SIUE's new chancellor to arrive this week

JAMIE FORSYTHE
NEWS EDITOR

A death in the family delayed Chancellor Vaughn Vandegrift's expected July 1 arrival, but when he does take the reins Friday, he'll be living in Cougar Village.

Vandegrift's mother-in-law died Thursday in New Jersey, and services were held Tuesday, according to Bill Hamrick, the chancellor's executive assistant.

"Everything in the administration aspect of the university is fully taken care of over the phone and some e-mail," Hamrick said Tuesday.

Hamrick said that after the funeral services, the new chancellor and his wife, Sue, plan to drive from New Jersey to Georgia to pick up their belongings.

They then plan to travel from Georgia to Illinois and will be here Thursday afternoon, Hamrick added.

as well as chief information officer.

Hamrick said Vandegrift is expected to be in his office part of Thursday and his first full day in his new position will be Friday.

"He is eager to get here and get started. He really did feel at home when he came here for his interview," Hamrick said.

At least for a short while, the Vandegrifts will make their home in Cougar Village.

The couple bought a home in the nearby Lincoln Knolls subdivision.

The closing date for their new house, however, is in mid-August.

The Vandegrifts will be living in family housing in Cougar Village for the next six weeks.

Web Radio changes format

KELLY SCHOMAKER
NEWS STRINGER

SIUE's Web Radio has switched its format to all '80s music.

The change, which took effect Thursday, was due to low audience ratings. Before the change, Web Radio disc jockeys played country, rap, hip-hop and rock.

"Web Radio has been struggling to find an audience since the station signed on in January (2003)," Web Radio President E.B. Stevenson said.

The majority of the Web Radio staff said a format change was necessary for Web Radio to find an audience.

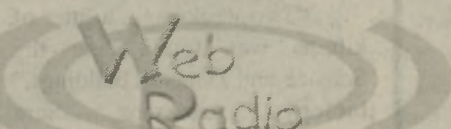

"Ever since 104.1 The Mall went off air, we are the only '80s radio station in Downstate Illinois and metropolitan St. Louis," Stevenson said.

Stevenson added that 104.1 The Mall played more new-wave music, unlike Web Radio's Stevenson also said the student-produced shows such as "The Mix," "L'il Bit Country," "Aaron's Opry" and "Fusion Beats" will remain part of Web Radio's schedule along with new programs that may come in the fall.

The Web address for SIUE's Web radio is webradio.siue.edu. Web Radio is a 24-hour listening program that provides live music from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. every day and automated music overnight.

Students interested in Web Radio should contact Stevenson, who works at WSIE, or WSIE General Manager Frank Akers, the Web Radio adviser.

"Web Radio will play strictly '80s pop-oriented hits, in which it has to make the Top 40 on Billboard's pop charts between Jan. 1, 1980, and Dec. 31, 1989," Stevenson said.

Arboretum receives recognition

SIUE's Myer Arboretum has been designated a Shaws Garden East site by the Missouri Botanical Garden.

This designation provides a plan for how to take further care of the arboretum, said Pat Williams, vice chancellor of University Relations and chief executive officer of the SIUE Foundation.

The arboretum was named in 1990 to honor the biologist and former dean of the School of Sciences, Donal G. Myer.

The development provides a living laboratory for faculty and students and "an attractive locale

KELLY SCHOMAKER
NEWS STRINGER

The SIUE String Development Program is sponsoring a string camp for children ages 5 through 14 who play violin, viola and cello.

The Suzuki camp will be from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. July 14 through 17 in Dunham Hall. Faculty will include Suzuki and traditional teachers from the SIUE String Development Program as well as teachers from Webster University Community Music School in St. Louis and private string teachers.

Each Suzuki student will take part in a small technique class, a larger Suzuki repertory class and a pre-music reading class.

The reading class levels are music and movement, beginning music reading, elementary orchestra and chamber music.

Students will perform solos for one another during their Saturday technique class.

Traditional string classes also will be offered for public or private school students who have completed at least one year of class instruction.

Classes will include fun string tunes, note reading and orchestra for students entering sixth or seventh grade.

The camp will close with a gala concert at 2 p.m. on July 17, during which each of the classes, the orchestra and chamber groups will perform for parents and friends in the instrumental rehearsal room in Dunham Hall.

The cost for the camp is $130 and does not include lunch.

For an additional charge, students may choose to participate in individual lessons taught by camp faculty.

An adult must accompany children who have not entered sixth grade.

Co-directors of the camp are Vera Sulentic-McCoy, director of the SIUE String Program, and Vicki Lottes.

Stray cats on campus

KELLY SCHOMAKER
NEWS STRINGER

A biology professor is doing her part to find homes for strays on campus.

"Two weeks ago, a litter of kittens was found near the Science and Dunham buildings," biology professor Sara Sawyer said.

A second litter was discovered a week later, she added.

"I decided that they were worth catching and taking home to take care of," Sawyer said.

Sawyer saw to it that the animals were litter box trained, socialized and had their first shots.

She then put them up for adoption in an e-mail to the SIUE staff and faculty.

"The kittens have found good homes now," she said Friday.

Sawyer took care of two males, one with short black fur and one with long orange fur and a white face and paws, and two females, a gray tabby and a white one with a black ear.

"Needless to say, they are all very cute," Sawyer said in her e-mail.

"We can expect more stray animals throughout the summer," Sawyer said. "We have feral cats on campus every year. It's a recognized problem, but no one has the money, time or effort to fix the problem," she said.

She noted that cats and other pets should be spayed or neutered.

She added that people finding abandoned pets should take them to animal shelters.

Danger lurks in the sparkle

Thanks to a lot of fast talking on my part, and a little bit of planning, I made it through the Fourth of July without having to deal with one of my greatest fears of all time – watching my friends or family set off fireworks.

You're probably questioning my motives. Of course, like the rest of the world, I enjoy watching the bright sparkles of chemicals set on fire and flung through the air. I will join in with the "oohs" and "ahs" that escape the watching crowd. I like seeing the faces of the little kids as they cover their ears and stare at the glowing sky. However, because of my perpetual paranoia and the multitude of fireworks horror stories, I tend to get a slight uneasy feeling whenever I watch someone set off fireworks.

Heaven forbid I should ever try to light one myself, except for the occasional sparkler. I would have to run to the next county before I felt safe after lighting a Roman candle. I know this because last year I ignored that voice in my head and went with my friends into the backfields of Moro. We were going to set off fireworks, very small and unattractive fireworks, ones that should not cause any sort of concern. After about the third bottle rocket, I was convinced that my friends were going to light the fields on fire and blow up any cars that passed by.

I know that's a little overboard but most people don't know that every year thousands of people are injured because they were careless with fireworks. According to the Consumer Product Safety Commission, those numbers can be anywhere from 8,000 to 11,000 injured. In 1997 a fireworks barge in Alton exploded and killed three of the pyrotechnic workers. The workers were trained professionals, but when it comes to fireworks you can't take their power for granted.

Last year, while I was out in those fields, the rest of my family was in my uncle's yard in Carlyle shooting off fireworks. They had a pipe from which they were launching the fireworks. One of the small children placed a bottle rocket in the wrong way. The rocket exploded and the pipe went flying. Luckily, no one was injured but it was decided that from then on my family will attend municipal fireworks displays instead.

That's not to say no one should set off fireworks. If you don't suffer from the same paranoia I do, and it's legal where you live, then I say go for it. Just take heed that anything that explodes is dangerous and should be handled with caution. And, if you have fireworks left over, all I ask is that you are careful and please don't fire them around me. As for this year's Fourth of July celebration, I can thank the city of St. Louis for a great fireworks display. Thanks to Fair St. Louis, we enjoyed a safe holiday with a great show. And I can say that for one year my nerves were calmer than ever before.

Chancellor Vandegrift moves in never have made any movies after "Field of Dreams" and the chancellor should never, I repeat, never, live in Cougar Village.

That's right, Chancellor Vaughn Vandegrift and his wife will be taking up residence on the family side of Cougar Village for six weeks while waiting to close on the house they are purchasing.

Like "Dirt Cheap Beer and Liquor" claims to be the last refuge for the persecuted smoker, Cougar Village is the last refuge for the persecuted college student. The powers that be give us a little bit of leeway and, in return, we don't cause too much trouble. Besides, without us the cops on this campus would be bored to death, or at least they would get more homework done during their shifts.

While I'm not willing to cave in and accept this whole chancellor-moving-into-my-neck-of-the-woods thing, I am willing to compromise. We've gotta get something good in return for this deal.

First of all, let's make life easier for everybody and move Coffee with the Chancellor out to the village. That move alone will increase the likelihood that college students actually show up to the event. Another way to up the attendance to this event is to ditch the coffee and have a cookout. Let's call it the BBC, Beer and Brats with the Chancellor.

Then maybe they'll fix the connection between the Cougar Card readers and some of the washing and drying machines after he spends about $40 the first time he tries to do laundry.

Because paying for laundry on this campus with a Cougar Card is like playing Russian Roulette – you don't know which ones are going to take the card and which ones aren't. You just have to swipe the card and punch in all of the stupid machines just to find the four that work. That's right, I said four machines.

I also have to wonder, does the chancellor have parking amnesty? I'm sure it's not too hard for the parking police to figure out which vehicle not to slap the ticket on. It should be easy to recognize a Beemer in between a beat up, bumperless mid-80's Ford Tempo with spinning rims and a pinto with packaging tape covering one window and a rice burner.

If nothing else, I formally invite the chancellor over to my place sometime to watch "Field of Dreams" and feast on dollar McChicken sandwiches – I'll have to pass on the senior citizen Playboy.

Travis Ross
Columnist

KARA SCHUFURT

Vacation season has arrived. After honoring our country's Independence Day this past weekend, it is time to celebrate our liberty with the pursuit of travel.

"The best way to get away from the hustle and bustle of everyday life and to experience what our country, or world, has to offer is to plan a getaway," said Vicki Carlock, a travel agent at Dillard's Travel in Fairview Heights.

The first step in organizing a fantastic summer vacation is to determine what you're looking for in that great escape from ordinary life. Are you wanting a great family location, or an inexpensive retreat? How about a getaway for two? Or just someplace where the young, fun crowd goes?

According to Carlock, the most popular points of interest, in terms of value and accessibility, are the locations of Cancun, Jamaica and cruises. These locations offer a variety of interests for all types, ages and budgets. Carlock said that in Cancun, for example, there is something for everyone depending upon what hotel and area you stay in.

For those who have the means to live spontaneously, there are last-minute trips available at various travel agencies. Carlock explained that up to a week before departure one could get a great package deal at a great price. Las Vegas, is an immensely popular last-minute destination because there are continuous flights in cycle, regardless if the timing, it's possible to have a three- to four-day vacation to Las Vegas, including flight and accommodations for around $300 per person.

Many travel agencies and Web sites provide countless vacation ideas categorized by specific desires. For example, travel.yahoo.com published its second poll on voters' favorite vacation spots. For example, if one feels that a sandy beach is the ideal vacation, yahoo.com provides a list of the top 10 United States beaches:

1. Waikiki, Hawaii
2. Key West, Fla.
3. Kaanapali, Hawaii
4. Miami, Fla.
5. Panama City, Fla.
6. Tampa Bay, Fla.
7. Newport, Calif.
8. Santa Barbara, Calif.
9. Myrtle Beach, S.C.

Hawaii is known around the world for its magnificent beaches. The beaches are great for tanning and the water is great for surfing.

Another inexpensive trip recommended by smarterliving.com is visiting national parks. National parks are easily accessible and always a good value for all ages. Accommodations are usually cheaper due to camping or lodging, and activities are also reasonably priced. Various cruises can also be economic vacations. Since May through October is the low season for the Caribbean, summer is the right time to find bargains. As offered on the Smarterliving Web site, even last-minute cruise ships are available for prices as low as $329.

Carlock added that international travel has slightly decreased since the Sept. 11 attacks and the Middle East conflict, and prices may be slightly lower at this time due to such circumstances. However, the most admired international destinations tend to be the European countries and Canada. Although London and Paris are normally not the typical budget-smart vacations, due to certain circumstances, such as fewer tourists booking in advance and lower interest in traveling abroad, it is possible to get some one-shot deals.

Whatever the reasons for taking a summer vacation, just remember that there are thousands of places to see and adventures to take and many ways to do it. With the numerous Web sites to accommodate anyone's desires, planning a dream vacation is only at the fingertips, and with the help of a travel agency, the agent does all the difficult arrangements, and a monthly payment plan can be designed around anyone's

GLVC takes an addition of three teams

AJIT OZA
SPORTS REPORTER

The Great Lakes Valley Conference Council has added three schools, bringing the conference to 14 schools.

The GLVC Council of Presidents added Drury University in Springfield, Mo., Rockhurst University in Kansas City and the University of Missouri-Rolla. The teams will be joining the conference for the 2005-06 year.

Current members of the GLVC are Lewis University, Northern Kentucky University, Quincy University, SIUE, University of Missouri-St. Louis, University of Wisconsin-Parkside, Bellarmine University, Kentucky Wesleyan College, Saint Joseph's College, the University of Indianapolis and the University of Southern Indiana.

The teams were added June 29. The additions put the conference in a three-way tie with the Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference and the Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference for the largest memberships in the National Collegiate Athletic Association Division II.

Many different parties thought of expanding. Great Lakes Valley Conference commissioner Jim Naumovich said, "The idea was brought to the conference by faculty reps etc. The expansion juncture was mutual, as both the conference and universities expressed an interest in joining the conference. All parties involved were interested in the stabilized viability of the conference in the future."

The addition of the three institutions brings both athletic achievement and academic achievement. "During the interview process, not only were the athletic success of the institutions looked at, but the academic side of the institutions were looked at as well," Naumovich said. "We were very impressed with the three institutions, they fit all the criteria that we had set," Naumovich added.

Expanding the league by three teams is a long process that takes two years to complete. After the process was initiated two years ago, everything started to take shape last July. "Last July, the committee that formed to explore expansion made visits to the schools, and after those visits, the committee made reports and we have basically been looking over those reports for the past year," Naumovich said. "It took us two years of discussing, interviewing and planning to get to the point where, last week, we were able to finalize the plans to expand the conference and make that announcement."

Now that the GLVC has expanded, the conference is not left to worry about membership and other problems if a team decides to leave the conference in the future. "When you are a bigger conference, if a school decides to move, you do not have to worry about the long-term success of the conference. Also, whenever we go to the NCAA conferences, we now have three more teams voting together on key NCAA legislation," Naumovich added.

"I am very excited about the situation, but there is still a lot of work to be done in order for the new schedules to be done by the Fall 2005 sports season," Naumovich said.

WARNING: PROLONGED EXPOSURE TO NOISES LOUDER THAN
85 DECIBELS CAN RESULT IN PERMANENT HEARING LOSS.

Millions of Americans expose themselves to noise levels above 85 decibels for hours at a time – the level audiologists identify as the danger zone. Lawn mowers, sporting events, live or recorded music, power tools, even traffic and crowded restaurants can sustain these levels. If you're around noises like these for prolonged periods, you're risking permanent hearing loss. For more on the 85 dB threshold, and ways to protect your hearing health, visit ASHA.org.
