Non-tenured faculty votes yes on union

CORY FREEMAN
NEWS STRINGER

SIUE non-tenure track faculty members now have a voice, "and it is not a timid voice," after voting for union representation.

NTT faculty members voted 78-31 in balloting Monday and Tuesday to make the Illinois Education Association the official representative. The IEA will represent approximately 250 NTT faculty members.

"No longer will the non-tenure track faculty be ignored, cast aside or treated as second-class citizens," chairman of the SIUE NTT Faculty Association and a Speech Communication instructor Alan Shiller said.

Of the 167 eligible voters, 109 showed up to the polls in Founders Hall. The NTT faculty eligible to vote must have been on the university's payroll this and last semester

Shiller was pleased with the turnout and strong support the vote represents. He said that individual contact was made with most of the eligible voters by a large core of union activists on campus over the last three semesters.

"We invite the administration to come to the table ready to meet us, and through interest-based bargaining, to create a better life for all of us," Shiller said. "It's time to get together to see what our needs are."

Kelly Schmickle, a lecturer at SIUE, teaches four classes on campus in addition to three classes at another campus. The four classes at SIUE are enough alone to be considered a full-time faculty member. Schmickle gets paid per class instead of getting salary and teaches on a semester-to-semester basis.

"(The union) is a good step in the right direction," Schmickle said. "It makes me happy to work here."

The main concerns with the NTT faculty members have been job security, salary equity and improved working conditions on campus, according to David Vitoff, organizer for the IEA.

The organization of a union at SIUE was inspired in large part by the organization at Illinois State University more than two years ago.

The ISU NTT faculty voted to have IEA representation and just recently negotiated a contract. After the success at ISU, fliers were then sent to NTT

Fair to help students start careers

CARLA SELLS
NEWS STRINGER

The Career Development Center is sponsoring a Career Fair this fall for students of any major to begin meeting employers who work in their field of study. The fair will be from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Wednesday in the Vadalabene Center.

"The biggest benefit for any student going to a career fair is networking with employers," Career Development Center Director Jean Patterson said. "This is the time to network with many different employers at one time, which is an opportunity you don't often receive. By getting their name known to an employer, they get their foot in the door."

The Career Fair is for employers and students who are looking for either full-time employment upon graduation, cooperative education positions or internships, to mix and mingle.

Students attending the career fair should come professionally dressed, and have enough resumes to provide to the employers attending the fair.

There will be around 90 employers attending the fall Career Fair. A vast majority of them are from the St. Louis area, but several represent various areas of the U.S. as well.

Before attending the Career

Monday and Tuesday and accepts walk-in students who need resumes checked.

Employers for the fall fair will look at students who will graduate this winter, this spring and at the end of the summer semester.

Alumni are also welcome and encouraged to attend.

According to Patterson, job recruitment for the Midwest region is on the rise this year. Companies are looking specifically for many graduates, and there is as much as a 13 percent increase in college hiring.

"It looks like, especially in the Midwest, the students have a better outlook on job opportunities when they graduate," Patterson said.

For more information, visit the Career Development Center Web site at careers.siu.edu or call 650-3708.

This spring will see the formal installation of Vaughn Vandegrift as the chancellor of SIUE.

According to William Hamrick, executive assistant to the chancellor, the installation ceremony itself will be, Friday, April 8 in the Meridian Ballroom of the University Center.

There will be much more than just the installation ceremony, however.

"The ceremony is set to be a weeklong celebration taking place April 4 to 9, 2005," planning committee member and Student Senator Cristina Baines said. "Because the university has five core values which are important to this university, we have decided to celebrate a value-a-day. There will be a variety of programs across campus in the various buildings with respect to the various schools (and) college(s)."

Students and faculty are welcome to contribute ideas to the planning committee.

"We are all open to new ideas," Baines said. "We take each idea into careful consideration to ensure that the first installation ceremony in the history of this university is successful and memorable."

Submissions may be sent to any member of the planning committee: Hamrick, who is the chair; Baines; Josephine Barnes, director of Research and Projects; Tim Engelman, associate director of Continuing Education; Julia Hansen, professor; Dennis Hostetler, professor of Public Administration and Political Analysis; Barb O'Malley, executive director of Development and Public Affairs; Patricia Merritt, assistant to the director of University Services to ESL; and Mick Ostrander, director of Campus Recreation.

Retired music professor dies

KRISTEN REBER
NEWS EDITOR

Emeritus professor Joseph E. Pival died at his Edwardsville home Saturday, Sept. 18.

He joined SIUE in 1965 and throughout his career taught cello and music theory, and served as performance faculty chair and an adviser.

Pival, 62, was a professor of cello in the Department of Music until he retired in 1998.

"He was just a lovely person," Music Department professor Stephen Brown said. "He was fun to be around and totally unpretentious ... He was a fairly quiet guy but had a great sense of humor. He was somebody you just enjoyed seeing in the morning (when you got to school)."

Vera McCoy-Sulentic, the Suzuki program director, took lessons with Pival and remembers him as a quiet man with a love for plant life.

"He loved plants," McCoy-Sulentic said. "There are plants in the hallway (of the Music Department) that were his and he'd come and water them even after he retired, which I thought was very sweet."

Pival attended the University of Illinois where he received his bachelor and master degrees in music. He completed his doctoral work at Indiana University.

During his career, Pival was a founding member of the Lincoln String Quartet and the Meridian Chamber Players.

McCoy-Sulentic attributes the Lincoln String Quartet to what made her choose SIUE for her own education.

"He was a very good cellist," McCoy-Sulentic said.

A memorial service was held Tuesday in the Southland Christian Church in Lexington, Ky. Condolences and remembrances may be sent to his wife, Connie Pival, 745 Berry Lane, Lexington, KY 40502 or to his parents, Joseph and Jean Pival, 768 Laurel Hill Road, Lexington, KY 40504.

The Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Birthday Celebration Planning Committee is looking for nominations for the annual Martin Luther King Jr. Humanitarian and Scholarship awards.

Nominees can be self-made or submitted by someone else.

The humanitarian award will be given to one SIUE employee and one community member. The applicant must also be a resident of Illinois.

The scholarship award is open to full-time students who have completed at least one full term at SIUE and have a grade point average of at least 3.0.

"The Scholarship will be

Nomination applications are in the Kimmel Leadership Center in the Morris University Center. Completed applications must be turned in by Friday, Nov. 5.

Along with the humanitarian and scholarship awards, entries for an essay, poetry and visual arts competition for high school students are being sought. Guidelines for the competition have been sent to all area high schools, and winners will receive a $100 honorarium and a plaque of recognition.

The awards ceremony will take place during the 23rd Annual

Dirty laundry to be aired in the spring

SCHALENE HOUSTON

The SIUE community can look forward to airing dirty laundry in the spring semester.

Project Dirty Laundry is a program aimed at raising the awareness of injustice issues, some that students may not have heard about. The project hopes to cover issues such as prejudices towards racial minorities, homosexuals, the disabled, the poor and many others.

"I think there are a lot of students and faculty who need a wake-up call," Project Dirty Laundry Coordinator Sara Carpenter said.

Carpenter said she spent the summer in Barcelona, Spain where a festival that focused on bringing communities together took place. Carpenter wanted to bring this idea back to the SIUE community.

"I realized how unaware I am of issues that effect people around the world and how much those communities have to offer," Carpenter said.

According to Carpenter, justice has always been a big issue for her.

"Barcelona was a reminder of some of those issues," Carpenter said. "Issues I know

"I hope to have clotheslines to state facts to get attention and tables set up with more detailed information," Carpenter said.

She also said she hopes to have the stories of women who have been raped on T-shirts and hang them on the clotheslines as well.

Project Dirty Laundry already has many organizations on campus that are willing to participate in this event, but Carpenter said she is still hoping to get other individuals and organizations to help as well.

"I've been trying to get a hold of anyone who wants to help," Carpenter said.

Two informational meetings will be held at 6 p.m. Tuesday and at 4:30 p.m. Wednesday in the Religious Center.

Faculty and staff bowl

NEWS STRINGER

The faculty and staff's bowling league is rolling along at Cougar Lanes.

Opening night was Sept. 23, and four two-person teams participated. The eight-week league bowls at 6:30 p.m. Thursdays.

"Everyone seemed to have a great time,"

Bowling and Billiard Center Manager Steve Siegel said. "The teams were yelling and hooting."

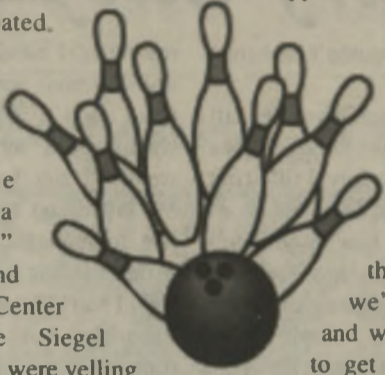

Siegel hopes the number of teams will grow.

"We had two teams that couldn't make it the first week," Siegel said. "I would love to have 16 teams to fill the place."

The cost is $5 a person per week and each bowler bowls three games.

"We don't expect to make any money on this," Siegel said. "We're trying to offer a cheap evening out and do something good for the staff to help build rapport."

While the league is just starting out, Siegel is optimistic about the future.

"This is the first year we've done this and we're just trying to get our feet wet," Siegel said. "It would be great to one day have different campus departments competing. Maybe we could even have some sort of traveling trophy."

Maybe it's just me, but I think our county and state governments need to set up a system where it knows if someone is a college student.

This way the governments won't summon any students for jury duty. Or, they could at least send us a get-out-free card.

I know it is my civic responsibility to serve on a jury, and it is a price I pay so I can enjoy the luxury of being an American citizen. Well, I got summoned for jury duty and the thought scares me to death. The fact that if I do end up having to serve I will be deciding someone's fate based on evidence of a crime that person may or may not have committed gives me chills. Who am I to know? I'm not comfortable with that thought, and knowing me, the jury could be in deliberation for hours for something as trivial as a parking fine.

But how many of you have been summoned to federal court to serve? Doesn't that just make it sound that much worse? Who knows what they do with you in the courthouse? Sure, $40 a day isn't bad, but I could make that much in a day at the Alestle, which is where I will be if I actually get out of my jury duty. Heaven forbid, I should have to go. I'm sure the Alestle staffers would be OK without me, but

I'm sure they wouldn't be happy about it.

So, in order to save my staff and myself, I have done all I can to get out of jury duty. I filled out the 9 million pages of questions telling someone how up-to-date I am on the news, how I know about everything going on in the area, how I know law enforcement officers, lawyers and lots of other information that probably wasn't needed. And since I had to have it back in seven days, I sent the thing off as quickly as I could.

Then I read the fine print. "Full-time students should submit a letter from their university." OK, I could do that, anything to get out of jury duty. So I went to get my letter. Well, I needed a copy of the letter the courthouse sent me first. So I went the next day and tried to get my letter. I handed in a copy of my summons and I filled out the form, and I checked back. It wasn't until three days and a weekend later that I could pick up my letter, and by then it was too late to mail the thing. I finally faxed a letter, with a week to go until I had to be at the courthouse. Probably not the best idea time wise, but I guess you could say I was lucky I got it in at all.

The good news is I beat the system, and as of 5 p.m. Monday I was excused from serving on the federal court jury. I'm sure it was the fact that court officials got the letter from the university, but I still like to think my insightful answers had something to do with it.

Pastor Branham responds to his critics

Thanks for those critics who were actually respectful in nature. Thanks to those who expressed your support of my views. Unfortunately, some critics not only were wrong in their responses, but also misrepresented what I originally said on several occasions.

I too am afraid. I fear that my statements might be misunderstood. I want to say to the campus homosexual population that I do not hate you.

I unflatteringly stand by the conviction that, according to God's Word, your lifestyles are sinful. I am also convinced that if we do not see another great spiritual awakening and repent of our lenience toward such sinful lifestyles that we could also share the severe fate of Sodom and Gomorrah. If you don't know what I mean, see Genesis 19.

I ask my critics, especially those who claim to be Christians, would you really seek God's wrath? I know that a lot of people might congratulate themselves in their smug, intellectual assumption that the Bible is merely a book of human origin. It seems that perhaps things have changed, but I will not just get over it. I feel like a lone voice for reason, crying out like Lot, "Don't do this wicked thing." I say this, "Please, repent!"

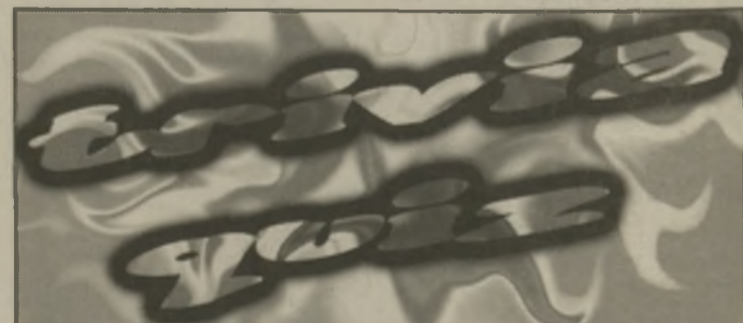

While I absolutely refuse to back down in the face of critics, let the record show that my beliefs are not due to a sense of prideful self-righteousness. I confess that I'm nothing more than a wretched sinner myself, whose only salvation is by God's miraculous grace. Moreover, the grace that has been given to me is not on account of anything righteous that I could have done. I'm simply a thankful recipient of God's forgiveness through the sacrificial death of my Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ.

Therefore, I want the entire student body to know that the stances I take are not based on hatred. The Gospel I preach is one of love. The God I serve is the God of love. Perhaps the most quoted Bible verse in America is John 3:16, which talks about how God loved sinners so much that He sent His only begotten Son, Jesus Christ, to die on an old roman cross for our forgiveness.

So please do not mistake me as a preacher of hate. I serve a God of love. However, please also heed the warning. God is love, but the Bible tells us that His Spirit will not always offer mankind forgiveness. Repent.

Comedian Tom Cotter cracks SIUE funny bones as part of Just 4 Laughs

SHAUN PILAT
LIFESTYLES REPORTER

Comedian Tom Cotter cracked up an audience Tuesday in University Restaurant during a Just 4 Laughs event.

Cotter performed his hilarious stand-up comedy routine in front of a roomful of smiling, laughing students from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m.

Dressed like a student in Nike tennis shoes, faded blue jeans, a powder blue bowling shirt and a tan baseball cap, Cotter reminisced about his college days.

"I was an R.A. in college, raging alcoholic," Cotter said.

He connected well with the audience by tailoring his jokes to the age group. Cotter's jokes ranged from the anatomy of GI

Joe action figures and Barbie dolls to drunkenness and relationships.

"I saw my ex-girlfriend get run over by a snow plow," Cotter said in one joke. "That was weird for me because I've never driven a snow plow before."

The audience laughed loud and long when Cotter performed his Arnold Schwarzenegger impressions.

The audience seemed to enjoy interacting with Cotter as much as they liked his scripted jokes. Cotter would challenge the audience to throw questions or suggestions at him and he would respond with a witty comment.

Nursing major Katie King enjoyed Cotter's performance.

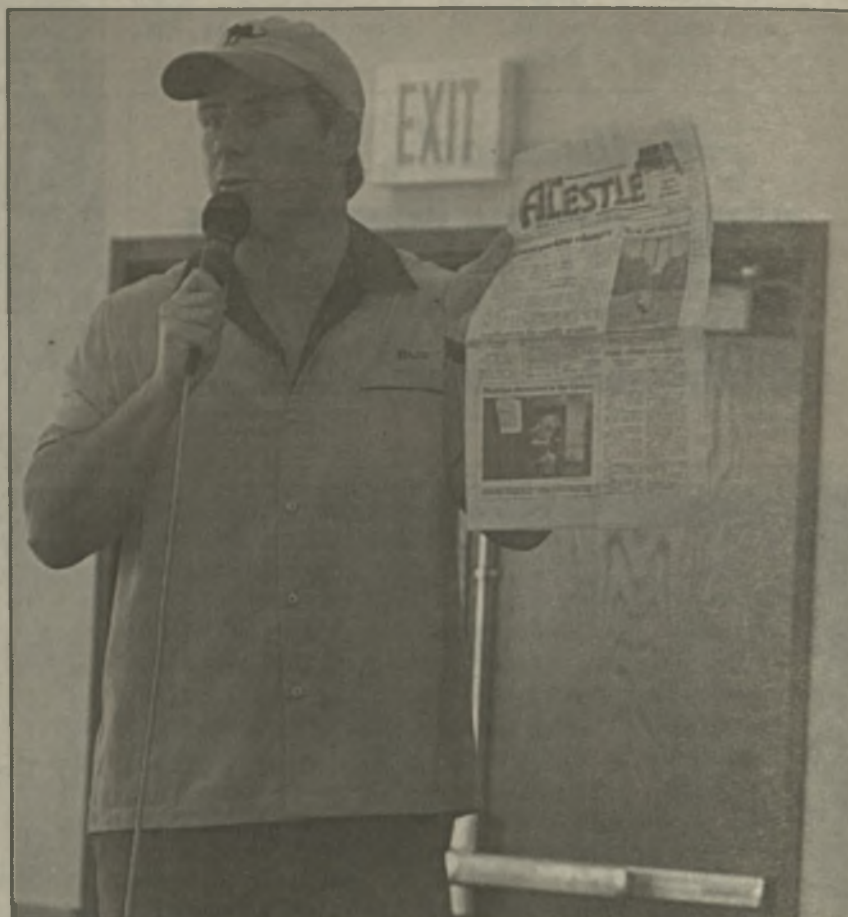

"He was very funny," King said. "He had a lot of variety."

King also liked the University Restaurant's good atmosphere and said she was happy just to be out of her room.

The University Restaurant was closed during dinner hours, but the Campus Activities Board provided the audience with free popcorn and fruit punch. Once Cotter began his performance, however, very few students refilled their cups.

Cotter stood on a raised stage near the entrance to the room with one loudspeaker on each side, but the University Restaurant was small enough for the audience to hear him clearly without a microphone. The room was a comfortable, informal

There were no children in the audience, but that might have been for the best since some of Cotter's jokes involved cursing or talked about male and female SIUE English professor Eugene B. Redmond is easily recognized on campus in his colorful African garb, but he is also recognized for his exceptional literary efforts.

Redmond has obtained several prestigious awards. He is the recipient of a National Endowment for the Arts Creative Writing Fellowship, a Lifetime Achievement Award from Pan-African Movement USA, a Pushcart Prize: Best of Small Presses, a Tribute to an Elder from the African Poetry Theater of NYC, an American Book Award for "The Eye in the Ceiling: Selected Poems," the title of Poet Laureate of East St. Louis, and writing fellowships from the California, Illinois, Louisiana, Missouri and West Virginia Arts Councils.

Redmond's major publications include "The Eye in the Ceiling," an American Book Award winner, "Griefs of Joy," "In a Time of Rain and Desire," "Sentry of Four Golden Pillars," "Songs from Afro/Phone," and "Superb Obituary," his only fictional work. Redmond also edited and published 12 issues of "Drumvoices Revue," and wrote pamphlets, articles, plays essays, and poems in literary magazines, such as Essence, Multi-Cultural Review, Northwestern University-issued TriQuarterly and Black Issues Book Review.

Redmond grew up in East St. Louis and joined the Marine Corps before he attended SIUE East St. Louis for his undergraduate studies and Washington University for his graduate studies.

After achieving his

"My most ambitious and scholarly work, however, was 'Drumvoices: The Mission of Afro-American Poetry,'" Redmond said.

Besides winning awards and publishing literature, Redmond also founded the non-profit organization EBR Writers Club in March of 1986.

The organization's mission is to help contribute to society's well being through communication, tutoring students in writing and presenting cultural and literary events, such as the "Pre-Kwanzaa Celebration" and

The organization is celebrating its 18th year in operation and meets two times a month at the East St. Louis Center for Higher Learning.

Lecturer, author features free sculpture workshop Friday

SHAUN PILAT
LIFESTYLES REPORTER

An art therapy weekend will take shape Friday and Saturday when Don Seiden visits SIUE.

Seiden will present a lecture titled "A Personal Art History" from 7 to 8:30 p.m. Friday in the Mississippi-Illinois Room of Morris University Center.

He will also present a sculpture workshop from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday in Alumni Hall, Room 3200.

Seiden's lecture is free and open to the public, but the sculpture workshop is available to art therapy students, staff and other art therapy professionals. Sculpture materials will be provided for the workshop.

Seiden is a noted therapist, lecturer and author in the field of art therapy. He founded the art therapy program at the School of the Art Institute of Chicago and is a Professor Emeritus in the Department of Art Education and Art Therapy there.

In his lecture Seiden will discuss the therapeutic implications, social influences and aesthetic concerns in his art from the 1950s to present.

"(The lecture is) about how my personal art reflects my thoughts on art therapy," Seiden said.

In the sculpture workshop Seiden will demonstrate how to use aluminum foil and masking tape to create sculptures.

Seiden said the aluminum foil is used as the structure for the sculpture while the masking tape is used to create an outer skin.

"It's practical, clean and easy to manipulate," Seiden said.

Seiden is featured as the guest speaker for the Student Art Therapy Association's annual Fall Workshop. Each year, SATA holds a workshop in the spring and fall to discuss current art therapy topics.

The American Art Therapy Association defines art therapy as "the therapeutic use of art making, within a professional relationship, by people who experience illness, trauma, or challenges in living, and by people who seek personal development."

Cara Weeks, the co-president of SATA, said the fall workshop is to help students in both their academic and professional careers.

"The lecture would be applicable to not only art therapists but also artists and mental health officials," Weeks said.

Music Video Bingo comes to MUC

SHAUN PILAT
LIFESTYLES REPORTER

Modern music meets the classic bingo game from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Wednesday in the Morris University Center's Goshen Lounge when Cougar Craze returns with Music Video Bingo.

A giant video wall plays hit music while players try to mark off songs that match their bingo card.

The first player with four matches in a row wins a Top 10 compact disc of their choice.

Players can also win T-shirts and other prizes.

"In the bingo game there will be a variety of different types of hit music so everyone will know the music video," Campus Activities Board Entertainment Chair Ashley Manous said. "They can play as long as they want unless there are people waiting to play."

The game can also be tailored to the musical tastes of the players. They can choose from a variety of genres like rock, pop, rap, retro, alternative, country, Christian and Gospel.

Employees of Paradigm Attractions, a company that has been providing the colleges and high schools with interactive entertainment for over 6 years, will administer the game and hand out prizes to the winners. The employees will also provide other music-related games in addition to bingo.

For more information on Music Video Bingo, contact the Campus Activities Board at 650-3371 or Kimmel Leadership Center at 650-2686.

REDMOND

Through Redmond's extensive involvement in the literary society, he has become acquainted with many renowned writers, such as Margaret Walker Alexander, Maya Angelou, Amiri Baraka, Gwendolyn Brooks, Avery Brooks, Raymond Patterson, Barbara A. Teer, Quincy Troupe and Lena Weathers, who all became trustees of the EBR Writers Club.

Club members include professional writers, writer retirees and students from all three SIUE campuses.

The group collaborates with the SIUE English Department to publish "Drumvoices Revue," "Break Word with the World" and anthologies of student writings.

"Drumvoices Revue" is a confluence of literary, cultural and vision arts and is published twice a year by the SIUE English department.

"Break Word with the World" is a commemorative collection of poems, anecdotes and commentaries. Redmond describes life as a writer as having "several trains running at once."

Teaching is his profession, but Redmond writes in every spare moment he can find, whether the moment is at dinner, in the bathroom or at a wedding.

"Different events, especially weddings and funerals, are catalysts for the emergence of emotion and creativity," Redmond said.

Redmond works on major publications over long periods of time, and in order to remain in the eye of the public, he publishes several smaller portions of the larger, unfinished publication during that time.

Redmond's advice to aspiring writers is to keep practicing the craft of writing so that when a spark comes, the skill needed to present that idea is available and take any opportunities to improve writing skills, such as writing letters home.

He also recommends reflecting on how to recreate extreme situations or "outpourings of emotions" through words and considering what in life can be used as

"fuel for poetry."

According to Redmond, a competent writer should be able to write all genres of literature sufficiently, including poetry, plays, proposals, songs, fiction and more.

Though Redmond has many accomplishments under his belt, he has many future ambitions as well.

He hopes to continue growth in his interest of photography. "Visualizing Black Writers: An Extra-Literary Exhibit From The Eugene B. Redmond Collection" was displayed in February in the Morris University Center Art Gallery.

The exhibit consisted of a mosaic of Redmond's photographs of renowned writers with small captions of poetry.

Ultimately, Redmond looks forward to retiring in a few years and having time to travel, write memoirs and visit with his grandchildren.

For more information regarding Redmond's accomplishments and publications, contact the English Department at 650-2060 or the EBR Writers Club at 650-3991.

Coming Up

SIUE Women's Tennis faces Kentucky Wesleyan from 9 a.m. to noon Saturday.

Golf tees off in GLVC meet

Harrison and Hood will lead young pack in defending the conference championship

AUBREY WILLIAMS/ALESTLE

Junior Brittany Hood lines up a shot earlier this season. Hood is third on the team, averaging a score of 84.4 per 18 holes this season. She will lead the young Cougars into the Great Lakes Valley Conference Tournament this weekend in Forsyth.

ZACH GROVES
SPORTS REPORTER

The regular season of women's golf came to a close Monday as the Cougars competed in the Screaming Eagle Classic at Helfrich Hills Golf Course in Evansville, Ind.

SIUE placed fourth among 14 teams. The Cougars shot a 654

Sunday and Monday.

Head coach Larry Bennett believes the score could have been better.

"I think they could have played better," he said.

"They're not playing badly as a team, but the players are not getting the good scores together at the same time, and that's the team aspect of golf," he added.

However, Bennett said he was impressed with the return of freshman Jessica Tiffe, who was out for two weeks with a back injury.

"Jessica Tiffe made a good comeback, shooting a 79 the first day after being shelved for two weeks. A little fatigue got her on the second day, and the conditions of the course worked against her," Bennett said. "But a good week of practice should help."

Bennett said he is confident the team can pull together before the Great Lakes Valley Championship Sunday and Monday.

"They are very capable of winning (the GLVC Championship) again. They just need to play well at the same time, and relax out there. We're looking forward to good things. Everybody's just got to step it up at the championship," Bennett said.

Sophomore Kallie Harrison continued her excellence on the greens with a score of 156, taking seventh place in the individual competition.

Also placing in the top 10 was freshman Rachel Roberg, who nabbed eighth, shooting a 157.

"(The freshmen) are peaking at the right time," Bennett said. "Rachel's really improving this season. I think she will be our best player in the future, and is continuing to improve."

Junior Brittany Hood tied for 25th, shooting a 168. Freshmen Natalie Connaway and Kelly Morris tied for 38th and for 60th, respectively.

Bennett said he feels the players are ready for the championship tournament, and that this past competition should not indicate anything about the team's play.

"The competition is on our backs this year, but the players are ready, as they are getting better each week," Bennett said. "We should play low-key, and have fun. I'm feeling really comfortable about the tournament."

The Cougars compete in the final tournament of the fall, and the end of Bennett's coaching career, at the GLVC Championship Sunday and Monday at Hickory Ridge golf course in Forsyth.

SIUE Football coming soon? Don't bet on it

JONG CAMBRON
SPORTS REPORTER

The feel of the cold, brisk air blowing across the field. The smell of grilled hamburgers and bratwursts floating through the air. Hearing the band play the school song after the team scores a touchdown or a field goal.

Hopefully, the fans will hear the home team's school song over and over again instead of hearing the opponents' school song. ESPN even has a name for this day, Saturday College Game Day.

At SIUE, the campus is eerily quiet on afternoons. More than 125 Division II schools have a football program.

SIUE Athletic Director Brad Hewitt said the university does not have a football team due to monetary reasons.

"We've looked into this four times in the past 15 years," Hewitt said. "The startup cost is close to $10 million if we use a scholarship program and the annual cost of running a team

"The startup cost is close to $10 million if we use a scholarship program."

is close to $100,000."

According to Hewitt, a task force was formed in 2001 and spent three months studying the prospect of starting a football team.

"Fees were presented to the students to help pay for the costs of a football program but the students said no," Hewitt said.

Hewitt said the school would have to increase student fees between $150 and $200 to phase in a team over three years.

"There would at least be a $50 increase just for the annual budget and the rest would cover the startup cost," Hewitt said.

Why do certain National Collegiate Athletic Association Division II teams have football programs and other do not?

In the Great Lakes Valley Conference, four of the 11 schools have a football program: Quincy University, St. Joseph's College, University of Indianapolis and Kentucky are all adults and should take care of our responsibilities, however I have a few questions. If I am not mistaken, NPHC organizations are governed by alumni chapters, and we are required to host and attend various functions outside of the campus of SIUE. This may not mean anything to some of you, but it means a lot to us. Our organization does not stop after the undergraduate level.

We attend annual and biannual conferences, host community services, attend leadership conferences, workshops and submit numerous amounts of paperwork. And on top of all this, we are students. Therefore, I am sorry if we sometimes forget to turn in program evaluations or turn certain paperwork in late, but we have a lot on our plates. I am not making excuses, but I am trying to educate people on NPHC and what we are about.

It seems to me there is a negative attitude toward African-American Greeks. We do so much for this campus and yet we are constantly disrespected and criticized.

The last time I checked, the programs that deal with current issues such as health awareness, campus life and community service were all held by NPHC organizations. With this in mind I ask the question, "Why is it that we are the most regulated organizations on campus?"

My organization in particular received a low score on the new mandated accreditation report. This seems rather unfair and unjust to me seeming that in the past couple of years we have received awards for Community Service of the Year, highest grade point average and Program of the Year. We held free HIV and AIDS testing last fall and collected school supplies for needy children.

These are only a few programs held, but somehow we received a low score. I have yet to find an Interfraternal Council or Collegiate Pan-Hellenic Council organization host any of the various numbers of programs we do. But these organizations received very high scores. Is anyone getting angry yet or should I go on?

These organizations hold one big event and receive great praise at the end of the year. I am not attacking these organizations, I am just concerned with the bias this campus holds toward us. Delta Sigma Theta sorority Inc. holds a Trail Blaze and Penny Drive to collect money for cancer research, but have they been recognized? Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority Inc. holds a Coat Drive for homeless shelters — have they been recognized? Iota Phi Theta fraternity Inc. hosted the Black Panther program last spring - have they been recognized?

I could go on but I have a limited amount of space. So my final question is, "When will NPHC be recognized and commended on our achievements and not reprimanded for every mistake?"

In conclusion, of any other governing body or organization, NPHC takes on more responsibility. We try so hard to get students involved in campus life and to uphold the standards our organizations were founded on. Now it is time for some positive recognition. I hope this letter also opens up the eyes of members of NPHC and helps them realize that no one is going to fight for us, and it's past due time for us to come together and work with one another. We must put forth that extra effort so we can avoid this negative press and demand the respect our organizations deserve.

KANE'S
Fantasy Football

MATT KANE

The change in the elites of the NFL is upon us, people. The Rams, Chiefs, 49ers, Titans, Dolphins and Packers have a combined record of 3-15.

On the opposite end of the spectrum, the Falcons, Seahawks, Jaguars and Jets are all surprises with undefeated records.

What can we fantasy football team owners do about this? Well, nothing besides sit back, watch the games and cash in on some fantasy football points.

Personally, Lions wide receiver Roy Williams, Vikings quarterback Daunte Culpepper and Rams wide receiver Isaac Bruce have done a lot for the only undefeated team in my fantasy division, and I'm loving it.

I'm doing pretty well in my leagues and I hope you are, too. Here's some news and notes that may help you with your team.

Hold the phone, check the time and stop the presses. OK, maybe not the latter, but Titans quarterback Steve McNair will not be playing Sunday.

McNair is so tough he could die in the second quarter and still finish out the game. But this week a bruised sternum will keep him sidelined. Billy Volek will start in his place, but his stats won't be much above average.

Titans running back Chris Brown is a little banged up and since McNair isn't playing, Tennessee could be in some trouble against the Chargers this week.

As bad as it looks in Tennessee, it looks worse in Tampa Bay.

The Buccaneers lost running back Charlie Garner for the season Sunday night after he tore a tendon in his right patella.

I don't know how that feels, but I've ruptured an anterior cruciate ligament before, and that's no fun.

Tampa is now without its top three wide receivers and starting running back.

Michael Pittman, returning from a three-game suspension, will take over the position.

Pittman didn't score a touchdown last year, so he's probably only a good pickup for leagues that give big points for yardage.

Minnesota Vikings running back Onterio Smith has a suspension appeal pending, and has a meeting with the league office this week.

Smith and the Vikes have a bye this week. But, he could be gone for five to nine games when the situation is resolved.

Luckily, Minnesota is expecting starting running back Michael Bennett back from injury the first week of Smith's suspension.

As always my e-mail address is kaneskorner@hotmail.com.

That's all from Kane's Korner.

Wesleyan College.

Pat Atwell, Quincy athletic director, said the school turns a $400,000 to $600,000 yearly profit from football.

Atwell said the football program makes most of its money from other schools paying the team to come. Unlike other sports competitions, universities guarantee an amount to other schools against ticket sales.

"Western Illinois is giving us $25,000 to play at their place," Atwell said. "Western received around $400,000 to play at the University of Nebraska."

St. Joseph's College uses the same formula to make a profit.

"We get the same guarantees as Quincy," St. Joseph's College Athletic Director Bill Massoels said.

Massoels said football is more than a cash cow for the university.

"It helps enrollment and brings excitement to the school," he said. "The football program does tremendous things for this institution."

Kentucky Wesleyan University and the University of Indianapolis do not return a profit on their football programs, but are glad to have a team regardless money loss.

"The fall weekends are very exciting and it has increased male enrollment," Roy Pickerill, the sports information director at KWU, said.

Sue Willey, athletic director at the University of Indianapolis, said the school uses the football program as a recruitment tool.

"The male enrollment, which is 40 percent of the student body, would be significantly down to about a third of that if we didn't have a football program," Willey said.

She said only 5 percent of football programs make revenue.

Hewitt agreed, saying only the top 35 schools across the country generate revenue.

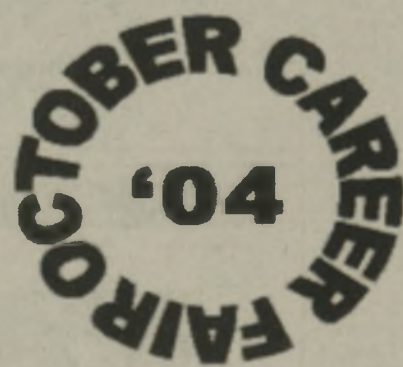

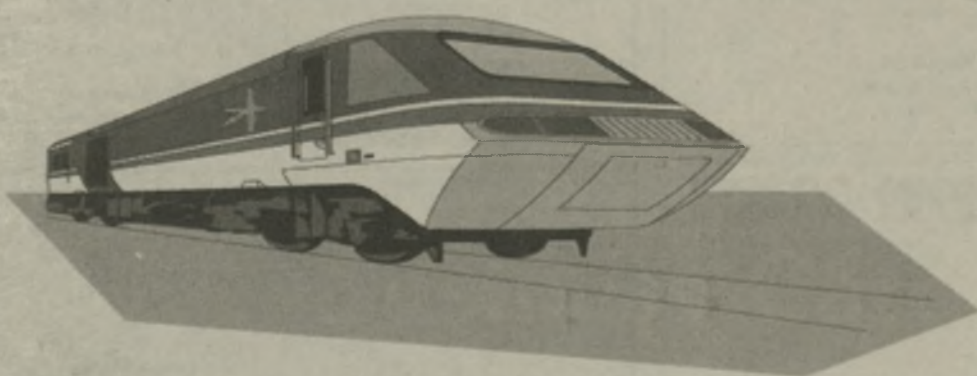

"I'd love to have college football here, but the realities of costs are overwhelming," Hewitt said.

Hewitt would rather use any increase to move the school to Division I before getting a football team.

"Moving to Division I would be the best thing for students," Hewitt said
