Hall, Prairie Hall, Founders Hall and Skywalk Café.

“Voting in the student government election is extremely important because it is the only opportunity the general student body has to have their voices officially heard,” Student Body President Michelle King said.

“You will be participating in electing those students who will make major decisions for the entire student population in the coming year,” King said.

a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday, April 7, in Peck Hall, the Morris University Center, Student Fitness Center and Bluff Hall.

The last day to vote is from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesday, April 8, in Peck Hall, MUC, Woodland

Sara Guarino is running for Student Body President and Anthony Albertina is running for Vice President. The three candidates running for Board of Trustee’s Student Representative are Dell Jones, Rick Leppo and Rick Maurer. Only one of the three candidates will serve as Student Trustee.

The 21 candidates running for senator are Latish Adnami, Justin Bergen, Nikki Grashoff, Cindy Holesko, Jason Jacobson, Mike Jones Jr., Sarah Kuehnel, Rene Lewis, Lay Lay Maines, Pam Minner, Alexis Mugge, Ajit Oza, T.J. Robinson Jr., Kenneth Shepard, Leamond Sloan Jr., Adam Summers, Scott Sutherland, Derek Thompson, Matt Warren, Mary Witte and Kevin Wrigley. Only 12 of the candidates will serve as senators for the 2003 and 2004 school year.

“It is important for students to realize that if they want, they can vote for one, or any number of candidates, up to 12,” Director of Kimmel Leadership Center Steve Sperotto said.

Dining Services makes the grade

BRIAN WALLHEIMER
NEWS REPORTER

Despite renovations in the Morris University Center, Dining Services has received high marks on Madison County health inspections.

Since September, no eating establishment on campus has scored below a 94 out of 100 on an inspection.

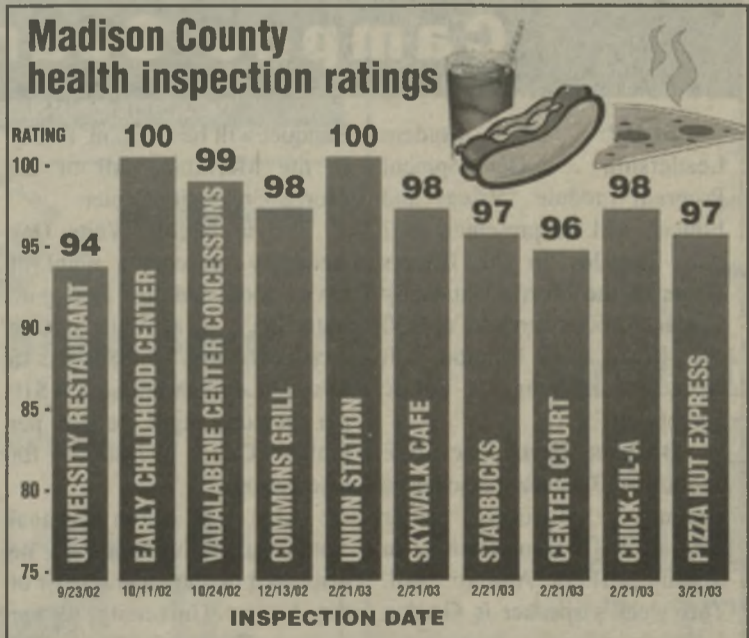

All areas in the MUC that were affected by renovations have been inspected since February, except the University Restaurant, which is being worked on now.

“I think we do a great job of meeting the needs of our customers in the area of health and sanitation,” MUC Assistant Director for Dining Services Bill Canney said.

The highest scorers were Union Station and the Early Childhood Center with scores of 100.

The Vadalabene Center concessions scored 99, the Skywalk Cafe, the Commons Grill and Chick-fil-A all scored 98, Pizza Hut Express and Starbucks both scored 97, Center Court scored a 95 and the University Restaurant scored a 94.

Toni Corona, the environmental health services manager for the Madison County Health Department, said establishments could score in the 90s and still have serious violations.

“We look at 45 different areas,” Corona said. “Each is weighted according to the violation. You really have to look at the type of violation that occurred.”

The biggest violation deducts five points, of which SIUE had one that was corrected while inspectors were on site.

Corona said a Commons Grill employee was found eating in the food-preparation area when inspectors arrived.

She said once the infraction was corrected, the Commons Grill score was increased.

Other infractions included needing better cleaning of surfaces that do not come into contact with food such as the tops of ovens and floors, adding a covered trash can in the Starbucks restroom, adding a paper towel dispenser at the

Donate goods to support American troops in Iraq

MELISSA RICHARDSON

For the next two weeks there will be a table in the Morris University Center cafeteria for those interested in providing products to support the American troops in Iraq.

The cafeteria staff initiated the effort. They plan to take the items to the Red Cross or the United Service Organizations and ask that donors send the donations to Cpl. Evan James’ unit in memory of his death from all of SIUE.

This is an action meant to support American troops regardless of opinions on the war.

James, 20, was an SIUE sophomore who recently drowned crossing the Saddam Canal while serving in Iraq with the Marines.

The table also has a list placed next to the box so that students know what type of items to donate. Included in the list are items such as sunscreen, Chap Stick, stationary, socks, body lotion, pre-paid phone cards, feminine products and deodorant.

According to Sandy Goodman, a cashier involved in initiating the effort, the organizers would like to receive items such as playing cards and crossword puzzle books as well. Brad Walker, a nighttime supervisor for the cafeteria, compiled the list.

The box will be up for two weeks, but Goodman said if SIUE students still show an interest after that, the staff may leave the box longer for donations.

“I have a son three years older than the boy who died,” Goodman said. “It’s really hit me hard this time because I see the kids coming through (the cafeteria) every day."

Goodman said cashier Connie Beccera's husband has been called up, although he is not in Iraq.

According to Goodman, the workers feel it is important to support the troops even if one does not agree with the war.

"I feel like I hate the war, but not our soldiers. And I truly believe we are doing what we have to do," Goodman said.

"I think it's a fantastic idea, what we are doing," cashier Wanda Stram said.

"We are definitely in a far better place than they are right now. And we feel this is the least we can do for them."

Goodman says she feels sympathetic toward the troops because she feels they did not really know what to expect when they joined, and now the reality of it for those in Iraq must be awesome.

Stram said that if she could say anything to the troops, she would like to "thank them for being over there, fighting for our freedom."

Skywalk Café and needing a thermometer in a cooler at Pizza Hut Express.

Renovations were the root of one infraction in Center Court where inspectors noticed dust getting into the preparation area for the salad bar.

Corona said the inspection was done Feb. 21 and an inspector returned a few days later and the problem was corrected.

"They were still on the tail end of the remodel and that affected them," Corona said.

Canney said Dining Services has adapted well to working near the renovations. He said many temporary walls have been erected near food areas and plastic sheeting near Pizza Hut Express has gone up to protect food.

Canney said students should know that Pizza Hut Express is open despite the construction in the area and the plastic sheeting.

He said since the sheeting was put up, sales there have dropped.

Corona said there is no "hard and fast" rule about what score is needed to pass an inspection.

She said some places might have several small violations but still be relatively healthy, while others may have a couple large violations that could close them down.

Wheelchair basketball brings fun for all

Celebrating Abilities Week brought a plethora of contests to the SIUE community. The second annual 5-kilometer Roll, Run, Walk race through the historic neighborhoods of downtown Edwardsville took place at 8 a.m. Sunday morning.

Director of Disability Support Services Jane Floyd-Hendey said the day was a big success.

"It was such a beautiful day, there were a lot of winners and a lot of spectators," Floyd-Hendey said. "Jennifer Reeves, a student here who is totally blind, walked the entire course with a guide.

"The Edwardsville police were incredibly supportive. I am really pleased, we had 325 participants this year, up from 193 in our first year."

There were 13 divisions for male and female racers in three categories; wheelchair racers, runners and walkers.

The overall winners in the women's and men's race were Julie Czech with a finish time of 20 minutes, 32 seconds and Mike Compton with 19:09.

According to track and field head coach Daryl Frerker, the cross country and track teams were responsible for the course a setup, timing and the results.

"It was really a great experience, hopefully, we'll have the continued support of the SIUE community for a successful program next year," Frerker said.

Wednesday at the Vadalabene Center, there was a showdown between the SIUE women's basketball team and the Confluence Center Coast.

The Center Coast beat the Cougars 38 - 22. Lyn De Laney, assistant coach of the Center Coast, said all had a good time.

"It's always fun, these women got just one day of practice where they learned to shoot from a wheelchair. It's very different, you have to change your timing on the passes, but the women got the hang of it rather quickly," De Laney said.

Jim Dugan, co-director of the Gateway Confluence Wheelchair Sports Foundation and head coach of the Center Coast said the Cougars did well in adapting their game to the wheelchair sport.

"The women played wonderfully well and were very supportive of the process," Dugan said.

"We like playing at colleges because it gives our kids a chance to realize their potential. We want them to appreciate the experience and not be awed by it. They can say, 'OK, this is good, I can do this, I can go to school here.'"

Dugan said despite his disability, there are not many places he cannot go.

"Sure, there will always be architectural barriers. The world is not flat and it would be so boring if it were, but for the most part, it's accessible," he said.

"The (U.S.) Capitol is a beautiful place with many, many stairs. There are ramps available for a disabled person, a mom with a stroller, or an older person, but I'd never ask to see the Rocky Mountains flattened so that I could partake of the view."

According to Dugan, the Gateway Confluence Wheelchair Foundation, in rural Bethalto, has been advocating and training people with disabilities in wheelchair sports for five years.

"If you can name it, we play it," Dugan said. "We have 2-year-old participants all the way to 75-plus," he added.

Six-year-old basketball player Steven Schrader said he liked the halftime highlights best.

"I liked the cheerleaders. They're pretty and I flirted with them," Schrader said.

Southern Illinois University Carbondale alumnus Brent Bichet said he had fun playing against the women's team but there were challenges as well.

"We did a lot of overshooting and undershooting. Playing with the smaller ball was a difficult adjustment," Bichet added.

Bichet said the team of five women and seven men travel as far as Wisconsin to play.

"We've played in Nebraska and Kansas, too," he added.

The Gateway Confluence Wheelchair Foundation trains physical education personnel at schools in the area on inclusion of children with disabilities into sports programs.

"We see thousands of kids yearly. The kids are the best; we just show them how to do it, make the equipment available and within seconds they're learning, within minutes, they've acquired a new appreciation for disabilities awareness, Dugan said.

The Celebrating Awareness Week activities were a collaboration of the Disabilities Support Services, the SIUE track and cross country teams and the Speech Communication Department.

Yes, Dubya, for me, the answer is no

No is a powerful word. No sets limits and asserts rights.

No means independence, as every parent unfortunately finds out as that seems to be one of the first words a child learns.

No is the end of one yes and the beginning of another.

No seems to be the word that President George W. Bush keeps getting whenever he tries to convince others of the rightness of his war.

Some war supporters keep telling us those nos will turn into yeses as soon as the battlefield successes start rolling in.

I think the amount of nos is going to stay about constant as it reflects something bigger than this war. Not that this war is not important to those saying no. It is, but there's something else going on.

For about the past 18 months I have been immersing myself in the culture of no. I consider myself both a scholar of and a participant in this culture.

I'm sure the fact that the 10 million people turned out worldwide against Bush's war before it happened took some people by surprise. It didn't take me by surprise at all. In fact, I would have been surprised had it not happened. I will be equally surprised if the anti-war movement runs out of steam. The Bushites are counting on a little repression here and a little repression there to scare off the people in this movement. They are convinced that if they just proceed with what they are doing and keep turning a deaf ear, then the movement will burn itself out.

As an aside, the frames used by the media for protest actions have always intrigued me. Remember: protests are violent. Lobbing missiles into populated cities – now that's just good clean fun. (Warning: The previous sentence used irony for heightened rhetorical effect.)

But if the Bushites think these protesters are going away, they could not be more wrong.

An Italian fellow I've been reading lately, named Alberto Mellucci, talks about a new kind of social movement that lies below the surface of society, waiting to mobilize. This movement is profoundly nonauthoritarian and has as its goal a complete refiguring of society along humanistic and democratic values.

We saw a little bit of it during the anti-globalization protests a few years ago. Once again the authorities used the same old tactics against it. It did not die; it kept gathering force. Part of its strength was in using computer information technology as an organizing tool. You should see how many listservs I'm on. I'm sure the Office of Information Awareness knows how many I'm on.

A bigger part of the movement's strength was a commitment to be truly democratic and humanistic and not rely on a few leaders to carry out the wishes of its members. Even if the authorities can get to a few of the more prominent members of this movement, it will not stop it.

Bush's war just fanned the flames.

I truly believe that this country, even the world, is set for a profound psychic convulsion on the order of the '60s. I'm hoping for considerably less turmoil, but I don't fear the turmoil we're

First Amendment covers anti-war protests

Dear Editor,

I am responding to Johnny Prince's March 27 letter to the editor. His letter bothered me.

I'd like to begin by saying I had no idea the Iraqi flag had been painted on the Rock.

Having read about it in the Alestle, I, just as many others, felt a great insult. I really feel sorry for the people that painted the image; they obviously don't understand politics, humor or decent behavior.

Mr. Prince begins his message with a very legitimate rant about the Rock. He crashes and burns after that.

Why fly the U.N. flag on this campus? The United Nations was formed as an instrument of peace and issues discussed in U.N. sessions are pertinent to the safety of the world at large. It's simply a committee with spokesmen from hundreds of countries; it is very far from an alliance or a treaty.

The way I see it, no U.N. affiliated country need support the United States and its war machine. In any case, numerous U.N. countries have offered noncombat assistance, such as use of air space or medical ships.

Moreover, ask yourself this, Johnny: "How much support does the United Nations receive from the United States?" The greatest problem faced by the United Nations today is the noncompliance it is treated with by the United States. The United States is notorious for executing criminals who are citizens of other countries even after a halt of execution has been requested by the U.N. World Court in order to try a defendant in a different setting. The United Nations is ineffective because the United States remains unaffected by the opinions presented by member nations.

I support G.W. Bush a whopping zero percent and I would have voted for the man if I had been of legal age. And I find it hard to believe that Johnny Prince has a firm grasp on the finer points of international politics.

I would rather assume that protestors are highly educated and concerned about the repercussions of this war on an international and historical level, rather than uneducated-about-this-subject-anti-American. I'm either stupid or just plain nuts, Johnny, because I really think a lot of the conflict is centered on oil.

The executive branch tried to sell Saddam Hussein as a noncompliant weapons hoarder, and when that didn't work, they abruptly switched gears and began to tell the American people that Hussein is a horrible dictator, and we wanted to invade to help his people. The United States has supported dictators like Hussein before. U.S. policy has a nasty habit of calling for regime change when it suits U.S. interests.

Moreover, programs slated to aid reconstruction in that region are titles along the lines of "Food for Oil."

Finally, it may be true that weapons of mass destruction are 100-fold more destructive in 2003 than in 1945, but it is also true that a highly controversial war may affect the world much more than weapons of mass destruction from either era. Who holds the world's greatest stockpile of weapons of mass destruction, folks?

Johnny said he doesn't want to die because of one stupid person. Who's to say that one stupid person isn't a current or future American leader hell-bent on a war that the rest of the world opposes?

So, Johnny, I say, "Please accept my pity, you poor, dumb, overly zealous (word deleted). If you like this country so much then why do you go in for all this war-mongering?" This war was not an absolute until about 40 American missiles, costing $60 million, touched down on Iraqi soil.

I'm sure you do enjoy your First Amendment rights, Johnny Prince, and I enjoy them very much as well, every single day. God bless America. If you don't like this, then that's just too bad; precious America guarantees me this right. I say everyone anti-war keep meeting Wednesday afternoons to show support for our troops and a peaceful America.

Sincerely,

Garrett Mitchell

about to go through because I think something truly great will come of it.

Truly great things came out of the protest movements of the '60s, and the new protest movement will elicit more great things.

I'm reminded of the words of the abolitionist and ex-slave Frederick Douglass, which are on my office bulletin board. Douglass was writing during another period of psychic convulsion, the middle of the 19th century. People who were regarded as subhuman by their betters and their allies were arguing for a new society organized around democratic and humanistic values.

Douglass said, "Those who profess to favor freedom and depreciate agitation want crops without plowing the ground."

I'm ready for the plow to come through. I want to see what's on the other side.

I'm convinced it's better than what we have.

When Steve Brown, professor in the Art and Design Department, was sending out Christmas cards, one of the cards portrayed O. Winston Link's photograph titled "Hot Shot Eastbound."

When the card arrived in SIUE painting professor Thomas Garver's mailbox, Garver talked to Brown about bringing the famous Link photographs to the New Wagner Gallery in the Art and Design Building. It turned out Garver was once Link's assistant for one year and the owner of all of his prints. The prints were located in the History Museum and Historical Society of Western Virginia in Roanoke. Garver brought the pictures here to be put on display.

The famous prints, featuring the dying-out steam engines, can be seen any time during the gallery's open hours through April 4.

March 27, Garver arrived at the New Wagner Gallery and spoke about the exhibition.

Speaking of "Hot Shot Eastbound," Brown said, "This photograph encapsulates Link's work."

"Hot Shot Eastbound" is staged at a drive-in movie theater.

"The photo includes classic '50s automobiles, a plane on the screen, the future, as in a young couple necking in the car, and the steam engine all in one," Brown said.

Link was an old-time photographer in the '50s who used cameras that were fixed in place, as well as heavy tripods, large negatives and massive strobe lights for lighting his photographs. He mingled with his subjects, who were mostly from the Shenandoah Valley area of Virginia.

Link carefully put together his photos, as he planned them out and placed each subject in the photograph exactly where he thought they should be.

Instead of racing out to take as many pictures of different locomotives as he could, he took pictures of them in their normal environment. Link's photographs are a document of history with contemporary references meshed in.

The photograph titled "Hawksbill Creek Swimming Hole" portrays a large swimming hole near a bridge and a bunch of people splashing, swimming and having fun. The steam engine rolls overhead, almost as if it were just a background element of the photograph, like many other Link photographs in this display.

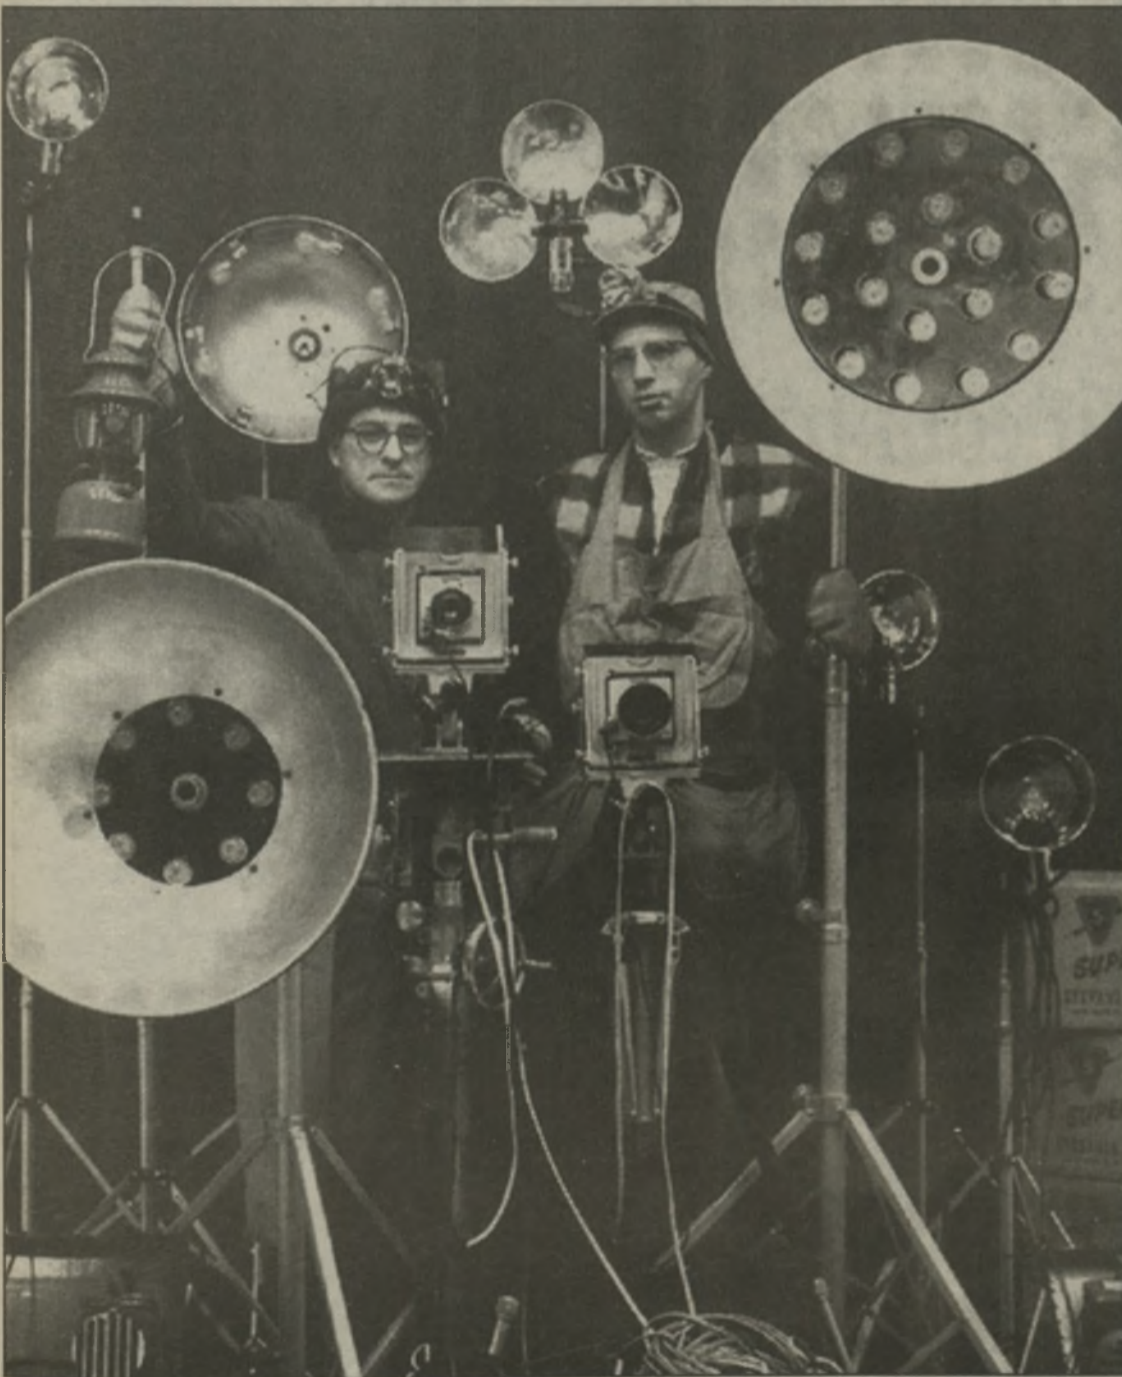

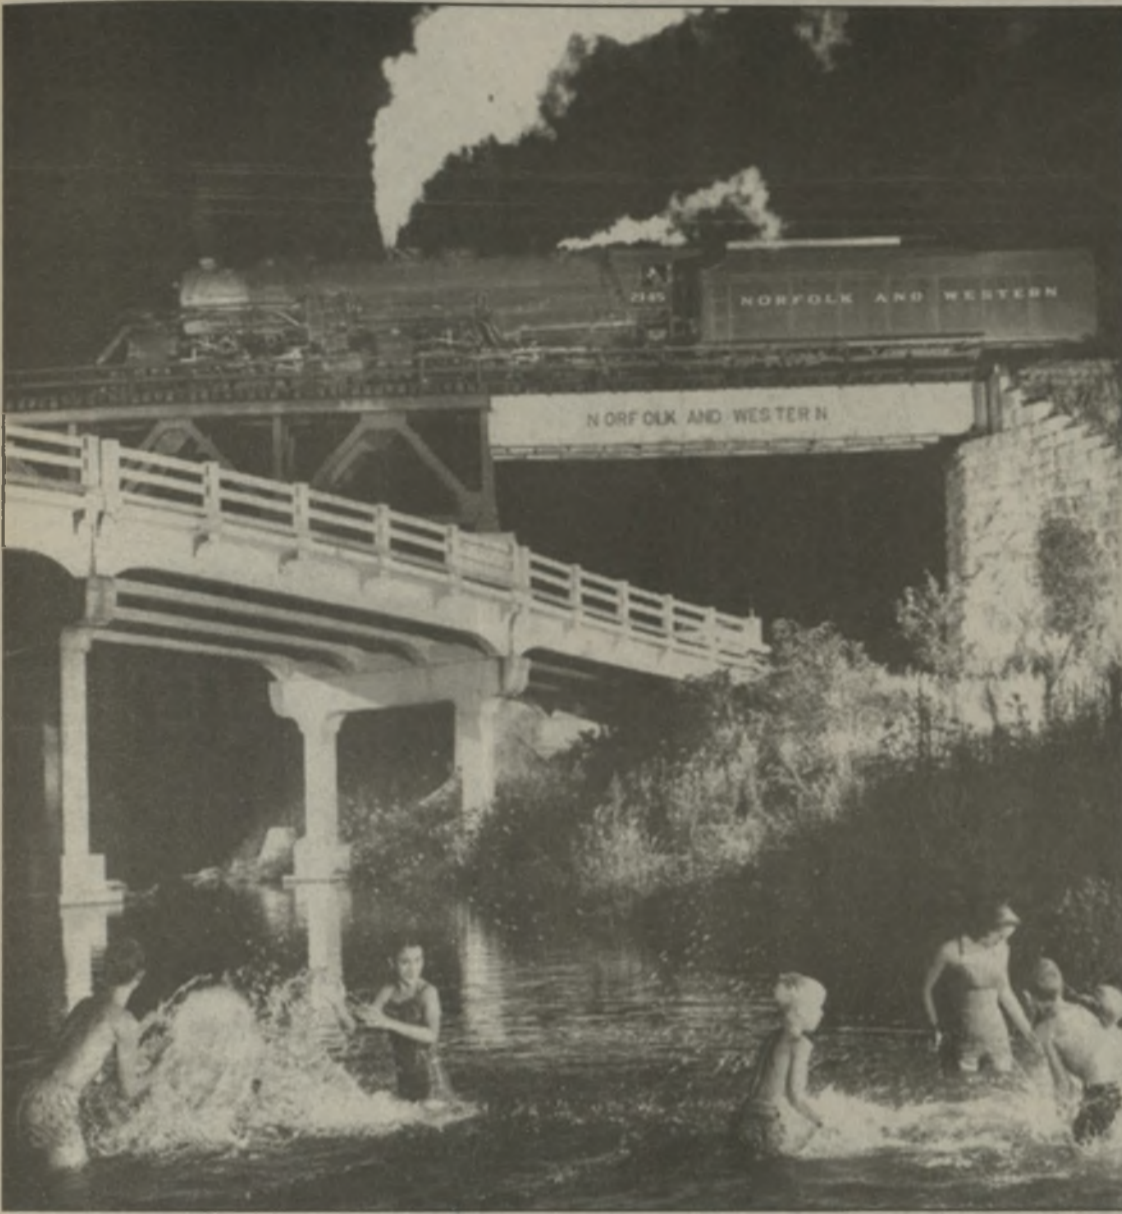

"It's an interesting glance into the past but also a reminder in the light of technology that railroad has a profound effect on peoples' lives," Brown said.

The O. Winston Link exhibit is open daily from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Student work-study program serves as employment alternative

BONNITA JONES

THE BLUE & WHITE FLASH (JACKSON STATE U.)

JACKSON, Miss., (U-WIRE) - The Federal Work-Study Program provides jobs for undergraduate and graduate students with financial need, allowing them to earn money to help pay for education expenses.

Gene A. Blakely, director of financial aid at Jackson State University, said the program encourages community service work and work related to a student's course of study.

"At least 1,000 students are awarded work-study per year," Blakely said. "This includes anybody that's eligible."

Each year, new and returning students are faced with concerns and issues regarding their eligibility for work-study.

"The student must be financially eligible with an unmet need of monies," said Valerie Shelby, coordinator of work-study and assistant director of community service at Jackson State.

Along with these qualifications, Shelby said that if a student does meet the standards, then other criteria are required before the student could begin work.

Some of these requirements include completing a work-study package, signed tax forms, a copy of a professional business-like resume and having an interview with the work-study coordinator.

The student is then asked to choose an office or location on campus, while sometimes the placement within a given work site is preselected. Choices of preselected job placements are often a concern students have, according to Shelby.

"We try to place them in an environment that can help them become mentored in their field of study," Shelby said. "For instance, why place a business major that has work-study at a dormitory's front desk? How will they benefit from their major if they are not placed in the business department?"

In some aspects, people have said students abuse the duties and seriousness of a work-study job. Like a job at the mall requires etiquette, punctuality and dependability, these are all the same requirements as a work-study job, on or off campus, said Carol Goodwin, assistant community director of McAllister-Whiteside Residence Hall.

"A lot of students misuse their work-study jobs and don't have to put as much effort like they would a real job," Goodwin said. "Just like an off campus job, if you don't go to work, you do not get the pay. And these are the same procedures with work-study. No show, no pay!"

According to Shelby, a legitimate time card that a work-study student is required to turn in each month should have no more than 20 hours and must be completed and signed by the student's supervisor.

Reported cases of forgery and alleged "stealing time" are considered by some to be a problem among work-study student's and employers at Jackson State.

"That's abuse!" Shelby said. "Once it's detected, they risk losing work-study, and they definitely have to pay it back. Forgery can get the student expelled, and the employer can be prosecuted for federal funds."

Mikel Smith, a senior criminal justice major from Detroit, Mich., said some students should be given more consideration for work-study.

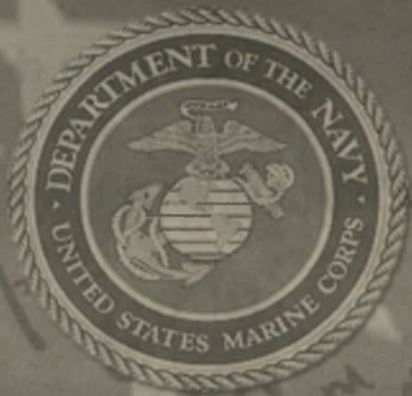

"Students abuse work-study every day, especially in-state students," Smith said. "Not pointing fingers, but us out-of-state students need work-study more so than they do, and they tend to abuse it the most."

Reanetta Hinton, a junior public relations major from Chicago, agrees with Smith.

"Yeah, most definitely!" Hinton said. "It should be for us first and foremost, although we are the reason tuition raises each year along with the increase of drop-out rates."

On another aspect, the coordinator of work-study had a different outlook toward this issue.

"The students outside of Mississippi don't have the same luxuries like an in-state student would," Shelby said. "It should be granted to the person who most needs the funds; and, after all, it's a downside to being an out-of-state student as well."

Two SIUE students pump iron for powerlifting competitions Haislar and Bell to compete nationally

TRAVIS L. ROSS
ASSISTANT SPORTS EDITOR

Two SIUE students are more than just pulling their own weight in statewide power lifting competitions.

In the Southern Illinois Bench Press and Deadlift Championships in Effingham held earlier this month, sophomore Matt Bell bench pressed 360 pounds in the 19-year-old 198-pound weight class. His lift fell just short of the state and national record of 375 pounds.

"I am pleased with my performance, but I can never be satisfied," Bell said. "You can always push yourself further, and that is why I compete. I might miss a lift at one meet, but that motivates me for the next training cycle."

Bell said each power-lifting meet is unique.

"My trainer (senior) Billy Jeffries has really opened my eyes to the wide range of training techniques that can be taken advantage of to become the best you can be, not just physical, but mental as well," Bell said.

Jeffries said he enjoys training for and with Bell.

"Matt brings a unique energy to his workouts, which benefits him tremendously," Jeffries said.

"He is very good with his nutritional habits and follows his training schedule exactly. He has so much room to grow in this sport, and when he competes at the Son Light Power Bench Press and Deadlift Nationals on April 26 in Tuscola, Ill., I fully expect him to set the state and national records in both the bench press and the dead lift."

Senior Erica Haislar set the state record by deadlifting 220 the major reason for her success.

"It's the right amount of motivation and pressure that I need," Haislar said. "His workouts can be hard, but I know that in the end I will benefit from it."

Haislar is already looking for ways to improve before her next meet.

"Basically, I need to work on my strength,"

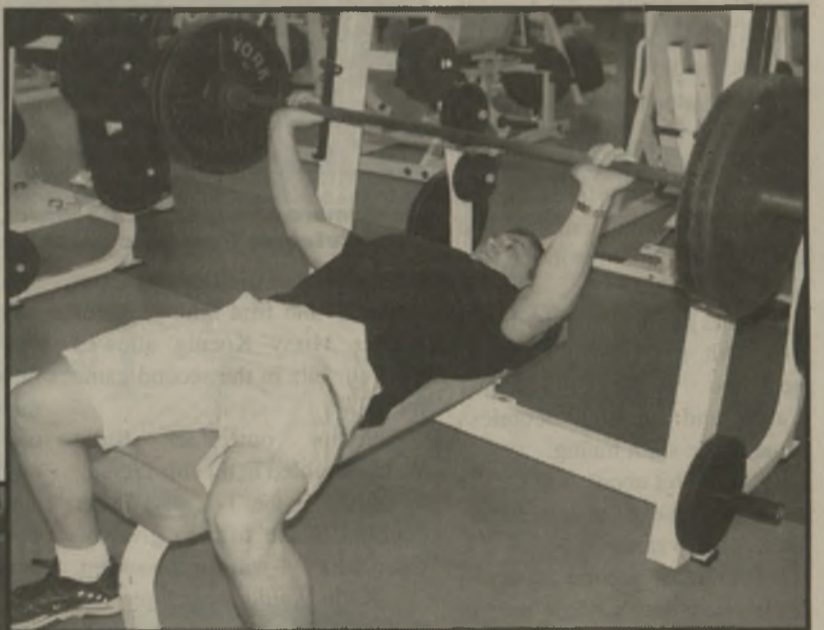

KELI KEENER/ALESTLE
Senior Erica Haislar practices her deadlift in a workout session Monday morning. Haislar is new to the sport of powerlifting.

pounds in the women's 123-pound weight class.

Haislar, who is new to power lifting, credits Jeffries' training as Haislar said. "If I progress the way that I did before the first meet, I should do pretty well in the next meet."

Jeffries said that Haislar brings a solid work ethic to the gym.

"I expected Erica to win her first meet and set the state record in the deadlift, which she did," Jeffries said. "However, she lifted a little more weight than I expected. It was a nice surprise. Erica, like Matt, has unlimited potential in this sport. She is built perfectly for power lifting."

Jeffries said he expects Haislar to win at the SLP Bench Press and Deadlift National Competition.

According to Jeffries, Bell and Haislar are successful because of their hard work and desire to succeed.

"I am in the gym with Matt more than I am with Erica," Jeffries said. "However, outside the gym there are still 22 hours in the day that they have to worry about in regards to their nutrition, sleep and things of that nature, which they both are very good at."

The next competition for Bell and Haislar will be April 26 at the SLP Bench Press and Deadlift Nationals in Tuscola.

Cougar tennis teams kick off spring season

Women's team
beats McKendree;
Men's team falls to 0-2 early

ALESTLE STAFF REPORT

The SIUE women's tennis team played host to McKendree College Wednesday in an exhibition match.

The Cougars defeated the Bearcats 9-0, taking wins in all doubles and singles play.

At No. 1 doubles, the team of junior Coryn Reich and sophomore Chrissy Yingst beat the McKendree duo of Kristin Voegelé and Rebecca Wendel 8-3.

At No. 2 doubles, senior Keli Keener and freshman Gina Wohltman defeated Lori Autenrieb and Amber Raymond 8-1.

Senior Katie McKay and sophomore Allison Coats took an 8-4 win over Emily Guest and Timanye Hackney at the No. 3 spot.

The Cougars blanked the Bearcats in singles action as well.

At No. 1 singles, Reich defeated Wendel in two sets, 7-5, 6-4. At No. 2, Yingst easily overcame Voegelé in straight sets, 6-1, 6-1.

Wohltman beat Autenrieb, 6-0, 6-1 at the No. 3 spot while Keener defeated Raymond, 6-1, 6-4, McKay beat Guest 6-0, 6-2, and Coats won over Devan Roosevelt, 6-0, 6-1 in the No. 4, 5 and 6 positions, respectively.

The Cougars will next see action when they play host to the Principia College Panthers at 3:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Results of that match will be reported in Thursday's edition of the Alestle.

The men's tennis team went on the road to open up its regular season.

The Cougars met with the Norse of Northern Kentucky University Friday, losing 8-1, and the Greyhounds of the University of Indianapolis Saturday, losing 5-1.

Next up for the men's team was a match at the home of the Quincy University Hawks Tuesday. The Alestle will report on the results of that match in Thursday's edition.

Cougar softball suffers first Great Lakes Valley Conference loss

at home

AMY GRANT
ASSISTANT SPORTS EDITOR

AUBREY WILLIAMS/ALESTLE

Sophomore shortstop V.J. Schmidt, 15, and junior outfielder Jenny Esker, 12, huddle up for some tutelage from head coach Sandy Montgomery in a game this weekend at Cougar Field.

It was a bittersweet weekend for the softball team as it reached the 20-win plateau in just 26 games; however, SIUE also saw its 10-game winning streak snapped during extra innings in Sunday's nightcap.

SIUE opened the weekend against the Bellarmine University Knights Saturday at Cougar Field.

Bellarmino senior pitcher Kara Houston held a no-hitter going into the fifth inning, but senior pitcher RyAnn Spann eventually won the dual for the Cougars, allowing four hits and striking out 12 batters in the first game.

SIUE junior outfielder Jenny Esker hit a triple to drive in freshman outfielder Shanna Waldo and break a scoreless game in the sixth inning.

"Jenny hit about .600 for the weekend," head coach Sandy Montgomery said.

Freshman second baseman Holly Neuerburg's single later in the sixth was all the Cougars needed for the 2-0 shutout.

After giving up a run to freshman outfielder Allison Bleser in the first inning, junior pitcher Missy Koenig allowed just four hits in the second game for SIUE.

Senior outfielder Katie Waldo doubled in the third inning to tie the game 1-1, and Esker doubled in the fifth to give the Cougars a 3-1 win for the sweep.

Katie Waldo went three-for-three in the second game with one run, three hits and one RBI.

SIUE took on the Northern Kentucky University Norse in its second doubleheader of the weekend Sunday.

Esker and Neuerburg turned in solid performances in leading the Cougars to a 6-2 win over the Norse in game one.

After Esker laid down a sacrifice bunt to advance a runner, Neuerburg doubled and drove in a run to give SIUE a 1-0 lead in the third inning.

Neuerburg's single broke a

1-1 tie before senior outfielder Koree Claxton hit a three-run triple with the bases loaded. Claxton added a run of her own on a wild pitch to cap off a five-run fifth inning.

Esker was three-for-three in the game with one run and three hits.

Neuerburg went two-for-three from the plate with two hits and two RBIs.

NKU held an early 1-0 lead in the second game until junior first baseman Melissa Lindgren tied the game up with a bases loaded single to drive in Claxton.

An error cost the Norse a run as freshman catcher Alicia DeShasier scored to put the Cougars up 2-1 in the second inning.

The Norse added one run in the third and fourth innings, but the Cougars managed three runs off a bases loaded situation at the bottom of the fourth to recover a 5-3 lead.

With two outs, senior Norse catcher Kristin Koors hit a two-run home run in the seventh to tie the game up 5-5.

A couple of doubles and a fielding error by SIUE led to three unanswered runs in the eighth inning as NKU broke SIUE's winning streak with an 8-5 victory.

"My feelings aren't very good right now considering that we were winning 5-3 with two outs," Montgomery said.

"Obviously it was a tough loss for us, but I'm sure it will be fuel for the fire later this season."

Spann was handed the loss in relief of freshman pitcher Mary Heather White in the sixth inning after giving up five runs.

White allowed three runs, one earned, on eight hits and struck out three in five innings of work.

SIUE remains first in the GLVC with a 20-6 overall record and a 7-1 conference mark.

SIUE will take on the Quincy University Hawks in a 3 p.m. doubleheader Wednesday in Quincy.

"We need to go up there and get back on track," Montgomery said. "I don't care how good or bad they are; Quincy is a tough place to play."

Baseball team moves to No. 8

Cougars split conference games

TRAVIS L. ROSS
ASSISTANT SPORTS EDITOR

For the second time this season the SIUE baseball team has strung together three consecutive wins, bumping the Cougars up to No. 8 in the Great Lakes Valley Conference.

According to head coach Gary Collins, the Cougars don't plan on letting go of this winning streak anytime soon.

"I'd like to make it 13 wins in a row," Collins said. "We need to start advancing and moving up a little bit."

The Cougars split a two game set with the conference-leading University of Missouri-St. Louis Rivermen Wednesday at SIUE and Thursday in St. Louis.

The Cougars won the first game 8-7 but lost the second 15-9.

Freshman pitcher David Briesacher earned the win in the first game for SIUE, working six innings, allowing eight hits and striking out six.

Senior pitcher Nick Seibert sealed the deal in the seventh, sitting down all three batters he faced.

"It has been consistent this season," Collins said. "It is very encouraging to see."

Briesacher is 2-0 with a 1.88 ERA this season. The save was Seibert's first of the season.

The Cougars lost the first game of a doubleheader against the Flyers of Lewis University Saturday 2-1, but turned around to win the second game 1-0 and both games of a doubleheader Sunday, 5-4 and 8-4 respectively.

"The weather on Saturday and Sunday was not conducive to scoring a lot of runs," Collins said.

"It was 37 (degrees) on Saturday with the wind blowing in, and it was cold and snowing on and off on Sunday," Collins said.

Fresh off of his complete game no-hitter, junior Brian Keating responded by lasting another complete game in the first of four contests against the Flyers. Keating gave up three hits and struck out twelve in the outing.

"Sometimes there is no justice in this game," Collins said. "He pitched better than anyone this weekend, and he got the loss."

Seibert returned to starting form in the second game, shutting down the Flyers through 7.2 innings and giving up only four hits to improve his record to 2-2 on the season with a 5.82 ERA.

Seibert took a seat on the bench after having problems with his right elbow.

According to Collins, losing Seibert would be a blow to the Cougars.

"We have depth," Collins said. "But you can't replace a guy like that. There is no one else on this team with his kind of stuff."

Senior catcher Jason Kessler continued his rampage this season, going 11 of 24 at the plate and collecting five runs and six RBIs over the six-game stretch.

Junior infielder Brad Scott chipped in as well, going 7 of 24, scoring seven runs and driving in three RBIs.

"Kessler has been very consistent this season," Collins said.

"I think Brad has been one of our top two hitters and one of the more solid offensive players on this team."

"It feels good since we finally won a series in conference," sophomore pitcher Ryan Spurgeon said. "Things are starting to click."

Spurgeon also pointed out that the Cougars had a rough start in 2001, when the team finished the season with 41 wins.

"It is a matter of getting used to playing baseball again," Spurgeon said.

"Now we are on a roll, and we are getting things together. When you don't practice on an actual field, things like ground balls and pitching just aren't the same.

"It takes a while to get back in the groove," Spurgeon said.

The Cougars' next game will be against the Quincy University Hawks at 2:30 p.m. Wednesday, April 2, at Roy Lee field.

Golf team Spirit Challenge set for April 8

KELI KEENER
SPORTS EDITOR

SIUE's women's golf team will play host to a Spirit Challenge benefit Tuesday, April 8, at Shenanigan's Bar and Grill in Edwardsville.

There will be food, drinks, fun, games and prizes, with a portion of the profits going to benefit the Cougar golf program.

"The people at Shenanigan's are hard at work helping us prepare for this benefit," coach Larry Bennett said. "We are looking forward to it, and I hope everyone comes out to have some fun."

Doors open at 11 a.m. for lunch and will remain open for dinner and a cocktail hour until 9 p.m.

A silent auction, including items such as an SIUE signature golf bag, will be held. Portions of the proceeds will go to SIUE's golf program. Shenanigan's weekly college night, featuring a disc jockey, will follow the benefit from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

For more information on the Spirit Challenge benefit or to donate auction items, contact the SIUE women's golf coach by calling 650-3236 or by e-mailing lbennet@siue.edu.

Why is it so hard for a 30-year-old to think about retirement? When you're young, retirement planning is pretty far down on your list of concerns. Say, somewhere between the melting polar ice caps and dishpan hands. And that's completely understandable. But by planning early and sticking to that plan, you can increase the money you'll have to enjoy retirement, and potentially decrease the years you'll spend working. We offer a range of different options, including tax-deferred retirement plans, SRAs, and IRAs, all with low expenses. Now that's something to fall in love with.
