Million-dollar deal gets SIUE new signs

CORY FREEMAN
NEWS STRINGER

New signs at all SIUE campuses should help first-year students and first-time visitors clear up confusion and unnecessary parking tickets.

The Southern Illinois University Board of Trustees approved a $1.25 million project on May 12 that will replace and enhance the current directional and informational signs throughout the campus of SIUE, the SIU School of Dental Medicine in Alton and the East St. Louis Center.

The project will be funded through parking and traffic operating funds and regular operating funds at SIUE.

"The new signs that will be put up are to help people navigate the campus better," Administrative Services Director Bob Vanzo said.

The current signs throughout SIUE are seven to eight years old, according to Vanzo.

The project, known as the Wayfinding Replacement and Enhancement Project, was undertaken because visitors often complain it is difficult to navigate the campuses.

Visitors often express frustration at receiving parking tickets because they are unclear about where to park. Visitors also say buildings are not clearly marked, particularly at SIUE, where buildings appear similar.

Under the project, new vehicular, parking lot and pedestrian directional signs will be installed. In addition, banners and building entryway signs will be replaced throughout SIUE.

"The signs will have a consistent look that are designed similar in color and shape," Vanzo said. "Cut letters will be put on the buildings to spell out their names, in addition to the signs at the pedestrian levels."

In addition to new directional and informational signs, SIUE will also have a temporary sign system to list events, instead of using signs placed into the ground.

The project is tentatively scheduled to begin in the fall semester and completed by November for the entire SIUE and Alton campus parking lots. The East St. Louis Center is being planned for a later date as funds are made available.

Cloud Gehshan Associates of Philadelphia has been brought in as a consultant to advise and design the project.

Dear Mr. President:

First of all, let me say I did not vote for you in the last election. To be honest, I do not agree with many of your decisions, most of all, your rushing America to war. Having said that, I do want to commend you on the way you kept this country together after Sept. 11, and I hope you will continue to keep us united.

I am writing because I believe you have a lot more work to do when it comes to the domestic agenda in this great country. I am not a political expert, only a speech communication student, but I do believe that, as a citizen, it is my right to express how I feel. Many Americans feel you have neglected them and have focused too much on the international front. Some are even asking if you are in touch with the average American.

A long look at America

Mr. President, I think it is time to refocus your efforts on a sensible and necessary domestic agenda. Again, I am not a political expert, but I believe I can outline a few things that might help.

Environment: With all due respect, your environmental plan just does not work. If you believe so strongly in your Clear Skies Program and Healthy Logging, why don't you push that instead of Social Security? What good is Social Security if we cannot leave our homes? I think it is pretty simple to clean the air and water. Do you know some experts believe only 23 percent of U.S. water is drinkable and useable for humans? That is scary! If you want people to be healthier and breathe easier, cut down the emissions over five years, not 10 years. Prosecute those who pollute, and put more money from the budget toward helping the environment. Sir, our home is slowly dying, and we need to do something.

Education: Mr. President, education and watch schools transform.

International relations: When I travel abroad, sir, all I hear is bashing of America. The country I love so dearly is not appreciated overseas. I do not understand, Mr. President, why America has to be involved with everybody's business, and why it is our responsibility to help every nation. I think you need to listen more and speak less when it comes to foreign relations. Why would you nominate somebody who does not believe in the United Nations to be our ambassador? And finally, restore our image and make strong our name in the world again.

Mr. President, I have the utmost respect for the office you hold, and I will always support and defend my country. I may not like what you are doing, but you are my president, and I respect your work. I hope when I travel abroad in the future, I will hear only great things about America.

‘Deep Throat’ changed U.S. history

OXFORD, Miss. (U-WIRE) – When history book writers write about Watergate, they no longer have to write about someone known only as “Deep Throat.”

They will write about W. Mark Felt.

History was made when the identity of “Deep Throat” – the main source in the Watergate scandal who brought down President Richard Nixon – was revealed.

Felt's identity was revealed by Vanity Fair and validated by Washington Post reporters Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein.

It's good his identity was finally revealed. Not only will the world know who was behind the information, but he will get the recognition he deserves. He brought about amazing changes in the U.S. government, and finally his name will go down in history books.

This man's impact on history is obvious. Not only did he bring about political changes, but journalistic changes as well.

Woodward is known for his use of anonymous sources, especially “Deep Throat.”

The use of anonymous sources is often debated in journalism classes and among journalism scholars.

Felt was No. 2 at the FBI, so Woodward and Bernstein probably had the best source for their stories. They could count on his information being valid. But, if they printed his name, he would surely be fired.

That is often the case with anonymous sources. Using sources anonymously is often the best choice if the source could be physically harmed or punished for providing their information; this way the journalist gets the information, and the source's identity is a secret.

Reporters should be careful about using anonymous sources, however. They should tread in that territory lightly and always keep their readers in mind.

It's about time “Deep Throat” was revealed. He deserves any recognition he can get for changing American politics and journalism. He did the right thing by talking to reporters then, and revealing his identity was the right thing now.

Though the debate of using anonymous sources will probably never rest, W. Mark Felt's name can go down in black and white as a man who changed history.

Interactive Web logs are replacing old-fashioned journals and diaries. Deep dark secrets may no longer be private thanks to the new trends in blogging.

About.com describes a blog as a Web site with dated entries, in reverse chronological order, about a particular topic. A blog can be maintained by one person or a group of contributors.

Blogs became more widely known in 1999 after blog development applications became available to help people add entries without having to write in HTML.

According to www.about.com, after the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, blogs were used to convey information, thoughts and feelings faster than any previous method. Blogs have become a forum for public expression that can quickly reach people around the world on controversial and personal issues.

Blog-hosting services are now making blogging even more popular by allowing students to register with a blog site and create their own page. Many students at SIUE have created an online diary at www.xanga.com. After joining, students post their own journal entries and other users can read the entries and reply with comments.

Sophomore Computer Science major Josh Turck has had an account with Xanga for a little over a year, although he's been blogging for over three years.

"It's usually the first place I go when something happens, and from then I just sort of assume that everyone in my little circle knows what happened so I don't have to tell everybody," Turck said. "A lot of people use blogging to rant and complain, and I'm not really that kind of person."

According to www.xanga.com, the creators were interested in finding a catchy name for their creation.

"We just wanted a name that sounded fun but was still short and sweet."

Xanga also claims to be the Internet's top web log community.

People around the world are able to gain insight into their friends' and families' day-to-day lives through the site. Students away from home can post their daily activities, feelings and plans on the site to keep their parents and friends updated.

Users can also join groups known as blog rings. Users who correspond frequently or share a common bond such as school can join or create a ring.

The users are then notified by e-mail each time someone in their blog ring posts an entry.

Turck said he uses Xanga because of its strong community focus.

"When I started, the community I knew was three people, but what happened was that through spreading the word people I knew started getting them and before I knew it I had 150 subscriptions," Turck said. "People were communicating with me that I hadn't heard from in years."

In addition to his personal Xanga account, www.xanga.com/applekidjosh, Turck is currently coordinating a video game popularity contest at http://www.xanga.com/Best\_Game\_EVAR.

"I'm fashioning it just like Gamefaqs's tournaments, the only difference is I'm guessing the only people who vote here will be people I know," Turck posted on the blog.

Nine sign on dotted line

The SIUE baseball team announced another signing Monday for a total of nine recruits this summer.

JANELLE DOBSON
SPORTS REPORTER

The SIUE baseball team continued to build up its recruiting class for the 2006 season with the signing of Kyle Amerson Monday.

Amerson, a 6-foot-1-inch outfielder, batted .328 with 66 hits, seven home runs and 40 RBIs last year at Springfield College. He earned Defensive Player of the Year honors in 2004, and is the third Springfield College transfer SIUE has signed this off season.

Cougar Baseball head coach Gary Collins was busy during the month of May signing eight new players to the team for the 2006 season.

"These kids are all good and have been outstanding junior college players," Collins said.

The signings began on May 6, when he signed Rend Lake College teammates Corey Lewis and Seth Hall.

Lewis, a right-handed pitcher, appeared in 16 games last season and had a 4.94 ERA along with two saves.

Hall is a catcher who held a .287 average, pounded out seven doubles and had one home run in 87 at-bats when the Cougars signed him.

SIUE announced the next three additions to the baseball team on May 18. Collins signed Adam Schneider of Nokomis, Quinn Allen of Williamsville and Ryan Czyz of Ottawa.

Schneider and Allen are transfers from Springfield College. Schneider, a pitcher, ended last season with a 5-3 record and a 2.55 ERA.

Allen, an infielder, will be an offensive force for the Cougars. Last season he posted a .389 batting average with six doubles, five triples, one home run and 16 RBIs.

and Sester, who spent last season competing for Illinois Valley Community College.

Grant, a 6-foot-4-inch first baseman, earned All-Arrowhead Conference honors last season. Teammate Sester earned the same honors. In addition, Sester was named first team All-State while playing for Mendota High School.

Sester, an infielder, has three years of eligibility left to play for the Cougars.

Fletcher, who is also an infielder, joins the Cougars from Illinois Central. He was the Collegiate Conference of Central Illinois Player of the Year last season. He batted .335 with four home runs and 39 RBIs.

Collins expects all of his new players to help the Cougars next season.

"We've recruited

Czyz, an infielder, is a quick base runner who stole 14 bases last season for Highland Community College. He was also impressive at the plate earning a .312 batting average with 43 hits, 10 doubles, three triples and three home runs.

The final three players were signed on May 24. Joining the Cougars for next season are Jim Grant of Joliet, Aaron Sester of Mendota and Aaron Fletcher of East Peoria.

The trend of signing teammates continued with Grant them to play in a spot but certainly they are going to have to earn it and keep it," Collins said. "It's a long way 'til next spring," Collins said. He added that there are only three returning players who have their spots guaranteed.

"The rest are up for grabs," said Collins

The Cougars improved their record last season from the previous by eight games.

"I'd like to see us improve by eight more this year."

The Cougars finished their 2005 season with a 28-27 overall record and a 19-21 record in the Great Lakes Valley Conference.

SIUE's track coach wins Coach of the Year

MATTHEW BRUCE
SPORTS EDITOR

After a year of record-breaking success, SIUE women's track and field head coach Ben Beyers took home the NCAA Division II Great Lakes Region Coach of the Year award.

Beyers, in his first season as head coach of the women's team, helped the Cougars post a school record of eight All-Americans.

"It's really nice," Beyers said. "It's good to be recognized. But from my standpoint, it's more important to be recognized as a team. I think this is more of a reflection of our team and the accomplishments they made this year."

SIUE crushed this year's in-conference competition, notching team titles at the Great Lakes Valley Conference Indoor and Outdoor Championships.

Eight Cougars nabbed gold medals at the indoor championships while nine Cougars were crowned GLVC outdoor champs. Beyers took Coach of the Year honors at both events.

"A Coach of the Year award without a great group of athletes on and off the field, I think that's impossible," he said. "We've got some great kids who work hard, and I think that's the bottom line. It makes us coaches seem a lot better than we truly are."

The 2005 season was Beyers' third at SIUE. He served as assistant coach on both the men's and women's teams during his first two years. The Cougars have seen unparalleled success since Beyers joined the coaching staff.

"I think it's in our mindset," Beyers said of the team's newfound attitude. "I think the success kind of coincided when coach Dave Austraskas and I came in. We talked about pride and focus. We've tried to instill those things into our athletes."

Over the last two years, SIUE has broken 31 school records and shattered six GLVC marks.

SIUE earned its first conference title at the 2004 GLVC Indoor Championships. The Cougars have laid claim to three of the last four conference crowns, winning their first outdoor championship in May.

"You always begin looking at your upperclassmen to provide leadership," Beyers said. "This year we had a good group of upperclassmen. The message filters down through the team. It starts with the coaches, and then the players have to believe in it. And then it really becomes their team."

As a result of the newfound success, other schools are beginning to SIUE students looking for ways to pass the time after class can sign up for summer intramural sports at the Student Fitness Center.

SIUE Campus Recreation, through the Office of IM Sports, encourages students to come out and participate in the sand volleyball and inner-tube water polo leagues this summer.

"We like to make sure we provide as many campus recreation activities as possible for the students during the summer," Campus Recreation Assistant Director Chad Rodgers said.

Students, faculty and staff members can sign up for events by filling out a registration form and returning it to the Student Fitness Center front desk.

Players can organize their own teams, sign on as individuals or enter as free agents. Teams short on manpower can pick up extra players from the free agent pool to fill their roster.

Team registration requires a $20 entry fee and a $20 forfeit fee deposit.

Registration for free agents and individuals is free.

Both leagues, as in the spring and fall semesters, are five weeks with a single-elimination playoff.

The inner-tube water polo league begins June 14 at the Cougar Lake Pool. The sand volleyball league kicks off June 16 with matches at Cougar Village. There will be men's, women's and coed divisions.

Despite having to cancel the summer softball league, which was on tap to start Wednesday, because only two teams signed up, Rodgers said he believes the remaining summer intramurals will draw bigger turnouts.

WARNING:
PROLONGED EXPOSURE TO NOISES LOUDER THAN 85 DECIBELS CAN RESULT IN PERMANENT HEARING LOSS.

Millions of Americans expose themselves to noise levels above 85 decibels for hours at a time – the level audiologists identify as the danger zone. Lawn mowers, sporting events, live or recorded music, power tools, even traffic and crowded restaurants can sustain these levels. If you're around noises like these for prolonged periods, you're risking permanent hearing loss. For more on the 85 dB threshold, and ways to protect your hearing health, visit ASHA.org.
