywhere." It is understandable to want to represent the African-American students here, but since you choose to do so, please do it appropriately, responsibly and accurately. "Hair has always been a big deal in the African-American community." To my knowledge, hair has been a big deal in all communities. "With short hair, I was ordinary. Who wants to be ordinary?" I am very sorry if your hair is the only characteristic that makes you unique and if the people in your life only recognize you for your hair. "And every day I see girls with hair weaves and extensions to achieve what I was born with." Get off your high horse and realize that not all girls want to have long hair. It would also be wise to refrain from putting down girls who do wear false hair. Women have fought hard enough to gain respect intellectually. As editor in chief, perhaps less superficial and more substantial topics would be more beneficial to the image of women — especially African-American women.

Thursday, Oct. 22. "Collective Invisibility." Finally, you showed some sort of intelligence and a valid opinion, to some extent. You often speak of your generation yet only make reference to the black community. Hopefully, your world extends beyond this. Black elders are not the only adults that stereotype our generation. There is an overall lack of involvement in our generation, not just the black youth.

You represent our whole student body, yet you seem to have a fixation on focusing your topics on the interests of African-Americans. This is understandable on a small scale, but in actuality, you are doing the opposite of what I feel your objective is. By speaking and making your references only to the black community, you limit your range of topics, which to me makes you appear less intelligent and in many ways biased. I am proud to have an African-American woman editor in chief of my school paper, yet my only wish is that you become a better representative and write about more substantial and pertinent topics.

Grandma isn't the only one getting the shaft

Danielle Belton

When I watch political campaign commercials, all I ever see are older people looking back at me. Every now and then, there will be a dog or a curious 5-year-old, but no young adults or teenagers. Unlike most commercials where everyone is 23 years old, campaign ads sometimes have virtual dinosaurs preaching to the audience. Young people aren't in the ads because most college-age people are not courted by political candidates. Politicians pay more attention to what our grandmothers have to say.

Want to know why? Old people vote and young people don't.

It can be raining fire and brimstone and the elderly will be out there in the voters' booths with their walkers and umbrellas. People my age are at home sleeping off hangovers or long study nights. Most young people can barely tell you who is the governor, let alone the major issues in this upcoming election.

Young people once voted, or it appeared they did. There was quite a ruckus years ago to get the voting age lowered to 18. Yet today, I know very few 18-year-olds who practice their voting rights.

The problem isn't that there aren't issues that pertain to young people. There is an abundance of issues that affect young voters, ranging from highway expansions to tax breaks for families putting children through college. The problem is that many college-age adults do not care. Many of us are cynics who find it much easier to complain about what is going on rather than do something about it. Others just have no concern for understanding the ways of the governments that surround us. We assume that no matter what, nothing is really going to change despite who is elected or what measure is passed. Many of us don't read the paper, don't watch the news and aren't informed voters.

I believe all this can be attributed to our age.

Young people are often self-absorbed. Once you enter college, you are supposed to start to understand a bit more about the ways of the world. You are supposed to see that there are other people besides yourself who are affected by things. Therefore, an awareness of society and government is developed. The problem is that this enlightenment often doesn't develop till long after graduation. Hence there is a lack of interest in political issues among young people. Many young adults are more concerned with whether they are going to get through that next chemistry exam or whether they are going to get liquored up this weekend. Voting has no part in their self-centered worlds.

Young people are flighty. We can look like we are leaning one way, then the next minute we have completely changed our perspective. College is a time when we are searching for ourselves and our futures. You could wake up tomorrow morning a Republican and go home to bed that night a Democrat. Today you may practice Eastern Orthodox Catholicism; tomorrow you could be a Buddhist. Five minutes ago you hated green beans and macaroni; now it's the staple of your diet. It's hard for politicians to know the issues that concern young people when those issues seem to change at lightning speed.

Therefore, the politicians find it easier to ignore young people. Of course, the exact same reasons why John Shimkus, Carol Mosely-Braun and Jay Nixon ignore us are the same reasons why everyone in the commercial universe loves us. Nothing like a bunch of inconsistent, indecisive, self-absorbed young people to buy those Nikes, Revlon colors and Calvin Klein jeans. It's rather hard to sell penny-pinching grandma that $200 Tommy Hilfiger coat.

And it's kind of hard to get people like me to vote.

Please vote. Our grandparents are not the only ones out there getting the shaft.

Morning-after kit gets OK

BY PAUL HOLLOWAY
NEWS STRINGER

The Food and Drug Administration has approved the PREVEN Emergency Contraceptive Kit made by Gynetics Inc. This is the first FDA-approved product for emergency contraception that can prevent pregnancy when used up to 72 hours after sex. The PREVEN Emergency Contraceptive Kit is available by prescription from doctors and other health care professionals.

The PREVEN Emergency Contraceptive Kit pill regimen is the most widely studied and used emergency contraceptive. The regimen utilizes special doses of regular birth control pills which act before pregnancy begins and will not affect an existing pregnancy. Used correctly, the pills in the PREVEN Kit may result in only about two out of 100 women becoming pregnant.

"It is estimated that nearly 50 percent of all abortions and unintended pregnancies in this country could be avoided if women had access to emergency contraception," said Dr. Anita Nelson, associate professor in the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology at the University of California at Los Angeles.

"The availability of an effective emergency contraceptive option with a good safety profile is a major milestone in women's reproductive health. Women may want to discuss keeping the PREVEN Kit on hand with their doctors or other health care professionals in case emergency contraception becomes necessary," Nelson said.

There are more than 2.7 million unintended pregnancies per year in the United States; nearly half are due to contraceptive failure. According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, more than 11 million American women report using contraceptive methods associated with high failure rates including condoms, withdrawal, periodic abstinence and diaphragms. These facts led the FDA to request that Gynetics make an emergency contraceptive product available in the United States.

The PREVEN Kit has three steps: a step-by-step "Patient Information Book," a pregnancy test and four light-blue birth control pills. The pills in the PREVEN Kit contain progestin and estrogen.

"Taking the pregnancy test is an important step when using emergency contraceptive pills," Nelson said. "Determining that a pregnancy has not taken place from sex earlier in the month or in previous months helps ensure that the pills in the PREVEN Kit have an opportunity to work. If a woman learns she is pregnant, she should visit a doctor or other health care professional as soon as possible."

"The only definitive scientific evidence indicates that the birth control pills in the PREVEN Kit work by preventing or delaying ovulation. It has been theorized that birth control pills may also prevent fertilization of an egg if one has been released from the ovary, or that they may produce changes in the lining of the uterus that could prevent implantation of a fertilized egg," said Dr. Carolyn Westhoff, associate professor of clinical obstetrics and gynecology and public health at Columbia University. "The pills will not work if a woman is already pregnant and will not affect a pregnancy."

Emergency contraceptive pills have sometimes been referred to as "morning after" pills. This is misleading since they can, in fact, be taken up to three days after sex, not just the morning after. The pills in the PREVEN Kit work before pregnancy or conception begins and should not be confused with RU486, the "abortion pill."

FAMILY VALUES GETS VIOLENT AT THE KIEL KORN LEAVES CRAZED FANS HUNGRY FOR MORE

BY SHERI MCWHIRTER
LIFESTYLE EDITOR

The Kiel Center smoked, rocked and moshed on Oct. 23 for Korn's Family Values Tour. The marquee listed Orgy, Limp Bizkit, Ice Cube, Rammstein and Korn.

Orgy took the stage and warmed up the audience in a rather severe way. The crowd was covered in sweat halfway through their set. Orgy blended industrial sound with heavy riffs to create their unique style. They left the crowd anxious for the next band.

Limp Bizkit had the most dazzling stage entrance on the tour. When the curtain opened, a giant spaceship with a huge alien driver was crashed into the stage. The hatch opened and out walked the band. The crowd was screaming until the music started, then they were pitting. Lead singer Fred Durst couldn't contain himself to the stage during their set. He leaped off the stage into the crowd twice. First he ran around the floor, enticing everyone to "get up when I say get up." And get up they did. For the first time that evening, every visible person in the Kiel was moving and thrashing. Later, Durst pushed his way to the center of the crowd on the floor and climbed onto the shoulders of a bodyguard. From that position, Durst screamed and head-banged with the crowd while dozens of scantily-clad girls ripped their shirts from their bodies in hopes that he would touch them. After Limp Bizkit's set, the crowd was ready for more.

When the curtain opened again, a huge Ice Cube model towered over the stage. Ice Cube and Dr. Dre came out and performed for what seemed an eternity. The rap duo didn't seem to fit in with the tour at all. The crowd wasn't enthralled either.

Next up on stage was the German group, Rammstein. The lead singer for the band belted out the first song after setting himself on fire. It didn't matter that only a select, bilingual few in the audience could understand the lyrics; nobody was paying attention to that. Most people were astonished that the fire-engulfed singer wasn't writhing on the floor in agony. The show continued with almost every object on stage being torched at one point or another. Keyboards, mic stands and drumsticks all burned during the set. At one point, a flamethrower was used to create fireballs over the heads of the fans. The most astonishing stage effect was yet to come. The keyboard player scampered to the center of the stage on all fours, bent over and the lead singer used a prop to suggest sodomy. Then, the singer turned the prop on the audience and squirted water approximately 30 feet into the crowd on the floor. This scene left most people either disgusted or laughing hysterically.

Finally, the moment every soul in the Kiel had been waiting for: Korn took the stage. The crowd was on their feet and screaming at the top of their lungs. The band went into "It's On," the first song on their "Follow the Leader" album. The floor erupted into a mass of flailing bodies, thrashing each other to oblivion. The only distinguishable forms were the occasional heads, arms or legs that managed to surface from the sea of violence.

The temperature rose, as did all the smoke, to create a thick haze floating over the people as the set continued. Almost every song from "Follow the Leader" was played as well as "A.D.I.D.A.S." from the "Life is Peachy" album and "Shoots and Ladders," "Blind" and "Divine" from their self-titled album. The crowd couldn't get enough. Lead singer Jonathan Davis held the audience in a frenzied trance without directing one word to the audience. Nobody could take their eyes off him.

Korn's latest album, "Follow the Leader," reached No. 1 on the charts, where it stayed for weeks.

Suddenly, the band left the stage, everything went dark and the stage starting spinning. After rotating in a half-circle, the lights came on and Limp Bizkit shared the stage with the ever-powerful Korn. The group broke into "All in the Family," the song performed on "Follow the Leader" by both bands. Once again, the crowd went ballistic. When the song ended, both bands left the stage and the house lights came on for the first time since the show started, leaving the crazed Korn fans hungry for more.

Exercise is a breeze on the Arboretum pathways

BY MARJORIE AMIZICH
LIFESTYLE STRINGER

A jog along the new Myer Arboretum pathways, located on Southern Illinois University Edwardsville's campus, makes the ordeal of staying in shape a very pleasant one and provides a means of enjoying nature.

The trees spread their branches wide, shading the pathways. On a day of drizzling rain, their canopy protects you from getting wet. On a sunny day, the trees keep the glare out of your eyes.

The shade that protects human eyes also protects animal eyes. After meandering for awhile, you can choose one of many benches to sit on. If you are very quiet and lucky, you might feast your eyes on a deer, watch the squirrels play, spot different birds in the trees or enjoy the vibrant colors of the trees during fall.

There are a variety of things people can do.

A married couple can walk their dog.

A family can hike to a quiet spot for a picnic.

Friends can walk and talk to catch up on each others' lives.

One can take a bike ride along the bike trail.

People in love can enjoy quiet time together away from their rowdy friends.

It can be a school field trip about the study of nature.

The arboretum consists of 30 acres with a paved bike path leading to an observation bridge. Off the bridge are trails through the woods, but the main path will curve all around until you are back at the bike path.

The paved paths have the only lighting. There isn't sufficient lighting on the nature trails to jog at night. Artificial light would take away from the natural state of an arboretum, so people should do their strolling or exercising in the daytime. No one should feel unsafe, because in the event of an injury or other emergency, there are plenty of emergency phones along the paved path.

A good pair of shoes, a backpack, some water, a good set of binoculars and a walking stick provide the basics for rambling through the arboretum, but if you don't take advantage of the trails now, you'll miss the beautiful fall colors.

If you take advantage of this adventure, you will discover the wonder of nature. You'll find that the great outdoors still has lots of fresh air, so breath deeply.

Ask Alli Khat..

Alli Khat is not a licensed therapist and her advice should only be taken seriously if you are very desperate, or make numerous phone calls to psychic hot lines.

Dear Alli Khat,

The guy across the hall from me claims he only sleeps when there is a full moon. There are not that many full moons, so that means he is up wandering around, trying to find someone to bond with. He freaks me out with weird thoughts that most normal people don't think about. I'm worried he's going to do something weird. What should I do?

Cautious Neighbor

Dear Cautious Neighbor,

Get to know the guy. For real, college is all about meeting people and becoming close enough for them to give you free stuff later in life. For instance, this guy may work at Dairy Queen after he graduates and hook you up with free ice cream. Now, if it gets to the point where he is eating more of your food and using more of your toilet paper, you must draw the line. Seriously, take a piece of tape and put it in front of your door and threaten to kick his a** if he crosses over it.

Dear Alli Khat,

I sure am glad that we don't have community bathrooms in the residence halls, but I have to share mine with three other guys. We may as well have carpeting there is so much hair on the floor. I can't even answer nature's call without putting on shoes! How can we solve this extreme hair loss problem?

Wigged Out

Dear Wigged Out,

Make a deal with your roommate agreeing that you both will not allow any hair loss. By doing so, you will find the culprit by process of elimination. Once the violator is found, buy him some hairnets, and if he refuses to wear them, he will soon find those same hairs in his toothbrush.

Dear Alli Khat,

Is there such a thing as drinking too much alcohol in college? Al Koholick

Dear Al,

Well, you know you have a serious problem when you are drinking beer for breakfast instead of milk. Otherwise, if you have the money and you are keeping your grades above failing, drink all you want. You know, my friends and I had an interesting thought. Each time we go on a liquor run, we spend about $55 or $60 (there are usually about three or four of us). A keg costs $50, and that would be enough to knock us and half the people on our wing senseless. And when your parents ask you what you are learning in school, you can proudly tell them, money management and smart shopping! Won't they be so proud?!?!?

News from the foul line

By Todd Spann

Hello

Hey! The volleyball team battles Rockhurst tonight in the Vadalabene Center.

So before everybody goes out to do what they normally do on a Tuesday evening in Edwardsville, go watch the exciting Cougar volleyball team do what they do best — and that is — win.

There are not too many teams at SIUE that can win over 25 games in a single season.

And the volleyball team is knocking at the door of 30 victories. They are currently at 26 and have three regular season games and the GLVC tournament remaining.

The sports scene at SIUE could be worse. We could have to pay for admission
So just go!

NFL

Can the St. Louis Rams bore me anymore than they have?

The Bears are turning into a respectable team but are still very inconsistent.

The talent in the league seems to be with about six NFL teams and the league is already talking about the next expansion.

You know things are bad when 44-year-old Steve DeBerg had to start last week for Atlanta.

Last second goal caps Cougar comeback

BY BRETT LICATA
SPORTS WRITER

The suspense was gut-wrenching. The drama was spine-tingling. There was a bit of downtime in the middle, but the ending was unpredictable and exhilarating.

You couldn't find it at your local movie theater, but it had the makings of a Hollywood script.

After falling apart in the second period, the SIUE ice hockey team stormed back and scored the game-winning goal with five seconds left to defeat Washington University 6-5 two weekends ago.

Dan Kennedy went in on a breakaway, faked to his backhand and buried the puck past the opposing goaltender at the 19:55 mark in the third period to give the Cougars its first win of the year.

SIUE started off strong as John Steir found the net at the 7:14 mark to put the Cougars on the board.

Scott Cloin sent SIUE into the locker room up 2-0 when he scored with less than two minutes remaining in the first period.

The second period was one the Cougars would like to forget. Washington scored five unanswered goals in the period to take a 5-2 lead.

"Everyone was frustrated that we had lost the lead," defenseman Matt Foristal said. "We knew we were better than them."

The Cougars regrouped to score four goals in the third period.

Jeff Temple made it 5-3 at the 10:05 mark on a feed from Steir.

Steir was then the recipient of a pass from Greg Gannon that resulted in a goal which got the Cougars within one at 9:39 in the third.

With under five minutes remaining in regulation, Temple scored his second of the game to tie the contest 5-5.

Kennedy created the storybook ending with just five ticks left on the clock to finish off Washington.

"We came out of the locker room for the third period with a lot of emotion," Foristal said. "We showed integrity and heart after losing our focus in the second period."

Saturday, the Cougars look for revenge against Northern Illinois University.

11-4 last weekend at the U.S. Ice Sports Complex in Fairview Heights.

Bryan Raymer scored SIUE's first goal with 20 seconds left in the opening period while Cloin and Scott Stahlhut had multiple points in the game.

Goaltender Jeff Thole had the most impressive night among the Cougars, stopping 52 of the 63 shots he faced.

"We played an excellent game, but we ran into a team that has more talent," Foristal said.

In Saturday's rematch against Northern Illinois, SIUE is hoping to reduce its shots against and take more of its own.

"We need to play conservatively this weekend," Foristal said.

Ensuring the future for those who shape it.<sup>SM</sup>

*Based on a survey conducted in 1997 by an independent organization in which 98.1% of respondents expressed overall satisfaction with TIAA-CREF.

**TIAA is one of only a handful of companies that currently hold the highest marks from the nation's leading independent rating agencies for stability, sound investments, claims-paying ability, and overall financial strength: A++ (Superior), A.M. Best Co.; AAA, Duff & Phelps; Aaa, Moody's Investors Service; AAA, Standard and Poor's. TIAA's guarantees are backed by its claims-paying ability. These ratings of TIAA as an insurance company do not apply to CREF. CREF certificates and interests in the TIAA Real Estate Account are distributed by TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services. • HILLARY RODHAM CLINTON •

MAKE THE TIME TO GET A TEST THAT COULD SAVE YOUR LIFE.

Colon cancer is the second leading cancer killer and everyone aged 50 and older is at risk. More than 50,000 Americans will die from colon cancer and 131,600 new cases will be diagnosed this year.

Colon cancer is an equal opportunity disease that affects both women and men. This silent killer frequently begins without symptoms and those with a family history are at even greater risk.

Colon cancer is preventable—even curable when detected early. In fact, if cancer is found early enough, the patient has more than a 90 percent chance of survival.

Colon cancer screenings are safe and effective and are now covered by Medicare and an increasing number of other health providers. There's even a test that can be used in the privacy of your own home.

Talk to your doctor about getting tested.

Everybody loves to trash teenagers, right? Maybe they don't realize that we do care. That we can make a difference. Get involved in Crime Prevention. Clean up parks. Teach younger kids. Start a school or neighborhood watch. And help make your community safer and better for everyone. Together, we can prove them wrong by doing something right.
