Cougar Village is short on furniture

BY ANDREW LEHMAN
NEWS EDITOR

Residents in Cougar Village have one more hurdle to overcome this semester.

During the 1999-2000 school year, residents were asked to cope with renovations to their apartments. Though the renovations are complete, some residents have yet to receive their replacement furniture.

"Why should we pay full price to live here when housing isn't satisfying the contract?" resident Mike Kocis asked. "That's a lot of money to stay in an unfurnished apartment."

University Housing Director Michael Schultz, who was recently named Foundation of Excellence Honoree due to his dedication to residence halls, apartments, facilities, programs and students, said the problem should be taken care of by the end of the week. Schultz was nominated for the award by Lee Thompson of Southwest Contract, a supplier of residence hall furniture and apartment furnishings.

"There are 31 apartments with no kitchen tables and there are a few more without end tables," Schultz said. "By Friday everything should be taken care of."

Thirty-five kitchen tables were delivered to Cougar Village on Wednesday and Schultz said all the tables were in place as of 3 p.m.

Schultz also said the end tables and dressers should arrive Friday at 8 a.m. and be in place by that afternoon.

"We pay for a renovated apartment. I want renovated stuff," Kocis said. "I think we deserve a refund or at least credit on our accounts."

By Wednesday, Kocis and his roommates had purchased their own couch and chairs but were still eating meals on a card table.

"The influx of new students forced us to move single students into different apartments," Schultz said. "The overload caused delays in moving in new furniture."

Schultz also said the completion of renovations caused confusion with the furniture. Robert Legate, supervisor of University Housing Facilities Management, confirmed that the problem will be remedied shortly.

Skywalk Food Court makes debut

Newest SIUE eatery offers students great convenience, great food

BY MAUREEN HAGRMAN
NEWS STRINGER

Students and faculty alike turned up for the grand opening of the Skywalk Food Court on Wednesday.

Approximately 65 students, faculty and staff showed up for the opening, which included free drinks, food and prize giveaways.

The ribbon-cutting ceremony on Wednesday.

Chancellor David Werner, Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Narbeth Emmanuel and Student Body President Phil Gersman were among the crowd.

The newest eatery on campus, the Skywalk, located between Founders and Alumni halls, offers a place to accommodate and feed students on the far side of campus and provides a place to grab a quick bite to eat between classes.

The Skywalk is open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Friday and offers everything from snacks to breakfast and dinner items. The full menu includes pasta, muffins, fresh fruit and sandwiches among other items.

The Skywalk accepts meal cards and the prices are comparable to that of the Morris University Center.

Mary Robinson, director of the MUC, said she is excited about the Skywalk.

"The new facility was received warmly by the students," Robinson said. "We're glad so many students showed up for the opening. By what we've seen so far, when we opened this summer, the food court was well received and there's a great deal of excitement. We're pleased to bring this to campus at this time."

Robinson also added: "The food court is well prepared for the increase of customers as the fall semester begins. We had the soft opening to make sure everything was done, the food and menu. We are ready now. This year, and the next, and the next, students will see a great deal of new things added to campus."

New prez is back where it all began

BY MAUREEN HAGRMAN
NEWS REPORTER

SIUE may head in new directions under the influence of SIU's newest president.

On July 26, James E. Walker was appointed to the position of president by the SIU board of trustees at a special meeting.

Walker will begin serving as SIU's newest permanent president on Oct. 1. He will replace Frank E. Horton, the interim SIU president.

Walker is no rookie to higher education. He has spent two decades involved in higher education, including serving as Middle Tennessee State University's president since 1991.

While serving at MTSU, the university's fall enrollment jumped nearly 20 percent and ACT scores for incoming freshmen ranked above the national average for the last six years.

Location was key in making the Skywalk a success. Robinson said a prime location was chosen to serve many students who wanted dining services convenient them.

"Faculty, staff and students wanted dining services this side of campus. Vending was here, so we replaced the vending with a restaurant. We are pleased to have dining services finally on this side of campus," Robinson said.

"Students are also enjoying the new food court," Gersman said.

The Skywalk offers convenience to many students.

"It offers a variety of food choices with good quality food," Gersman said. "Now faculty, staff and students don't have to go all the way over to the MUC. They can just stay here and eat. And, there's a nice view. The whole thing is really nice. It's a testament of hard work. Good things come from hard work."

Amanda Reynolds, a junior, said the new Skywalk helps out a lot in her daily schedule.

"I have a nursing lab from 8 a.m. until 2 in the afternoon and we only have a short break," Reynolds said. "This is really convenient because it's such a short break and this is just down the hall. It's wonderful. I'll be eating here a lot."

Jason Holzum, student trustee for SIUE, said he thinks the Skywalk offers a lot to students.

"This targets groups in Founders and Alumni. I mean, it's in the middle of the two. You can't find a more prime location," Holzum said. "And, the prices are reasonable, comparable to Center Court. Students like pasta, hot carts and to sit and eat lunch. Instead of the carts, now we have it (the Skywalk)."

Some students have already made dining at the Skywalk a regular experience. Seniors Brandy Meese and Mandy Weber said they eat at the Skywalk frequently.

"We have an hour break, so we come over here and chat over lunch and look out over the scenery. It's just more fun and upbeat than the cafeterias," Meese said.

"We like it. The prices are good and we like the view and the convenience. It's much better than walking all the way to the MUC," Weber added.

Students agree that the Skywalk grabs attention in more ways than just its prime location.

S. J. Morrison, a junior, said he was pulled in by a stronger attraction than location.

"I smelled the aroma from down the hall. That's what first attracted my attention," Morrison said.

But Morrison said although he likes the concept of the food court and its convenience, he does have a complaint or two.

"I was a little confused at first as far as what to do. Then someone told me it was 'helpy-selfy,'" Morrison said. "The prices are reasonable and I can stop in and eat here before classes. But my hot dog wasn't near as good as the ones I got downstairs. And the prices suddenly jumped from 75 cents to $1. But, I like the concept of the cafe. It's a little food oasis up here."

Free drinks were served to those who attended the opening.

Two wrongs just make a bigger wrong

I'd like to tell you a story.

It's not a long or complex story, but I think it needs to be told.

I was walking across campus the other day, minding my own business, when I saw something that made me snap. Another student was walking about 30 feet in front of me. He casually looked around and threw a soda can on the ground.

Big deal, right? It was to me.

This student was only 15 feet from three trash cans, and he just threw the can on the ground. I went into a rage.

I picked up the can and threw it away, being the responsible citizen that I am. Then I walked up to the guy and offered a few choice words. We began to exchange still more choice words until it got to be a shouting match.

I have to say I am proud that I picked up the trash and threw it away, and I'm proud that I had the guts to confront this guy, but I'm not proud about how I handled myself.

You see, my few choice words were mostly four-letter words. Of course, so were his. I think I could have been a little bit more diplomatic about how I confronted the guy and for that I apologize to him.

Now I get to say my piece, though. This campus has a lot of litter from what I can see. Some people will say it is pretty clean, and compared to other campuses, it may be. But I look at it a little differently. When people throw things on the ground, especially when they are only feet from a trash can, I find their actions inexcusable.

I spend most of my days on this campus, and it is not fun to see bags, cans and wrappers all over the ground when I walk from building to building. Maybe you would see things differently if your neighbors threw their garbage on your lawn and you had to clean it up.

I am proud to say that I go to school here and I hate to see people disregard things such as a clean campus. Certainly people still have pride in their school.

I live by the idea that I should leave things better than when I found them. I for one will not drop my trash on the ground for someone else to have to look at and pick up. In most cases, it only takes a few seconds to find a trash can and take care of my trash in a civilized manner.

Again, I am sorry about how I handled myself, but I hope I struck a chord with some people on campus.

I am not perfect, and I will never claim to be, but I do my best. I believe we all should.

Commentary Outrageous laws stun student

BY MARK SILVERMAN
 BADGER HERALD

MADISON, Wis. (U-WIRE) — When I was a lad growing up in Naperville, Ill., getting in trouble for this or that, my mother used to say to me, "You can't pick and choose the laws you want to obey." If they would just stop writing laws that render my bad habits, shortcomings and perverted preferences criminal, I wouldn't have to.

There's a surprising abundance of ordinances on the books in Madison that put me on the wrong side of the law. Before you judge me, consider for yourself whether or not you too are an outlaw in the eyes of civic code.

Madison, like any other city, has volumes of ordinances pertaining to subjects like fire safety, zoning, consumer protection and public decency (to name very few). It takes less than an hour to recognize that anybody who owns property around here is guilty of several violations. Then I look out the window, and with the knowledge of but a few ordinances it is clear pedestrians are also flagrantly breaking the law, risking hundreds of dollars in fines and even imprisonment if they fail to pay in a timely fashion.

Take dog walkers, for instance. I see them brazenly permitting animals to stand on sidewalks! That's $25 for a first offense, but since "the issuance of a citation under this ordinance in no way precludes the proceeding under any other law or ordinance relating to the same or any other matter," they also stands to be fined whenever the dog defecates on public or private property. Where else is there to defecate? What land is neither public nor private? The fine is $100 for the first time the dog takes a crap anywhere (which is bound to happen) and $200 every other time. Luckily, you only pay if you get caught. Furthermore, if the dog walker wasn't carrying a "means of animal defecation removal," then there's another $100 forfeiture. Certainly without meaning to, the law encourages sewing your dog shut and leaving him at home.

Encouraging cleanup after pets is not a bad idea. I only object to the intrusive nature of such laws, and the fact that nobody follows them, yet they go unpunished. If I can't pick and choose the laws I want to follow, why can the city choose which ones to enforce? While police are spending unprecedented resources seeking out underage drinkers at bars, the defecation perpetrators may flaunt their lawlessness in broad daylight. The fines are equal when you add them up. Remember also that any ordinance broken is grounds by itself for a penalty. Just because laws aren't paid attention to in most instances, you don't have the security of knowing that you won't get in trouble unless someone complains about your dog's defecation. This leaves you at the mercy of law enforcement to ignore your transgression of countless ordinances that you break regularly - most of which you probably did not know were even there.

Ever gotten excited, guys? Outside? With all these beautiful girls walking the streets in halter tops and short shorts? Thank God I'm not on my way to the Walgreens or SERF with my "covered male genitals in a discernibly turgid state." As proud as I am that its discernable while covered, I'd be in direct violation of Section 20.04(2)(b).

Regardless of your age, you can't possess or consume alcoholic beverages on private property. The kid who handed me a Sony postcard in front of Memorial Union could have been fined $25 for distributing commercial handbills. The police can stop you from dancing and fine you $25. If you are under 18 and dancing then you're up to $50. Junk collectors need a license or can be fined $25. I hang on to my old textbooks that have been replaced by new editions - am I guilty? There's a $25 fine for leaving your keys in the car. What if I'm driving it? It's an offense against the public to "participate in an obscene play, dance or performance or knowingly permit the same on any premises owned or operated by her/him under her/his control." I'm guilty when I dance naked after showering and I'm also guilty for knowing my roommates do the same. At least we can protect our landlord by not telling him.

It certainly sounds like I've quoted these ordinances out of context. In fact, I haven't changed a word and there is no further explanation following the ordinances that seem to require it. These aren't even the silliest-sounding laws ("illegal to plant trees in public highways: $50, dealing with certain turtles: $100"), but a few of the ones that I know lots of us are breaking on a regular basis.

I am not satisfied to live with outrageous laws just because my violation of them goes ignored. The fact that we get away with it ought not to placate us. When there are laws that most people feel comfortable breaking, respect for law in general deteriorates. The more it becomes clear that we pick and choose what to comply with, the more it is obvious that regulation has begun to reflect an ideal world and not the one we live in.

Laws no longer dictate the minimum acceptable standards that respectable citizens follow, but a kind of perfection that is beyond most peoples' grasp. When forms of forgetfulness and private behavior harmless to others are punishable, it takes a less malicious kind of person to eventually justify breaking the laws that aren't so trivial.

Farewell to a friend

For my 21st birthday, which I pitifully celebrated Monday, I was given the amazing gift of time.

I now have two months to accomplish a number of tasks I could only complete if I had no other diversions and plenty of time. Two months is the time I will be in a cast for the purpose of mending a broken ankle.

I am resigning from my position as Lifestyles Editor. This is my farewell editorial. Minutes after the clock struck 12 on my golden birthday, I was privileged enough to hear my bones break, again. Three summers ago I broke my left ankle by falling on it, causing it to rotate 60 degrees out of socket. It was a perfect break and a perfect healing. It was an amazing learning experience. There are still nine screws and a plate down there. I'm bionic.

This time I heard my right ankle break. It sounded like cracking carrots in two under water. I broke two bones but this time there shouldn't be any surgery necessary, thank God. I was scheduled for 18 credit hours this semester, and my first thought was I needed to lighten the load. I thought I could drop a couple classes and go from there, but then I kept thinking. Two months is going to be hard enough just getting around my house, let alone the entire campus. The human armpit can only endure so much.

I won't be able to drive for a while, so living off campus would have been pretty difficult. I'd have to organize a Tobie Taxi Service and that is just asking too much from my friends. I already feel like I've inconvenienced enough people around me. Thank you all for everything, you know who you are.

I started thinking about the ramifications of taking the semester off. I wouldn't graduate on time, but I wouldn't if I dropped classes anyway. Who graduates in four years nowadays anyhow? It's cool to take five years, and I'm cool.

So many people are discouraging me from taking the semester off because they hear about people doing that and never coming back. Not me. I strive for intellectual stimulation. I like having work to do. I am not worried about not returning to graduate.

Even in the emergency room I was setting goals for my downtime. I want to grow in my faith, I want to read as much as possible, and I want to learn to design a Web page. I want to write an e-zine, too if I get a Web page up. I might even learn to play guitar, that is if by breaking my ankle I was somehow blessed with rhythm.

I look back at the recent past and I feel so lucky that I never found a place to live or signed any contracts. That would have been messy. I brought everything I own here in my car, but I never unpacked so I don't have to repack. I didn't have the money to pay for an apartment and getting money from the school was pretty difficult this late in the game. Everything was totally planned out for this to happen.

I am excited for what I can learn from this. I learned a great deal while recovering from my last serious injury and I'd like to repeat that. Not many people can take an experience like this and embrace it. I rejoice I am one of them.

Thanks for reading this column this far. It probably indicates that you've read my articles before and I greatly appreciate that. I am going to miss this job, and most of the junk that comes with it. I hope whatever endeavors you face, you can learn from them.

Anyone who would want to send me giant stuffed panda bears, e-mail to livingjoke@hotmail.com, and I'll let you know where to ship it. See you in five months.

Peace,

Among these students around Peck Hall are freshmen who will encounter some of the experiences Andrew Lehman does and will discuss in The Freshman Experience. Our recently departed Lifestyles Editor Tobie DePauw would love to join them if it were not for his recent injury.

The Freshman Experience

Week One

These experiences were documented by Andrew Lehman during his freshman year at SIUE. The Alestle will be running these accounts in the Thursday edition throughout the remainder of the semester.

BY ANDREW LEHMAN
NEWS EDITOR

Like so many other students, I believed that attending one of the Pre-Entry Advisement and Registration sessions was vital for survival on the SIUE campus.

Big mistake.

The first visit to this campus should be spent exploring the natural beauties that can be found around every corner, not discovering the quite dull Mississippi River Room in the Morris University Center.

These PEAR sessions, which can last nearly five hours, either take place way too early in the morning or too annoyingly late in the afternoon. Either way, your day is shot.

The sessions are meant to inform new students about the SIUE campus and campus activities. When students arrive, they are met at the door by one of the six to 10 overly perky PEAR group members. The students spend nearly 90 minutes filling out a boring questionnaire. The other three to four hours are spent watching skits, taking a tour of the campus and getting registered. And, if you were as unlucky as I was, you were the last one to get registered for classes.

These sessions are overdramatic. The PEAR groups seem to be the dumping ground for high school actors who could not hack it in college theater. Their skits, which are supposed to help students understand the importance of registering and communicating with their advisers, are not funny. The 20-minute skit that I saw had absolutely no comedic exchanges. If I wrote one of those skits, I sure as hell would not take credit for it.

The PEAR members are way too bright-eyed and bushy-tailed. It is all right to be proud of your job and the work you do, but please do not be perky. These people are like the ones who put on the oh-so-uplifting musicals at Six Flags. Students should have received a letter that told them to come equipped to battle excessive perkiness.

The food at the sessions is fairly decent. I sure did like eating a couple of cookies at 7:30 in the morning with no beverage to quench my thirst, just one more PEAR torture.

Perhaps we should send our criminals to PEAR sessions instead of jail. Unfortunately, this would probably constitute cruel and unusual punishment, but we would not have to worry about capital punishment any more. After 20 minutes, the criminals would be lining up to throw themselves out of windows.

If it were up to me, which it is not, this is how a PEAR session would run: There would not be one. Rather, each student would have a designated time to register, and if a student wanted a tour of the campus, I would provide a map for a self-guided tour.

Even though the PEAR sessions seem to offer little usefulness, they do. Students, such as myself, learn which perky types to avoid. Hanging out with them would be like walking around campus with a "kick me" sign on your back.

Trust me, I know all about the "kick me" sign.

BY RICK CROSSIN
SPORTS EDITOR

On behalf of the entire sports section of the Alestle, I would like to welcome all of you back to SIUE for another year.

As some of you may or may not know, SIUE has a load of sports for students to play, attend and support.

With that said, I have a small problem I'd like to address.

Last year I sat through numerous SIUE sporting events where I looked into the stands and saw not students, but parents.

During some games, the stands looked as empty as an early church service on Sunday morning.

What I'm trying to say is that the attendance at almost every SIUE sports event is absolutely appalling.

Granted, SIUE sporting events may not have the same luster and appeal as a Duke-North Carolina basketball war or a Cubs-Cardinals game, but they deserve some student participation.

For those who aren't convinced of the severity of this problem, let's look at one team and its attendance at home games last season.

The SIUE volleyball team drew, on average, 142 spectators at each of the 11 home games. According to SIUE Sports Information Director Eric Hess, the Vadalabene Center capacity during volleyball games is 2,000 people.

Quite a shocking disparity given that the volleyball team finished second in the Great Lakes Valley Conference last season.

For those of you that don't know what the Vadalabene Center is, it's where SIUE plays its home games.

The only time I can remember a large crowd at a volleyball game last season was when half of the SIUE men's soccer team showed up and cheered with such enthusiasm that the opposing coach complained to the referee.

Now that's what I call home field advantage.

Lady Cougars ready to start season

Four senior co-captains will lead SIUE into the season-opener Friday night

BY RICK CROSSIN
SPORTS EDITOR

The SIUE volleyball team will try to start the season on the right foot this weekend as the host of the Edwardsville Intelligencer Invitational.

Head coach Joe Fisher is happy his team is starting the 2000 campaign at home.

"I think the players feel more comfortable at home," Fisher said. "It makes a huge difference."

The Lady Cougars will play their first game of the two-day event at 7 p.m. Friday against Drury College.

Drury went a disappointing 15-20 last season, including a four-set loss to SIUE early in the season.

This season, Drury is quite the inexperienced team, with just five upperclassmen on its roster.

After the match against Drury, the Lady Cougars will play two matches on Saturday against Ashland University and Wheeling Jesuit University.

Ashland started last season with a bang, winning their first 14 games in a row.

The Eagles faltered after that, losing 15 of its next 20 games to finish the season at 19-15.

Wheeling Jesuit comes out of the West Virginia Athletic Conference, and Fisher is still waiting on the scouting reports to see how he is going to structure his offense and defense.

Even though the teams SIUE will face this weekend aren't the toughest of competition, Fisher wants his team to focus and get the job done.

"I think this weekend's games will set the tone for the entire month for us," Fisher said.

The only real problem Fisher has this season is having too many good players and not enough room on the court to play them all at one time.

"It's a nice problem to have," Fisher said. "I feel like I can put any combination of players on the floor and expect to win."

The Lady Cougars also have some size on this year's team, something they lacked last season.

Junior transfer Stoshia DeShasier may very well be the rock for SIUE in the middle.

At 6 feet 2 inches, DeShasier will likely be called upon to get the big blocks during the course of the game.

Fisher, however, is not ready to put his starting lineup in the books just yet.

"We will try some different lineups this weekend to help get an idea of who is going to start," Fisher said. "But I'm trying to keep things open as much as possible."

One surprise that Fisher has seen is the pace at which the new players on the team have picked up on his system.

"The new people picked up on the offense and defense quickly," Fisher said.

A high level of expectation has already been put on SIUE as the Lady Cougars have been picked to finish first in the Green Division of the Great Lakes Valley Conference.

After the first two weeks of practice, Fisher is pleased with the way his team has performed.

"Overall, I'm happy about where we're at so far," Fisher said. "I think we might be a step or two ahead of where we were last year."

Fisher and his coaching staff have also decided that the four seniors on the team, Lindsay Rust, Kathy Dulle, Melissa Schaeffer and Heather Vaughn, will be the co-captains for the 2000 squad.

"The coaching staff and I knew about the third day of practice that these four seniors were going to be our captains," Fisher said.

Kathy Dulle (left) and Kelly Schall will both be a major factor in making sure the SIUE offense clicks this weekend at home.

Last season, SIUE had two nine-game road trips during the course of the conference season.

This season, the Lady Cougars' longest road trip is four games.

"We traveled so much last year" Fisher said. "I think this season will be easier on the players."

The first game for SIUE will begin at 7 p.m. on Friday, and Saturday's games will start at 2 and 4 p.m. at the Vadalabene Center.

After this weekend's matches, SIUE will travel to Jacksonville, Fla., to play in the Labor Day National Classic.

In that tournament, the Lady Cougars will face some of the toughest competition of the season, taking on two top-ranked opponents in the University of Nebraska-Omaha and the University of Tampa.

Lady Cougars ready for conference play

SIUE will face Lindenwood College in final exhibition match before going on the road

BY KELI KEENER
SPORTS STRINGER

The women's soccer team recently played in an exhibition game against a team consisting of its alumni.

"The Alumni Exhibition went really well," coach Brian Korbmesmeyer said. "We were fortunate that our alumni are still very good and they gave us a good game."

"Four of our all-time leading scorers played against us, two of which were All-American. The final score was 3-3 and that made it a neat game for the fans to watch. We made a couple of mistakes late in the game and we need to improve on that, but for a first-time performance, I was really happy with it," Korbmesmeyer said.

Up next for the Lady Cougars is the Lindenwood Exhibition in St. Louis at 6 p.m. Thursday. After that will be the Missouri Southern Invitational.

The Lady Cougars will head to Joplin, Mo., on Saturday where they will face the University of Nebraska-Omaha at 3:30 p.m. and then take on Missouri Southern State University at 3 p.m. Sunday.

Sunday "We're not necessarily the favorites going into this one," Korbmesmeyer said. "We lost to Nebraska-Omaha last year and they're a very good team. They were 14-5 while being a pretty much freshman-laden team, so we're really going into this with some trepidation because they're good."

"They beat us in overtime 2-1 so it was an excellent game."

It will definitely be a tough way to start our year."

As for the conference games ahead, Northern Kentucky University appears to be the team to be reckoned with.

"Northern Kentucky struggled for two or three years until they got a new coach who is really aggressive. He also has the opportunity to recruit from the good area of southern Cincinnati," Korbmesmeyer said.

The Lady Cougars beat Northern Kentucky last season 3-1 in conference play.

"We've battled with them but we have beaten them as many times as they have beaten us," Korbmesmeyer said. "They will be excellent because they return a lot of players and their program is fairly new. They're going to be very good."

The catalyst for the upcoming games for SIUE may very well be sophomore Colleen Creamer.

Creamer was the Freshman of the Year last season in the Great Lakes Valley Conference and her scoring touch will be needed if the Lady Cougars hope to start well in the conference.

At Creamer's side will be junior Angie Bode.

Bode, a transfer from Lewis and Clark Community College, was the National Junior College Athletic Association Player of the Year in 1999 and should help make the the Lady Cougars an offensive force in the GLVC.

Beth Loudermann will be the anchor in goal for SIUE. Last season, Loudermann gave up less than one goal per game.

Unfortunately, the people who are hurt the most by the abysmal attendance at home games are the players themselves.

Ask any of the SIUE athletes if they prefer playing in front of 150 fans or 1,000 fans. My guess is they will go for the latter.

I played a few sports in high school, and the feeling you get when you see a gym full of fans is indescribable. The adrenaline starts flowing, your stomach feels as if it's being attacked by butterflies and you are ultimately more focused for the game.

Now, I'm not saying fans need to act crazy at the games and be obnoxious. Just attend. Show your support. Clap when the SIUE team scores, jeer when the other team scores.

And it wouldn't hurt to bring a few Alestles to read when the other team's lineup is announced.

And, guess what. Here's the good news, here's the kicker. We students get into the games for free.

Yes, free. As in having to pay no money whatsoever.

So please, pull yourself away from the Internet, unglue yourself from the television and the Playstation for two hours and come watch a game.

You'll be pleasantly surprised by the level of play and you'll be supporting your school and your fellow students at the same time.

Besides, I need someone to talk to.

Cougars draw with Eastern, may lose McMillian for season

SIUE will face Maryville in final preseason game Thursday

BY SCOTT CLOIN
SPORTS STRINGER

With the first key test for the Cougars coming on the road, men's head soccer coach Ed Huneke had two final home exhibition games to fine-tune his team.

The first of the two games was played Tuesday night as the Cougars played host to Eastern Illinois University. The second game will be played 6 p.m. Thursday in Korte Stadium against Maryville University.

Tuesday night, the Cougars and Eastern played a hard-fought, change-of-momentum game that ended in a 1-1 tie.

As the game kicked off, Eastern seemed to come out of the locker room more prepared than SIUE.

Eastern outshot the Cougars in the first half 7-5, forcing starting goaltender Donny Sheehan to be on top of his game.

Sheehan battled to come up with six saves in the half and allowed the Cougars to go to the locker room in a scoreless draw.

Huneke's words of advice at halftime seemed to have immediate success, as the Cougars looked like the dominant team in the second half.

The Cougars had a few early scoring opportunities in the half, forcing Eastern starting goaltender Ryan Waguespack to keep with the pace Sheehan began in the first half.

In the 81st minute, Cougar forward Justin Huneke broke the scoreless tie as he found a loose ball nine yards out from the goal and buried it.

The play developed from a corner kick where Cougar midfielder Eric Modeer sent a ball to the top of the 6-yard box that deceived the Eastern defenders and was left bouncing.

Huneke used his size to get to the ball first and hit a left-footed shot that beat Waguespack.

"Justin's what I call a wide body," Huneke said. "He is a demanding presence and holds the ball well for our team to move off of."

The Cougar lead didn't last long as Eastern forward Devin Rensing finished a rebound two minutes later.

In one of Eastern's few scoring chances in the second half, Eastern forward Casey McCormac found himself alone and corralled an unlucky deflection off a Cougar defender.

Cougar backup goaltender Bret Richardson came sliding out of the net to block the shot, but the rebound found Rensing's foot at the top of the 18-yard box with Richardson down and out.

Rensing tied the score with only seven minutes to play.

"It's always disappointing when you can't hold a lead that late in a game, but I thought we dominated the second half of play," Huneke said.

The most significant issue of the game may not have been the play itself.

Returning senior and All-Great Lakes Valley Conference and All-Midwest midfielder Justin McMillian was not available for the game.

McMillian has had chronic knee pain since surgery on his knee in September two years ago. His status for the season is still unknown.

"As of right now we're still perplexed as to what to do," Huneke said. "But there is the possibility he may redshirt."

The Cougars first test of the season will come on a lengthy road trip.

On Saturday, the Cougars will be visiting Missouri Southern State University, a team that SIUE hasn't faced in four years. On Sunday, they will visit the University of Central Arkansas.

The biggest early test of the season will be at Soccer Bowl VIII in Quincy. The Cougars will play Rockhurst College on Sept. 2. and Truman State University on Sept. 3.

Walker also increased admission standards for students at MTSU and worked to establish the first Honors College in Tennessee. In addition, Walker worked successfully with state and federal legislators to gain funding for MTSU programs, including $34 million for a state-of-the-art library.

This isn't the first time Walker has worked within the SIU system. Walker served as assistant professor of special education and coordinator of Early Childhood Education of Exceptional Children and the department of special education at SIUE from 1972 to 1974.

Walker returns to SIU as a result of a national search and the counsel of a presidential search advisory committee composed of students, faculty and staff from SIU's campuses.

In a press release, A.D. VanMeter, chair of the SIU board of trustees, emphasized Walker's credibility and qualifications for the position.

"Dr. Walker has the leadership qualities and experience that are needed to guide SIU into the future," VanMeter said. "His professional accomplishments in higher education are most impressive, and we are excited to have him here and excited about the future of SIU."

Jason Holzum, student trustee for SIUE who also worked with the presidential search advisory committee, also said he felt Walker was a solid choice.

"Dr. Walker is an excellent choice for SIU," Holzum said. "He had his start in Edwardsville, and he knows how the system works. ... It's neat that he started in a lower level of higher education, and now he is returning to SIU as the highest level of higher education."

Holzum also said that Walker brings strong experience and the ability to cause change to SIU.

"Walker served at Middle Tennessee State University and he did a great job there," Holzum said. "At MTSU, enrollment was about 12,000 when he started, like we are now. It was raised to about 19,000 under his direction. He also had programs that increased minority graduation and other programs that we hope he can continue here."

In a press release, Walker said he is excited and enthusiastic about coming to SIU.

"The opportunity to come to Southern Illinois University and lead such a diverse institution with an outstanding history and vast potential is truly exciting for me," Walker said. "I am very much looking forward to meeting the challenges and opportunities that are ahead for me and for SIU."

SIUE tennis courts get a face lift

Sheri McWhirter/Alestle

The SIUE tennis teams will get the chance to play on a new surface this season. The courts are being completely resurfaced and will have fencing. Work should be finished by the time the women's team plays against Indiana University-Purdue University at Fort Wayne on Sept. 16.
