Students voice opinions on hacker charges

CORY FREEMAN
NEWS STRINGER

Three students under investigation for allegedly hacking into two university servers are being defended by other students and staff who claim the students did nothing wrong.

Members of the SIUE Computer Association have been posting their responses to the investigation on their message board, <http://caos.siu.edu/modules/news>. Many remarks defend the students who allegedly downloaded students' names and identification numbers.

Robert Lamonica, a lecturer of computer science at SIUE, said on the message board that he believes nothing illegal took place.

"If you're using the SIUE network to break the law, posted, "The supposed crack was not due to an OIT worker forgetting to set a password. It was due to his or her stupid self having a virus on his or her computer system."

Lamonica said that he spoke with one of the students who is under investigation.

According to Lamonica, one student in the apartment said a roommate "was doing a routine security check (port scan) on the computers in their apartment and decided to do the same on the Office of Information Technology's part of the network."

The student then said the roommate discovered a server "typically used ... to distribute software and data to the public, (so) he decided to look around."

At that point, the student allegedly found files that held student identifications numbers and other information.

The student thought his name might have been on the server and downloaded the rest of the data to examine himself.

Another roommate who works at OIT was told about this the next morning and reported it. OIT personnel examined the server and found data had been insecurely posted, according to Lamonica's source. OIT then informed authorities and the students' computers were confiscated.

"My source reports that he is unhappy that his data was confiscated," Lamonica said, "but he is confident that an examination of it will show that he did not personally download any student data."

Lamonica also said the student was "optimistic that the next meeting with school officials should be the last one concerning this incident."

"If you're using the SIUE network to break the law, then that deserves punishment. I don't think there was anything illegal here."

then that deserves punishment," Lamonica said. "I don't think there was anything illegal here."

Contrary to published reports, the students did not get into the server because of a forgetful Office of Information Technology worker, according to message board comments.

Campus community alerted to be on watch for crime

KRISTEN REBER
NEWS EDITOR

University police are warning the campus about a thief.

Thefts have occurred "mostly in the classroom areas," University Police Chief Regina Hays said. "Dunham Hall has been hit most recently. A lot of times, office areas (are also at risk)."

Thefts have also occurred in Peck Hall and the Science Building. In Peck Hall, a wallet was stolen from a purse, and in Dunham Hall, a purse was taken from a backpack.

A wallet taken in the Science Building was recovered in a trash can less $10.

"It's very hard to pinpoint (and recover stolen items), it varies. Sometimes they'll just dispose of it in a bathroom, locker room," Hays said. "Obviously, it is important not to carry oodles of cash. We'll find wallets for just the money missing, especially, in this last rash of thefts," Hays said.

Last week police put out a safety bulletin that offered advice on how to avoid theft.

"Most of the things listed (in the bulletin) are especially important," Hays said. "(Such as) not leaving your stuff unattended, even if you are just going to get a drink of water. It is important to take your belongings with you. Don't leave your stuff at a desk without locking it up. It doesn't take very long for someone to grab it."

Cancellation of any missing credit cards is among the suggestions for protection.

"We recommend everyone makes photocopies of everything in your wallet. If you make copies of the fronts and backs of items in your wallet, it is easier to call companies about your card being stolen," Hays said.

"The biggie is canceling credit cards. Make sure you are up to date on the last check number you wrote, so if your checkbook is stolen you know where you left off. If you have a debit card, when was the last time you used it?" Hays said. "The important thing is trying to prevent the identity theft issue."

Hays recommends contacting the University Police Department immediately if you believe anything has been stolen. University police can be reached at 911 in emergency situations and 650-3324 in nonemergency situations.

"You want to make a police report with us," Hays said. "Obviously, the educational factor is teaching people what they can do for themselves (to prevent these crimes)," Hays said. "If we know we have an active area, we'll increase the patrols."

University breaks ground on new conference center

BRENT NAYLOR
NEWS REPORTER

Work is under way on Spring Green Lodge, a multimillion-dollar hotel and conference center in University Park.

Dignitaries broke ground for the project Aug. 19.

The two-phase project will be a tribute to world-renowned architect Frank Lloyd Wright.

The lodge's first phase will be developed on a 9-acre section of University Park's nearly 300 acres by summer 2005.

Construction expenses are expected to run higher than $7 million.

The lodge will have reproductions of drawings, photographs and other material honoring Wright's 70 years as America's leading architect.

As a conference center, the lodge will be able to accommodate 300 people. In addition to the lodge, there will be another building with 54 suites.

SIUE Chancellor Vaughn Vandegrift believes the lodge will benefit the university.

"The presence of the lodge adds value to the university because it will hold conferences, meetings and attract visitors, giving greater recognition to SIUE," Vandegrift said. "Students and their families will have a great place to stay when visiting the campus. This will be a beautiful Frank Lloyd Wright inspired facility, complete with an architectural museum."

Edwardsville Mayor Gary Niebur praised the development as "an architectural masterpiece" and "a first-class hotel facility."

Learn more about the vote

SCHALENE HOUSTON
NEWS STRINGER

SIUE students still have many opportunities to register to vote before the November elections.

Assistant Director of Leadership Development Suzanne Kutterer-Siburt said she was surprised about last spring's voter registration crowd.

"We had a large turnout for the spring," Kutterer-Siburt said. "Last January students seemed to be interested."

Students have different events they may attend to learn more about voter registration.

"We are trying to create awareness because it seems like the newer voters have a poor turnout," said Diane Schilling, Kimmel Leadership Center secretary.

The various presentations range from absentee ballot information to a student session featuring former presidential secretaries Marlin Fitzwater and Joe Lockhart.

The absentee ballot information will be presented 11:30 a.m. until 1 p.m. on Sept. 8, and the student session will be at 5:30 p.m. Oct. 13 in the Meridian Ballroom.

Fitzwater was the former secretary of late former President Ronald Reagan and President George H.W. Bush. Lockhart was the secretary of President William Clinton.

The two will give their views and comments of the political scene and the coming election.

Kutterer-Siburt said these events were coordinated with other organizations both on and off campus, including the League of Women Voters Edwardsville Area.

University mourns engineer

KRISTEN REBER

Funeral services were Sunday for James Gowen, 57, a Facilities Management plant-operating engineer.

Gowen died Aug. 26 at his home in St. Elmo. He joined the university in 1989.

"He was highly professional," co-worker Steve Lewis said. "He commanded the highest standards from those he worked around and there's never been any before or since who was as professional."

Gowen had been on medical leave since June 2003, according to Lewis, due to a "very rare form of neural muscular disease."

Prior to joining the university, Gowen served in the U.S. Coast Guard and in the Air Force. During his 20 years of service, he attained the rank of master chief.

Gowen's cremated remains will be scattered in Antarctica by Coast Guard personnel, a place Gowen enjoyed during his military career.

Joy Eisenreich, a dental assistant in the School of Dental Medicine, died Aug. 26 at her home in Alton.

Funeral services were Monday at Gent Funeral Home in Alton.

Eisenreich, 41, joined the Dental School staff in 1988 but recently had been on part-time disability.

"Her folks were right when they named her Joy because she definitely was a joy to be around," Dental School Director Derek Forrester said. "She was very positive and wonderful person to be with. She was irreplaceable."

Before her death, co-workers and friends put together items to show Eisenreich how much she meant to them.

"It was a quilt that had her favorite colors, Snoopy prints that she liked so well. Everyone wrote on the back of it — little notes to her," Dental Assistant Glennita Clendenen said. "She wasn't able to see it before she died but her family thought very much of it. They really liked it."

Alarms give a round of sound

ALESTLE STAFF REPORT

Civil defense and fire alarms systems will undergo their monthly test at 10 a.m. Tuesday.

Civil defense alarms will sound first, followed shortly by the fire alarms. The state-required exercise ensures the systems are functioning. The exercise is also done to familiarize the campus community with the sounds.

Sirens will sound for 1 to 2 minutes and fire alarms for 30 seconds to 1 minute. No evacuations will be necessary.

Civil defense sirens emit a long, wavering, intermittent blast, most frequently for tornado alerts. Fire alarms are activated from building pull stations and produce a steady ringing sound.

If you are unable to hear either the sirens or alarms, please e-mail that information with your name, building address and phone number to Facilities Management at fmserv@siue.edu.

Did anybody else feel like the 2004 Olympic games were a really big advertisement for performance-enhancing drugs?

If Bob Costas had to open the summer Olympic games again, it might go a little something like this: "Welcome to the 2004 Olympics brought to you by Clenbuterol Hydrochloride! Hundreds of athletes around the world have been lifting bulk bottles of pills and shooting up for years to get ready for these special events."

Athletes got kicked out for using traditional stimulants like Clenbuterol or Cathine,

Olympics were a downer

but then there was athletes caught out. Two of those Greek weightlifter Leonidis athletes had to return gold Sampanis who was stripped of medals. These games, however, did the bronze medal for using testosterone.

I can understand why an athlete on illegal stimulants may get away with it. I don't, however, understand how you can't spot a weightlifter on testosterone until the whole competition is done. Don't you think the International Olympic Committee would have flagged the guy who was covered in fur, foaming at the mouth and eating his opponents, literally?

Whatever happened to Wheaties?

Overall, 11 athletes were given the boot this year. Getting the gold medal in ejections was Hungary, which had three make me proud to be an American. The good ol' United States led the medal tally with 103, including 35 gold medals, and not one of our players got pulled for doping.

The fact that the United States fared so well says something to me: Either our performance-enhancing drugs are better than every other country's performance-enhancing drugs or the IOC is testing us for the wrong drugs.

Even if we did have untraceable or better drugs, they didn't do a whole lot of good for the men's basketball team. You could've put trampolines on Team USA's end of the floor and the team still wouldn't have won games. The team just didn't have a chance.

And, why were Americans so shocked when the "Dream Team" lost a few games to international teams? I've been watching international players in the National Basketball Association knock around American basketball players for almost four years now.

Hell, we could've done without a medal in basketball entirely – we would've still had a 102 others.

Stress no laughing matter

The other day a friend of mine asked me if I was stressed. I had to laugh. If you could measure stress on a scale of levels 1 to 10, with 1 being the lowest and 10 being the highest, I'd say I'm stressed to a level of at least 7. Being in the second week of classes, I'm a little worried that I am so stressed already. But stress is everywhere, and it only takes a little to build up till it becomes intimidating.

Well, once the rest of the office heard me say I was stressed, I was given numerous ideas on how to deal with my tension.

The first of these suggestions was to meditate. I've never actually tried to meditate, but it didn't sound too terrible. I gave it a shot. I sat in my room and tried to quiet my mind. If you can imagine a marching band and a neon light and fireworks show crammed into a 10 foot square, that is what my mind was like. Every time I thought I was getting somewhere, some other important thought would pop into my head. I gave up and sought other options.

Political Cartoon

Another person told me I should pick one activity and concentrate on it for three hours and just not think about anything else. Well, I tried that too, but the only thing I could think of to do for that period of time is to paint and after dragging out everything that I have to paint with, and trying to think of something to paint, I was ready to give up.

I might have followed another suggestion to drink, but I'd be afraid that if it worked, it would be my resort for all my stress, and let me tell you all, I am always a little stressed, at least a level 2. Drinking would be out.

My final thought was to write. That is where this column came from. I have been writing to calm my emotions for years and years, but it never occurred to me to sit down and write something until my emotional highs and lows have gotten so nuts that I'm ready to explode. I'm hoping that this works.

see STRESS, page 7

For anyone else who is having stress issues, whether they come now or later in the year, I suggest that you take a minute to yourself and find a way to calm down. Stress can affect the way you work, interact with others, how you sleep, and it can damage your health. There isn't anything worth getting so stressed about that it ends up hurting you. Whatever it takes, find a way to de-stress yourself. You'll be a happier person, and everyone likes happy people.

Sororities looking as part of recr

THOMAS C. PHILLIPS III
LIFESTYLES STRINGER

The name has changed, but the game is still the same.

Formerly known to SIUE students as Rush Week, Sorority Recruitment Week begins Saturday and runs through Wednesday.

"The term 'rushing' is a little obsolete," Greek Life Coordinator John Davenport said. "We're trying to showcase it for what it is. Right now, we're hoping to expand the Greek system on campus, and this week, it's the sororities' turn. We're going to have them all set up in the University Center so people can see each group, meet members of each organization and find out which organization fits them the best."

The week, dubbed "Where The Stars Come Out To Shine," is just one of the many changes that students may notice about the sorority recruitment process.

The Collegiate Panhellenic Council sororities that will participate in Sorority Recruitment Week are Alpha Phi, Alpha Sigma Tau and Delta Phi Epsilon. Tables with representatives from each organization will be set up during the week in the Morris University Center, with a host of activities for those seeking membership in any of the three organizations.

Davenport added that although the selection process is rigorous, it works "pretty well."

"It's a very intense process, but the ladies have been doing it for quite a while," he said. "And it works very well for them. They're very organized and precise with it."

According to Kimmel Leadership Center, in order to participate in recruitment week, interested students must have the following: a 2.5 minimum GPA, be enrolled in at least one undergraduate course at SIUE, not have been a member of an National Panhellenic Council sorority within one calendar year and complete a Greek membership agreement.

Alpha Phi, founded at Syracuse University in 1872 by 10 women, had its SIUE chapter established in 1974.

Although it is officially known as a fraternity, according to its national Web site, www.alphaphi.org, the organization is "... dedicated to promoting sisterhood, cultivating leadership, encouraging intellectual curiosity and

The organization also hosts several mixers and a powder-puff football game against Alpha Sigma Tau Sorority.

Alpha Sigma Tau was founded in 1899 in Ypsilanti, Mich., and the SIUE chapter was formed in 1972. According to its national Web www.alphasigmatau.org, the eight founders of the organization formed the sorority with the ideal of "friendships forged in tradition." The Web site also states that it is the third oldest educational sorority.

Junior Teresa Witherow, recruitment chair for Alpha Sigma Tau, stated the sorority's mission statement.

"Since our founding in 1899, our members have lived up to the same ideals: to be active, self-reliant and trustworthy," Witherow said.

Witherow also mentioned that diversity is the key to her organization's distinction.

"We are made up of a diverse group of girls," Witherow said. "But there is someone like everyone, pretty much."

Alpha Sigma Tau also offers a number of social and philanthropic events throughout the year such as mixers, Habitat For Humanity, American Red Cross Blood drives and the A Book in Every Home program.

Delta Phi Epsilon Sorority, founded in 1917 at New York University Law School by five women, brought a chapter to SIUE in 1996.

According to its national Web site, www.dphie.org, the organization is "built on the bonds of sisterhood, pride in the sorority and support for one another."

"We do a lot of work in the community," sophomore Sila Karacal said. "We make Easter baskets for terminally ill children, we donate to anti-eating disorder and cystic fibrosis organizations and we have the principles of sisterhood, self, service, scholarship and social as our building blocks for success."

Sophomore Elizabeth Hayes said that the organization is "nonsectarian, and is also the youngest on campus," which sets it apart from the other Greek organizations.

For more information on each organization, contact the sororities during Recruitment Week, or log on to www.siue.edu/kimmel/greek.

Ludo returns to rock the Quad

SONY PRIYA
LIFESTYLES STRINGER

Ludo, St. Louis' own rock band, will rock the campus from noon to 1 p.m. Thursday at Livewire in the Stratton Quadrangle.

Livewire is a live band concert, sponsored by Campus Activities Board. The free event takes place Tuesdays and Thursdays throughout September.

Ludo consists of Andrew Volpe on lead vocals and rhythm guitar, Tim Ferrell on backing vocals and lead guitar, Tim Convy on backing vocals and keyboard, Marshall Fanciullo on bass and Matt Palermo on drums. Their music is lyric-driven and melody-based rock 'n' roll.

The band's goal is "To entertain people without making them dumber!"

Ludo was formed in 2000

when Volpe and Ferrell, both from St. Louis, started playing shows while on breaks from college. In 2003, fellow St. Louisan, Convy, joined the band along with Texan Palermo and Omaha-based Fanciullo. The band then recorded its first album.

The album was released at the end of August 2003 and is available online at the band's Web site at www.ludorock.com.

The first show was Aug. 8, 2003, in Indianapolis. Just 10 months later, the band celebrated its 100th show with a performance in Kansas City. Soon Ludo's songs were being played on the radio.

By the year's end, the band had received more radio requests than any other independent band.

For more information, contact Campus Activities Board at 650-3371.

Cougars volleyball sets up for great season

ZACH GROVES
SPORTS REPORTER

Tuesday night was a big one for the Cougar volleyball team, as a huge crowd filled up the Vadalabene Center to witness the first home game of the season.

The fans did not leave disappointed, as they watched the Cougars route the University of Illinois-Springfield Prairie Stars in all three sets for their fourth win of the season, and their fourth sweep.

Head coach Todd Gober was ecstatic about the crowd turnout. "I'm very happy with the home opening win, with the big crowd, lots of support and a really fun atmosphere, the girls came out pumped with a lot of adrenaline."

Gober admitted, though, they tried to spike the ball with lots of power, and as a result started out sluggish. "However, they settled down in the second and third sets and played their usual game for the win."

Junior outside hitter Shannon Winkeler, who also helped lead the team with 10 kills, agreed with Gober about the slow start, but in the end the team got the job done.

"We played well as a team, and we're starting to come together. The juniors are doing a good job leading, though we really all are all the leaders. First-game jitters were in us. But eventually you forget the work involved, and about the middle of the first game we finally settled down."

Along with Winkeler, junior middle blocker Heather Bonde led the team with 10 kills, and junior setter Krystal Majernik led with 36 assists. Junior middle hitter Tina Talsma led SIUE in the attack with a .561 average and six blocks on defense.

Despite the huge turnout, Gober felt the intensity overall was not that great, but that will change in the coming home games.

"The gym itself had a lot of atmosphere, but the action was kind of slow. However, as we face more conference opponents, we'll see more action at the VC."

SIUE ATHLETICS

Previously, the Cougars traveled to Pensacola, Fla. to kick off their 2004 season last weekend in the Comfort Inn Invitational, and came back with an impressive 3-1 record.

The Cougars steamrolled through the first two rounds, sweeping the Adelphi University Panthers and Montevallo University Falcons in straight sets.

SIUE encountered its stiffest competition to date facing nationally ranked Central Missouri State. The game

Men's soccer proves Top-20 ranking no fluke

TRAVIS L. ROSS
ASSISTANT SPORTS EDITOR

So far, everything is going right for the men's soccer team.

The Cougars are 2-0, ranked No. 18 in the National Soccer Coaches Association of America preseason poll, and freshman forward Adam Lanter was just awarded Great Lakes Valley Conference Player of the Week.

"He scored two goals in two games, and one of them was a game winner," head coach Ed Huneke said. "It was an obvious impact weekend for him. It helped the team get off to a good start, which we hope we can continue to build in."

Being ranked No. 18 in NCAA Division II, the Cougars should have plenty to build on.

"The ranking says we finished strong last year and we are carrying some of that over into this year," Huneke said. "I think we are a top 20 team and perhaps a top 10 team. This weekend we play No. 6 (the University of)

Findlay who was in the NCAA Division II Final Four last year."

Huneke said he feels good about the players he has to work with this year, even after Tim Velten transferred and Addae Rique left the team for personal reasons.

"With those two players this would have probably been a top five team, but we may be that good anyway," Huneke said. "We are going to miss those guys, but we've got the people to take us in the right direction, and we're looking ahead rather than looking back."

Huneke said if there's one strong point about his players this season, it's their ability to put up quick points.

"I think anybody who comes out and knows soccer will be very impressed with our offense," Huneke said. "We're going to score a lot of goals this season."

Fantasy sports are one of the fastest growing crazes in this country and are a great way to get involved with your favorite sports, regardless of your expertise.

It gives you the opportunity to assemble your favorite players into your own "dream team." Players like Brett Favre, Marshall Faulk or Michael Vick could be playing for your team.

Fantasy football is by far the most popular of the fantasy sports. As the interest in the National Football League has grown, so too has the significance of fantasy football. Now, fantasy football is popular enough to have television shows, analysts and magazines covering the hobby.

When players on your fantasy team score touchdowns, intercept passes or kick field goals, those stats accumulate as points for you in your fantasy league.

Statistics are the basis for any fantasy league. For example, if a player on your fantasy team scores three touchdowns in one game, you will be awarded points for those touchdowns. The same goes for plays by the defense. It's simple.

The Internet is full of Web sites that host fantasy leagues for players of all competition levels. Some leagues cost money to join and pay handsomely for winning combinations; others are free and the grand prize is braggin' rights with co-workers, friends or family. This is where I come in.

For all of you who have joined or will join a fantasy football league, my column will help you in your weekly picks. Each week I will offer my opinion on the best and worst opportunities to get you points in your league.

I've been doing this for KFNS 590 The Fan in St. Louis for a year now, and I am looking forward to help Alestle readers earn some points as well.

Also, here's my e-mail address Kaneskomer@hotmail.com. I'll make an effort to answer all of your pressing fantasy football questions.

That's it from Kane's Korner.

appeared to be in the Jennies' hands, but the Cougars kept the game going, winning the third set only to fall in the fourth set, 1-3.

Gober said the game was quite an experience for his team.

"It was a close match and they lost it in the fourth set, but the girls established an identity as a team," Gober said. "It shows that we can compete against any team and we will battle to win."

Also in the tournament, the Cougars came back and shut out the Argonauts of West Florida University in three sets. Junior outside hitter Kindra Westendorf led the way with 23 kills in the victory.

According to Gober, Shannon Winkeler established herself as a team player in her first outings as a Cougar laying down a total of 36 kills during the four game tournament.

Bonde said team chemistry is shining through. "We're really strong, and came out prepared," Bonde said.

"Everybody feeds off each other and everyone supports each other, even those who are on the bench. They cheer for every dig or kill made by their teammates."

The Cougars head back on the road this weekend to St. Joseph, Mo. for the annual Western Missouri State University Bearcats. At 2 p.m. Friday, they will take on the Northwest Missouri State University Bearcats. At 8 p.m. the cougars play the Emporia State University Lady Hornets.

The Cougars then close out the tournament against the Missouri Western State College Griffons at noon Saturday, followed by the Pittsburg State University Gorillas at 4 p.m.
