Worker skirts rule, no ticket

A construction worker attempts to pass his truck off as an official company vehicle (left). A closeup of the makeshift sign (inset).

BY BRIAN WALLHEIMER
NEWS REPORTER

A construction worker in Cougar Village is bending the rules.

A truck parked in Lot 4D displayed a sign made from drywall posing as the truck's company decal. The truck had not been ticketed.

"Certainly they can't think that's official," Robert Vanzo, director of administrative services, said.

Official company trucks are allowed to park in the student lots. These trucks usually bring workers or other equipment to the site.

Parking Service Agent Supervisor Tony Langendorf said, "That's not what we consider a company truck." An official truck must have a permanent logo painted on it to park in a student lot.

Workers are supposed to park in Lot 4A and be taken to their work sites. "To park in Lot 4A, they have to have an SIUE hangtag," Langendorf said.

As of last Tuesday, the trucks that were parked illegally in student lots were ticketed and have since moved out of the student lots.

Student vehicles have always been ticketed, but construction workers have been given slack on their designated parking location. PSAs are responsible for ticketing illegally parked vehicles all over campus.

PSAs also give assistance to students by jump-starting vehicles when needed. Langendorf said the PSAs use university vehicles to drive to the lots and ticket vehicles.

One PSA who refused to give his name said that it is difficult to make sure they get all illegally parked vehicles. "I'd like to see one of you guys go out with me from 4 p.m. to midnight in the freezing cold. Then you'd know what the Cougar Village parking problem is," he said.

Both Vanzo and Langendorf assured the Alestle that the vehicle displaying the drywall would be ticketed.

International students face new fee to track education

BY ANTHONY WATT
NEWS REPORTER

The U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service is proposing additional fees for international students.

"When Congress passed its immigration reform act a couple of years ago," Antoinette Liston, the student adviser of International Student Services said, "they (Congress) directed that Immigration should implement a program whereby international students would register every time they entered a university or entered a new degree program. They (INS) were authorized to initiate a fee for students to help fund the new tracking system."

The proposed system, the Coordinated Interagency Partnership Regulating

International Students, would charge a $95 fee when international students enroll in school, choose a new major, transfer to a different school, decide to double major or if the date of an international student's graduation changes.

Fees would be collected by the universities and other institutions the international students attend.

"I am not an INS officer," Liston said. "I am an adviser to international students at this university. While I will do my best to comply with federal laws, I am opposed to being forced into the roll of federal policeman."

The fees collected would fund CIPRIS including the funds needed to set up the main program, support programs and paying the staff.

"The INS has been running a pilot program in 25 or 30 academic institutions in the East for about two years," Liston said. "They came up with regulations for this program. When these regulations came out, they were much more inclusive than what Congress originally passed."

According to a CIPRIS fact sheet prepared by Catheryn Cotton, director of the International Office of Duke University and Medical Center, the system would be computerized using an Internet-based processing approach. It will use electronic data transfer to maintain accurate files on international students and exchange visitors.

CIPRIS would affect students classified as F-1, J-1 or M-1 nonimmigrants by the INS. F-1 students are foreign nationals enrolled as students in INS-approved academic institutions. see IMMIGRATION, page 4

Students express UC cares

BY MAUREEN HAGRMAN
NEWS STRINGER

The meetings to learn about and discuss the proposed Morris University Center renovations have begun, and students are quite interested in the proposal.

The town hall sessions began last week, and this was the first time students could express their feelings, concerns and enthusiasm about the MUC renovations.

At the first meeting Wednesday, in Center Court of the MUC, student senate officers, University Center Board members and university employees volunteered to conduct surveys, answer questions and gather students' thoughts on the renovations. The meeting offered one-on-one contact for students to learn about the renovations and the fee increase. Students also had the opportunity to voice any concerns.

According to Jason Holzum, a student senator who is helping conduct the meetings, the response and turnout from the student body was positive. He said that even though the meeting was in the dining area of the MUC where students are usually busy, they still noticed what was happening and stopped to get information.

Holzum also said the students were happy to hear that the renovation fee had decreased.

"Students are realizing the increase in student fees, but also what they are getting out of it. They are happy to hear that it will only be a $45 increase, instead of the original $112," he said.

Jeanne Simon, wife of former senator dies

MAKANDA (AP) - Jeanne Hurley Simon, the wife of former U.S. Sen. Paul Simon, died at home Sunday morning. She was 77.

Although best known as the wife of a respected former senator and presidential candidate, Simon carved out her own career in the public eye, lobbying on behalf of educational and library issues. Before marrying Paul Simon, she served as an assistant Cook County state's attorney and a state representative from the area around Wilmette.

Simon had undergone surgery for a malignant brain tumor Sept. 9 in Houston. At the time, surgeons said the tumor was successfully extracted but said her long-term prognosis was unclear.

Mike Lawrence, associate director of the former senator's Public Policy Institute at SIUC, said Sunday that Simon died as a result of her illness.

Simon graduated from Barat College in Lake Forest and Northwestern University Law School. In the mid-1950s, she became president of the Women's Bar Association of Illinois.

Simon was one of the state's only female representatives in 1956 when she met Paul Simon, a fellow lawmaker, at the Illinois Capitol. She left the Illinois House in 1960 after two terms to marry.

Head of SIUE childhood center steps down

BY KAYCI COMBS
NEWS STRINGER

S. LaVernn Wilson, director of the SIUE Early Childhood Center since 1971, plans her retirement while reflecting on a satisfying career.

Wilson began her career in child-care when she taught at public school and was involved with the Headstart program.

When the chance came to be a part of the center, Wilson jumped at the opportunity. "I love to work with preschoolers," she said.

Since beginning her job, Wilson said she has been in charge of many projects. One major achievement she is proud of is helping to obtain the current child-care facility.

Wilson was also in charge of annual child-care programs like the preschool olympics, featuring noncompetitive games for children to play, and the annual "Vehicle Day," which brings in different types of vehicles, such as fire trucks, farm equipment and classic cars, from the area for the children to see.

Through these programs and other activities, Wilson said she has had a great opportunity to work with and help many children and their families. "It's good to know you're providing a service that is benefiting families."

Wilson's post-retirement plans include teaching college courses and working with the Edwardsville children's museum. She said she will also devote time to her various crafts and projects.

Wilson's position will be filled by Stephanie Henschen until a full-time director can be found.

A cake and punch social to celebrate Wilson's retirement is planned from 4 to 6 p.m. Friday at the Early Childhood Center.

A scholarship is also being set up in her honor. The S. LaVernn Wilson Scholarship will be established to provide financial support for families in need of quality child-care.

Board ready to give money to student groups

BY BRIAN WALLHEIMER
NEWS REPORTER

The finance board started the allocation process for student organizations Friday.

The board went through the allocation requests of recognized student organization to decide how much to give each organization. Finance Board Chair Phil Gersman is hoping to cut some of the unnecessary funding to organizations and put it back into travel and program funds.

The board also passed three $425 travel requests for: Omnicron Delta Epsilon for the Midwest Economic Conference, the Recreational Sports Advisory Council for the 51st NIRSA Annual Conference and Exposition, the Sociology Club for the Midwest Sociological Society Convention and the National Art Education Association for the NAEA 2000 Los Angeles Convention.

A program request for $2,432 was passed for the Wagner Potter Association for the W.P.A. Annual Ceramics Workshop.

The next finance board meeting is scheduled for 2:30 p.m. March 3 in the International Room of the Morris University Center.

Letters to the Editor

NEW DUTY FOR PSAS

Dear Alestle editor,

I am a nature lover, and I dearly enjoy seeing all the wildlife that our campus has to offer. I especially like watching the geese. If you haven't seen them when they cross the road, I should tell you that it is really neat. They are quite tame and I think that it is pretty cool to be able to get so close to what is usually an unapproachable animal.

The geese are also overly regular. I think you know what I mean. It seems like everywhere you look you see curious little goose droppings with earthy green overtones and ashen-white tips — why are the tips white anyway?

Don't get me wrong, when I am walking alone to class I don't mind the poop. Sometimes I welcome the challenge of dodging goose excrement. I make a game of it, like hopscotch or something. I know that my footwork and agility must be improving because I can now avoid an incident every time I encounter a minefield of feces.

However, problems occur whenever I am walking with a friend. I tend to pay more attention to the friend and less to where I am walking. Before I know it my foot will find a nice fresh turd that I won't notice until a funky smell rises in my car.

I am not one to complain about minor nuisances, but something needs to be done about the goose droppings. I suggest a designated pooper-scooper crew with the sole purpose of keeping the blacktop walkway free of feces. If you want to walk through the grass, then you are taking matters into your hands. But I think our sidewalks should be clean.

I like watching the geese. I would not suggest getting rid of them, but I have definitely had enough of their crap. Have a nice day, and watch your step.

WHERE'S THE AT, AT?

Dear Alestle editor,

Regarding the Feb. 1, article "'At' no loss to the university," I don't think that one needs to be an English professor to be bothered by the disappearance of the "at" in our campus name. The removal of the preposition has always struck me as bad — or at least sloppy — grammar.

My understanding is that the official name of this university is now "Southern Illinois University" — no "Edwardsville," no "at" — and this is reflected in our new logo. The correct and traditional way

The solution to Internet problems is in your hands

(U-WIRE) IOWA CITY, Iowa — After riding high on the much-hyped e-commerce bandwagon for the past 12 months, drivers on the information superhighway hit a major speed bump.

In the past two weeks many major Web sites, including Yahoo and eBay, crashed when they were overloaded with electronic instructions from a small group of Internet pranksters. This development, along with increased attention being directed to Internet fraud and "cyberporn," has many calling for increased government intervention in Internet activities.

Increased government intervention, though, is hardly a sufficient substitute for what is really needed: increased public awareness and personal responsibility for one's Internet communications.

The American public is not as Internet-savvy as it pretends to be. The public can point and click with the best of them, but blind faith in the Information Age is, for the most part, willful ignorance of the Internet's current inability to support the load of e-traffic placed on it by increased communication and commerce.

This is best illustrated by the wide use of the word "hackers" to describe the perpetrators of these recent incidents involving Yahoo and eBay. A "hacker" is someone who infiltrates computer networks to cause damage to electronic infrastructure.

What happened to eBay and Yahoo, though, was nothing more than information overload. The sites were flooded with document requests until the servers couldn't handle them anymore — the same thing that happens to Web sites daily when Internet traffic can't be handled.

Whether the federal government admits it or not, the Internet is a global medium. An e-mail sent "across the street" can, in many cases, travel around the globe before it reaches its destination. With electronic communication crossing borders millions of times each day, much of it between people who never set foot in the United States, the U.S. government is hardly the proper source of regulation.

Who, then, will protect Americans? The answer is simple: Americans. Commercial software is available to protect Web servers from overloading. NetNanny can keep pornography of identifying the campus is to put some sort of word or punctuation between the university name and the town; this could be an "at," a comma, a dash or a line break — as with a postal address. This should not be a matter of legislation but just a matter of proper writing style.

HOW MANY TIMES MUST I SAY

With all due respect to those involved in the planning, will we really improve our public image by promoting a campus designation which is grammatically questionable or avant-garde? And, does omitting the "at" really make for a cleaner format? "Southern Illinois University Edwardsville" seems like a mouthful of long words in succession, and I think the "at" helps to break it up a little.

away from children. Encryption software can keep strangers from reading private e-mail. In fact, commercial software packages are available for individuals to use to protect themselves in almost any scenario, when and if they want to be protected.

At a Federal Trade Commission press conference Monday, a reporter asked one of the panelists how the commission intends to enforce U.S. Internet laws on alleged perpetrators outside of U.S. jurisdiction. She didn't have a good answer.

That's no surprise, because there aren't any good answers. If the public wants protection from Internet troublemakers, it can't look to Big Brother or Uncle Sam anymore. This battle will be won or lost based on personal awareness and responsibility. The tools are available — now it's up to individuals to do the rest for themselves.

MORE PARKING PROBLEMS

About the decision to allow parking fees to be negotiable: The university is trying to stall professional and technical staff contract negotiations. The IENEA got a favorable ruling on the parking fee issue and now the administration is trying to ignore the court decision and punish people on campus who are trying to get the parking fees negotiated. I think you should do a story on that.

IMMIGRATION

J-1 nonimmigrants are participants in exchange visitor programs. M-1 students are foreign nationals enrolled in vocational or nonacademic institutions.

Members of SIUE's international community set up a booth in the Goshen Lounge last week, asking people to sign a petition protesting the proposed fees. They acquired approximately 800 signatures. They are sending the petition to Washington, D.C.

"I think the American government is trying to discourage students from studying in the United States," said Mark Karsch, an SIUE student from the Netherlands. "For the European students, you can say the government is downgrading their education. They (students) will be less eager to study in America, which will make it harder for American students to study abroad. It goes both ways."

Liston sent a letter on Jan. 25 protesting the proposed regulations.

She stated in the letter that the proposed regulations in their current form were flawed. They would place a major financial burden on universities and turn international student advisers into INS agents.

MUC

Freshman Justin Walker said he felt the fee increase is fair, even though many that have to pay will graduate before the renovations are completed.

"We didn't pay for a lot of stuff here now, so if we contribute to students in the future having a better atmosphere, then so be it," Walker said.

Walker also said that after learning about the upcoming renovations, he thinks students are getting a lot for their money, and they should learn about the renovations before complaining about the fee increase.

Walker said the supporters of the project gave students ample opportunities to learn about the renovation and the meetings.

"They did a good job," he said. "They sent flyers to houses. It was then the student's decision whether to read it or not."

Christina Flannery, a sophomore, supports the renovations and is not worried about the fee increase.

"I think it's a good idea," she said. "The fee increase is fine with me because it is going to good use. The money has to come from somewhere. Alumni have opportunities to use everything here on campus, too."

But not all students attending the meeting were so enthusiastic about the renovations.

Sophomore Kathleen McBride said that her money should go to academic improvements, such as purchasing new books or improving academic buildings.

"The school can take my money and put it somewhere better than this place. This is fine," McBride said.

McBride said that the school is constantly rebuilding the MUC and making it bigger and better when she thinks other buildings on campus are in need of renovations.

"The library needs a new roof. The roof is caving in on the third floor, ruining books, and they're putting my money into here (the MUC)," McBride said.

Other students attending the meeting had mixed feelings about the issue. Anthony Barbata, a sophomore, was against the renovations at first, but once he actually looked and saw what the renovations included, he said they would be nice improvements to the MUC.

And freshman Ray Welsch said the improvements would "make it a lot better atmosphere, but the school should worry about improving the food quality" before such elaborate renovations as a center stage and a cyber cafe.

Overall, the informational meetings had a large response, with both positive and negative feelings about the project, and supporters of the renovation are pleased with the students' ideas and feedback.

Vice Chancellor of Student Affairs Narbeth Emmanuel said, "Most students seemed enthusiastic and so are we."

The town hall meetings continue this week. A meeting will be held from 5 to 6:30 p.m. Tuesday in Center Court, with a final meeting at 11:30 a.m. Thursday in the Goshen Lounge in the MUC.

The renovations will be proposed to the student senate on Friday and then the proposal will go to the SIUE administration and the SIU board of trustees in April for final approval.

Patience is the key... and I lost my keys.

BY TOBIE
DEPAUW
LIFESTYLES
EDITOR

Roommates.
Can't live with
'em, can't...
Wait, living with them is what they're for.

Living in an apartment with three other people is always a learning experience. Whether it's the careful deliberation to find out who stole your last Dr. Thunder or the mental review to discover who didn't replace the empty toilet-paper roll, coping with the slightest nuances of conflict is always a test.

Last semester, like so many other unfortunate students, I was blessed with the opportunity to be screwed by University Housing. My roommates and I found out — by word of mouth, mind you — that we were not getting a renovated apartment. Instead, we were being placed in a dirty box in family housing on the 400 side of Cougar Village.

If it weren't for my trusty local sources, I would have left home in Chicago thinking I was on my way to my newly renovated 500-side apartment. What a surprise that would have been.

But I am not here to quibble about Housing. That's been done to death. I am here to talk about roommates. The reason I sadly recall last semester's housing difficulties is because, throughout all the horror, I did come out with one bonus. The apartment in family housing had three bedrooms — and there was no way I was going to pay extra for someone else's mistake — so I got my own room for no extra fee. Oh, how I was spoiled.

My roommate and I don't have a problem living with each other. Sure, we have our differences, but they only lead to rather interesting forms of expression that we couldn't do without. But having our own rooms for all that time made us more unwilling to compromise when it came time this semester to live in the same room again. So it's been an interesting semester.

This weekend was the first of its kind. I have one roommate who goes home every weekend, one who never goes home and one who is so busy, it sometimes seems like he went home. Well, this weekend they all went somewhere and the place was mine alone. It was as if I forgot how to function when there was no one to joke around with in the next room. It was weird to wake up on my own and not by one of many regular causes. But it was also boring to come home totally awake with no one there to shoot the bull. There's nothing like a pal to waste time with; that's priceless.

Or so I thought before they returned.

First, I noticed the dirt left on the freshly vacuumed carpet. But then I felt like my mother, so that thought was quickly dismissed. And after that, the situation looked fine — for awhile.

Until I tried to sleep.

If you've never had a roommate who snores, it may be your loss. It is a true test of your patience. I have a roommate who snores, and the worst part is that he doesn't know it. Some people who snore the way he does often wake themselves up, but not him.

I should have tried to go to sleep earlier to get a head start, but I didn't. He had a long trip that weekend, so he fell into a deep slumber before I even closed my eyes. And that's when it started.

You can hear it build up; that's the worst part. It starts with this nasal clicking, then evolves into a sinus roar. It's like sandpaper on your mind.

I tried everything — earplugs, headphones, sandwiching my head in pillows, etc. I even tried to out-snore him, to no avail. I thought if I could roar a bit louder, he would wake and ... well, I don't really know why I tried that. I was really tired. I searched around at arm's length to find a safe object to hurl at his face, but I found nothing that wouldn't have caused excessive damage. I considered it even so, but I wished no harm to my friend, yet.

I did what any reasonable person would do: I yelled at him. "Hey! Turn over!" I said. It took a few tries, but he groaned to let me know he heard me. "I'm not snoring," he mumbled. "I'm tired."

It really sucks that I had to wake him up, but I had to do what I could and I knew he would fall asleep quickly. And he did.

But he didn't turn over and that clicking sound started again. I wouldn't have it. I yelled again and made sure he turned over. I don't know why I thought turning over would help. He's not a potato, but it just made sense. He grudgingly turned over, muttering some incoherent insult on the way.

But, no, the snoring would not cease. I was going mad. And if that wasn't enough, our toilet runs for an hour after every flush, so that steady whine drilled into my ears like a distant banshee. I was growing closer to the point-of-no-return. That's the point where you surrender to consciousness and give up trying to sleep.

I relocated to the couch and accepted my fate. I was doomed to fall asleep to the droning effects of an info-commercial for the "Revolutionary Roto-Tool." What an amazing tool. I was actually considering buying it. Those capitalistic jerks are taking advantage of sad, sleepless citizens everywhere.

Soon enough I was disgusted by where the night had taken me, and I fell asleep to the sweet hum of the refrigerator.

My other roommate decided to wake up extra early to make my life suck, I guess. No, he had no idea I was sleeping there, but he had cartoons to watch, so I retreated to my bed again. That one last hour of sleep in my bed felt longer than the whole night on the couch, but it wasn't pleasant to hear my alarm sound. I hit the snooze button seven times. I considered how much it sucked for my roommate to have to hear it go off so many times, but he snores, and I can't just push a button to turn that off, so oh well.

So my point is this. I do have a point, but I am just too tired to make it, so practice critical thinking and find one yourself. Everything is a test of patience. Even this article.

Josh Wink: The mix makes the man

BY MATT ADAMS
LIFESTYLE STRINGER

Josh Wink is an American artist who has a taste for international sounds.

"Profound Sounds Volume 1" showcases American and European disc jockeys whose tracks are mixed into a seamless whole by Wink.

The featured artists come from different areas of electronic music, comprising house, techno, trance and sub-genres of each.

Most electronic music has roots in its simplest form - house. This style of music consists of playing songs over a beat produced by a drum machine.

House is said to have begun in the early '80s in Chicago. The term "house" refers to warehouse parties where the style was born.

Techno and trance are basically derivatives of house music. Techno refers to mixing rhythmic samples with aggressive beats and deep bass lines.

Trance emphasizes repetitive synthesized lines mixed with subtle rhythmic changes which can put the listener in a trance.

The idea quickly spread to Europe. Europeans embraced the new art form and, in time, expanded it into a network of genres and sub-genres. The art form continued to grow in the United States but saw less commercial success here. A number of American artists started recording with European companies because, until recent years, the style was being pushed underground in the United States.

The fact that there is no language barrier makes electronic music easy to "import." The great thing about this type of music is anyone can understand it. There really are no lyrics to try to translate. The meaning is in the style and the sound, not in the words.

Wink's style was accepted at home and abroad. He started as a disc jockey at 13 years old in Philadelphia, playing at parties and clubs in the area. It was during this time he met fellow DJ King Britt. The duo exploded on the international club/rave scene in the early '90s and together formed Ovum Recordings in 1994.

"We want to build an art Mecca," Wink said, referring to Ovum Recordings. "Our goal is to use music as a stepping stone to change society." In 1997, Wink signed Ovum Recordings to a distribution deal with Columbia Records.

Wink began making music by mixing tapes in his bedroom. He would put music from different genres together to form a unique, flowing sound. A simple idea grew into a career in the music industry.

Wink returns to this simple idea with "Profound Sounds." Instead of mixing a tape, he mixed an album, still from his bedroom, but now he has a studio there. Wink brings together artists from around the world to produce a mix full of energy. Also, he has one original track on this album.

Wink uses about four minutes from each artist and each is identified under the song's title.

"Now, legal mixed tapes and compact discs have become an important part of the music scene, enjoying significant commercial success while making sure that artists, labels and publishers are getting what they deserve," Wink said. He doesn't use samples. He uses the whole song.

These tracks were not chosen at random either. Specific tracks, when played together, create an individual expression by Wink. Each track flows into the next, making it seem like one piece. In short, he brings 14 eclectic sounds together to form a whole.

Not only does the audience feel the expression of the DJ, but they feel each individual artist. It's kind of like getting a two-for-one deal. In this case, you get 14 individual tracks and when combined you get an overall expression from Wink.

Wink has released recordings under other names, such as Winx and Size 9. His entire list of remixes would take up several pages.

Fortunately, he has released several full-length albums on assorted labels, most of which can be found in local record stores, including "Profound Sounds Volume 1."

"Profound Sounds Volume 1" is a good choice for long-time fans, as well as newcomers to electronic music. The number and diversity of the featured artists offers an introductory taste into the international electronic scene.

Lady Cougars survive rough roads

SIUE women's basketball team finishes five-game road trip with 3-2 record

BY TONY AMMANN
SPORTS EDITOR

Three out of five ain't bad. The SIUE women's basketball team won two of three road games last week to close out a successful five-game road trip.

The Lady Cougars went into Louisville, Ky., Thursday with a 2-1 record on their big road swing, hoping to improve that record to 3-1.

SIUE (11-5) went into action one game ahead of the Lady Knights (10-6) in the Great Lakes Valley Conference and led 35-34 at the half.

The Lady Knights rose to the occasion in the second half and won the game 68-63, moving into a tie with SIUE for second place in the conference.

Bellarmine defeated the Lady Cougars despite being out-rebounded 39-38. SIUE also shot a perfect 13-for-13 from the free-throw line but were only able to manage eight assists as a team the entire game.

SIUE head coach Wendy Hedberg expected nothing less out of Bellarmine, the team she picked to win the conference before the season started.

"It was our typical close game with them," Hedberg said. "It's a tough place to play."

SIUE loses fifth straight game

The state of Kentucky has not been kind to the SIUE men's basketball team this season.

The Cougars lost both Great Lakes Valley Conference games in Kentucky this weekend. Thursday night's matchup was against Bellarmine College in Louisville, Ky.

SIUE lost 91-85 in overtime to the Knights in a game that was huge for both teams.

"It was probably the biggest game of the year for us," head coach Jack Margenthaler said.

The Cougars trailed Bellarmine by one game for eighth and final position in the GLVC tournament going into Thursday's game.

The Knights committed just seven turnovers in the entire game, while the Cougars committed 13, which was their

The Lady Knights improved to 10-2 at home this season and upped that mark to 11-2 with a win against the University of Southern Indiana Saturday. Only Northern Kentucky University (13-1) boasts a better home record in the GLVC.

Guard Rachel Young led Bellarmine with 19 points and added two assists and two steals. Young is tied for fourth in the conference in assists, averaging 4.21 per game. She is also tied for sixth in the GLVC in steals per game with 1.79.

Betsy Young, Bellarmine's other starting guard, chipped in with nine points, four assists and two steals. Betsy and Rachel Young rank 14th and 15th in the conference in scoring respectively, averaging 13.3 points per game.

"Both their guards are very good," Hedberg said. "If they are both on, you're in trouble."

Forward Stephanie Hutchcraft had a solid game against the Lady Cougars with 16 points. Hutchcraft went 8-for-8 from the free-throw line and pulled down eight rebounds.

"They are a very good team," Hedberg said. "They are very well-balanced and have a good inside game in Hutchcraft."

Johnson is making the most of starting chance

BY TONY AMMANN

What a difference a year makes.

One year ago, SIUE forward Jill Johnson started just two games her freshman season and averaged just 2.7 points per game. Despite playing an average of just 13.4 minutes per game, she pulled down an average of 13.5 rebounds.

The high rebound total was something Johnson was used to. While playing at Highland High School, Johnson set a Bulldog record for rebounds in a game with 21 and was named Female Athlete of the Year her senior year.

What the 5-foot-10 sophomore wasn't used to was sitting on the bench, and she wasn't about to stay there any longer.

According to SIUE head coach Wendy Hedberg, Johnson spent endless hours in the weight room during the summer hoping to get that chance to play every day again. It seemed unlikely that the three-sport athlete in high school would settle for a backup spot on the roster in any sport.

Although Johnson began the 1999-2000 season as a reserve player once again, she made her first start of the season just five games into the year. In a 77-62 win over St. Joseph's College Dec. 2, she played just eight minutes and missed her only field goal attempt.

Johnson got another chance Jan. 13 and scored seven points in a 66-64 SIUE win over the University of Wisconsin-Parkside. The Lady Cougars went on to win their next four games with Johnson as the starting forward. Johnson has started in every game since then and ranks third on the team in rebounds, averaging 5.9 boards per game.

"I've really been working hard," Johnson said. "Lately I've been concentrating on getting rebounds because I know that's my strength and it's what my team needs."

Since Hedberg put Johnson into the regular starting five, the Lady Cougars have gone 10-3 and are in a four-way tie for second place in the Great Lakes Valley Conference.

Johnson has been the Lady Cougars' leading rebounder in five games this season. She is averaging 4.5 points per game and averaged eight points per contest in a recent five-game stretch.

second-lowest total of the season.

Jared McCurry led the scoring for the Knights with 21 points on 7-11 shooting from the field. Brad Bixler scored 18 points, hitting four of eight three-pointers in the contest.

Bellarmine led by seven at the half, but SIUE shot 56 percent from the field in the second half to come back and take a three-point lead late in the game.

With 2.8 seconds left in regulation, Bixler hit a three-pointer to send the game into overtime.

In overtime, the Knights pulled away from SIUE and eventually won the game by six.

Ryan Sexson scored 23 points to lead the Cougars, shooting 8-for-15 from the floor.

"Ryan had a good individual weekend," Margenthaler said. "I saw more emotion out of him."

Travis Wallbaum scored 11 points for the Cougars, but more importantly, he notched his 1,000th point at SIUE.

With the loss, the Cougars dropped to 5-12 in the GLVC and made 9-14 overall.

It was "Senior Night" at the Owensboro Sportscenter, and Wesleyan was looking for blood after losing Thursday to the University of Southern Indiana, breaking a 58-game home winning streak.

"We knew they were going to come out with a lot of energy," Margenthaler said.

The Panthers jumped all over SIUE to start the game leading by 13 at the half.

"They just blew us out in the first five minutes," Margenthaler said.

SIUE started slowly in the second half as well, trailing by as many as 30 before fighting back to within 10 and eventually losing by 12.

Bellarmino center Lori Ann Gonzalez completed her second double-double of the year, scoring 10 points and pulling down a team-high 10 rebounds.

SIUE guard Misi Clark led all scorers with 26 points, going 9-for-17 from the field and hitting a career-high six three-point baskets. Forward Crystal Gladson came off the bench and pulled down a team-high nine rebounds.

The Lady Cougars were faced with a buzzing crowd in Owensboro, Ky., Saturday looking to bounce back against Kentucky Wesleyan College.

Around 500 people packed the gym to root the Panthers (8-9) to victory and back into contention for the eighth and final spot for the GLVC Tournament.

The Lady Cougars had other ideas, hoping to end their five-game road trip with a 3-2 record. SIUE sent the large Panther crowd home unhappy and defeated Kentucky Wesleyan 56-54.

Hedberg said she thought her team won a game that the Panthers needed with time running out before the conference tournament begins.

"At this time of year, you have to step up and be ready," Hedberg said. "We were fortunate to get out of there with a win."

The Lady Cougars were out-rebounded 40-36 and went a woeful 0-for-7 from the three-point arc but were able to pull out the win. Clark led all scorers once again with 20 points.

SIUE wasn't the only team that had trouble from the three-point arc. The Panthers went just

"When I get a chance to score I take it," Johnson said. "I just want our team to do well and help out the team as much as possible."

Johnson recorded the first double-double of her collegiate career Feb. 3 when she scored 13 points and grabbed 12 rebounds in an 83-58 trouncing of Indiana University-Purdue University at Fort Wayne. She leads the Lady Cougars in offense rebounds with 66.

The Lady Cougars have been 4-for-19 from the arc, including a 1-for-9 output in the second half. The Lady Cougars lead the GLVC in three-point field goal defense, holding opponents to just 29.7 percent this season.

"A lot of the teams shoot it pretty well," Hedberg said. "We know these teams inside and out. We know who the good shooters are and who to stay close to."

SIUE center Sarah Cook was the other double-digit scorer for the Lady Cougars with 10 points and six rebounds. Forward Jill Johnson led the team with seven rebounds.

The Lady Cougars will face regular season champion Northern Kentucky at the Vadalabene Center Thursday in SIUE's final "Pack the Gym" night of the season.

Hedberg thinks "Pack the Gym" could be a critical factor in the outcome of Thursday's showdown with the defending conference champions.

"Hopefully we can get a good crowd," Hedberg said. "Pack the Gym" has been good for the men's game, but I'd like to see the fans come out early and realize the importance of the game. You're going to see good basketball."

The game against the Norse begins at 5:30 p.m. The Lady Cougars will finish the regular season schedule with a 5:30 p.m. tipoff against the University of Indianapolis Saturday at home.

as hot as any team in the GLVC of late, winning 10 of their last 13 games. SIUE is five games behind Northern Kentucky University with two games remaining on the regular season schedule. The Norse have wrapped up the conference title by leading all second-place teams by five games.

The Lady Cougars came close to defeating the Norse last month but fell 59-56 to the defending conference champions at the Vadalabene Center. The Norse boast a 16-1 record in the GLVC, beating opponents by an average of 18.8 points per game.

Johnson still remembers the tough loss her team suffered against the Norse and hopes she can help the team get revenge when NKU visits the Vadalabene Center this week. She also realizes that the Lady Cougars have a strong possibility of facing the Norse once again when the GLVC tournament rolls around.

"We want them to worry a lot," Johnson said. "We want them to know that we're going to put up a good fight. It was a really tough loss to them and I'm glad we're playing as good as they are or even better."

SIUE is in a four-way tie for second place in the conference with Bellarmine College, the University of Missouri-St. Louis and Lewis University.

The Lady Cougars will rematch with the Norse in a 5:30 p.m. tipoff Thursday. The game will also be SIUE's final "Pack the Gym" night of the season.

Anwar Perry led a balanced Wesleyan attack with 15 points and handing out six assists.

Dion Perkins, Wallbaum and Sexson each scored 11 to lead SIUE, while Marty Perry, Antonio McKinzie and Ty Moss scored nine.

With the win, Wesleyan head coach Ray Harper set a new National Collegiate Athletic Association record in his first four seasons with 108. The Panthers have lost just 15 times in those four seasons and were national champions last season.

The Cougars fell to 5-13 in the GLVC, two games behind Indiana University-Purdue University at Fort Wayne for eighth place in the conference.

The Cougars face second-place Northern Kentucky University Thursday and third-place Indianapolis University Saturday. Both games will be played at 7:30 p.m. in the Vadalabene Center.
