Letters to the Editor Policy:

The editors, staff and publishers of the Alestle believe in the free exchange of ideas, concerns and opinions and will publish as many letters as possible.

Letters may be turned in at the Alestle office located in the Morris University Center, Room 2022 or via e-mail at opinion@alestlelive.com.

All hard copy letters should be typed and double-spaced. Letters should be no longer than 500 words.

Please include phone number, signature, class rank and major. We reserve the right to edit letters for grammar and content. However, care will be taken to ensure that the letter's message is not lost or altered.

Letters to the editor will not be printed anonymously except under extreme circumstances. We reserve the right to reject letters.

About the Alestle:

One copy of the Alestle is no charge. Additional copies cost 25 cents.

Family tradition: Rahn transitions to health care administration

COURTNEY HILL
Alestle Reporter

Superman's dedication to helping people in need is a trait Student Body President Brandon Rahn looks to live by every day. He looks up to the superhero as a purveyor of justice whose compassion knows no bounds.

"[Superman] always looked up to the little person and helped bring up people from their lowest points," Rahn said.

It is this type of spirit which has led Rahn's through his collegiate career, leading him to become involved in several campus organizations including the University Honors Program, Students Today, Alumni Tomorrow, Phi Kappa Psi Fraternity and Student Government.

Rahn's love for helping his fellow man stems from his childhood in Lincoln, where his family helped him realize his dream of becoming a surgeon.

"My parents and grandparents always told me...that [I] could do anything, so...I had so many passions that I wanted to be just about everything," Rahn said. "But the one thing that always stuck with me was for me to be a doctor. From a very early age, I was in sewing classes, trying to learn as much as possible, reading anatomy and physiology books and whatever I could."

Rahn's aspirations to become a surgeon were halted after being diagnosed with a tremor in his hand. The economics and political science major found another way to continue being involved in health care for the future.

"My family does health care administration, so that's always been a part of me as well," Rahn said. "I want to take that route and go into the politic[al] and lobbying aspects of health care instead of direct patient care."

Rahn's experiences as a proactive student on campus have earned him recognition, one of which required lobbying the state legislature for a funding venture. Chancellor Vaughn Vandegrift said Rahn played a leadership role throughout the state in his efforts to assist students with financial aid.

"I think that was a great achievement for our Student Government," Vandegrift said, "and we got a lot of recognition around the state as SIU Edwardsville being leaders in working toward scholarships and grants for students. He was a big part of that."

Rahn said his student body presidency was an opportunity to better the campus community through his network ties.

"Overall, it's been the ability of working with others to increase the student voice at SIUE," Rahn said. "To gain the respect of the administration, to work through Brandon Rahn will be attending St. Louis University in the fall for a graduate degree in health management.

problems as a team and a partnership with the administration... that has allowed us to do incredible things over the last four

Zac Sandefer, a senior business administration major from Charleston, is Rahn's fraternity brother and said their friendship is strong because of their past experiences through the fraternity.

Student Trustee Jeffry Harrison, described how he met Rahn at a Springboard session in the summer of 2009 that solidified their friendship.

"He offered me a position on the executive board of student government," Harrison said. "I've worked hand-in-hand with Brandon for about a year-and-a-half now. I've learned a lot from the experience, and what I do know about Brandon is that he has the students' best interests at heart."

Rahn's will continue to be in the community while studying health care administration at St. Louis University.

Rahn will be a new graduate for the spring 2011 commencement, but also a keynote speaker for the College of Arts and Sciences undergrad ceremony — an honor awarded to him by faculty members. Rahn highlighted a few of the important points in his speech, with a continued focus on the bright future ahead.

"The rising of our generation will be primarily my speech," Rahn said. "I'm going to be discussing the hopes of the future, and our role for the next century."

Health advocate: Breuer aims to teach communities healthy habits

BRIAN BERNIS
Alestle Reporter

Senior community health education major Rachel Breuer of Florissant, Mo. came to SIUE to be close to home but still be able to grow as a student. For her graduation speech, she looks to inspire and give thanks to those who helped her grow while at SIUE.

Nicole Klein, program director for health education, said she is glad Breuer signed up to speak because she is someone who can relate to her fellow students.

"I was happy she signed up because she is a straight-A student who I know has worked so hard to get to where she is today," Klein said.

Klein said Breuer is an excellent candidate to speak because to get to graduation, students have to put hours of dedication and passion into what they are doing and Breuer exemplifies those qualities.

"She was vice president for our honorary society and a member of the dean's dozen, which helped with recruitment for the School of Education and other volunteer work," Klein said. "She was also a part of the SIUE dance team."

Breuer, however, has been active since high school. Her younger sister, Nichole Breuer, said Rachel has been a motivated person who has stayed busy at SIUE.

Rachel Breuer will work part time with Transtria, where she will evaluate health education programs sponsored by the government. Her dream job would be teaching people how to live healthier.

"She was president of her class, president of student council and so many different clubs. She has always been somebody to get involved. She never really had any down time," Nichole Breuer said.

Both Nichole Breuer and Klein said Rachel's drive to be successful was noticeable in the classroom and at home.

"She was a part of a program in Roxana where she had to instruct kids how to eat healthier and my mom and I were in the living room and she watched her do the program probably 15 times but that is just how she is," Nichole Breuer said. "She wants to be perfect and [that] mentality has got her this far"

"She is one of those special students that comes through a department and is somebody who really sets an example to other students."

-Nicole Klein

Senior community health education major

Rachel Breuer credits SIUE for helping her get this far.

"This has been a great experience for me. SIUE has given me so many opportunities to get involved and grow as a person and for that I am forever thankful," Klein said. "She is one of those special students that comes through a department and is somebody who really sets an example to other students."

After graduation, Breuer has a part-time job with Transtria where she will evaluate health education programs put on by the government.

Although the job is in her career field, she said her dream job is to be in a community or government organization and teach people how to live healthier lives.

Before she starts her part-time job, she has a speech to prepare for.

"There [are] so many ways you can give the speech and I have looked at every YouTube video on graduation speeches," Breuer said. "I want to inspire but also entertain the audience so they are not falling asleep as I speak."

In preparing for her speech Breuer has looked through Facebook statuses and emails to find inspirational quotes. Collecting quotes is something Breuer has done since the beginning of college.

"I have had the quote list since college but I have been finding quotes to inspire my fellow graduates. I have copied and pasted several Facebook statuses and cheesy emails to help form my speech," Breuer said.

Rachel Breuer has narrowed down the list to 10 quotes, which she feels will inspire graduates as they head toward the future.

Although Breuer is nervous, Klein said they feel she will give a speech that will not only be entertaining, but will encourage graduates to go out there in the real world and be successful.

"I know she will do a great job with the speech and I know in the future we will be hearing great things from her," Klein said.

Dual diplomas: Student to graduate from two universities

KARI WILLIAMS

Alestle Opinion Editor

Senior industrial engineering major Duygu Sagioglu of Istanbul is one of the first four students graduating from SIUE's dual diploma program with Istanbul Technological University.

High school students in Turkey take a national exam to get into university, according to SIUE School of Engineering Dean Hasan Sevim and the students select the university they want to attend, depending on their scores.

"We take 35 students into the program each year, and these are [in the] 98 percentile of their cohorts, their class basically, so they're top notch students, and Duygu is one of them," Sevim said.

According to Sevim, students learn English their first year, go to ITU freshman year and junior years and SIUE sophomore and senior years.

"Duygu has been with us sophomore year and senior year," Sevim said, "and she did not have to do her English year because she knew enough English from high school."

Sevim said only four of the 35 students in the program were able to skip the year of English.

"When you look at it from that perspective, what Duygu brought to the School of Engineering, I would say that she brought an international dimension," Sevim said.

Sagioglu said coming to the United States was different from Turkey, but she got used to it with the help of friends and professors.

"Everything was different, the food, the people. It's a small town. I live in a big city," Sagioglu said. "There wasn't much to do, just going to St. Louis was the only thing [fun], and I had to make new friends and that was a big challenge for me."

Duygu Sagioglu is receiving two diplomas for her work, one from SIUE and one from the Istanbul Technological University. She is attending Duke University in the fall.

Seref Karacal, associate dean of the School of Engineering, said Sagioglu is a good student who comes from a selective high school and Istanbul Technical University, an accomplishment by itself.

"She has a nice personality as well," Karacal said. "She gets along with people well and is a good team player."

According to Sevim, the dual diploma program brings another culture to campus and the classroom.

"These are top notch students so they elevate the level of course delivery or understanding in the classroom, so they challenge the instructors with their questions," Sevim said. "Duygu is one of those. They elevate the level of education in the classroom."

According to Karacal, Sagioglu has helped increase the academic quality in the department and helps with recruitment.

"She speaks very highly of our program, which helps us recruit more students...she's an excellent person to recruit students and academically, [she is in the] dual diploma program," Karacal said.

For Sagioglu, transitioning between two different cultures was a good experience.

"It was challenging, but I think...coming here for the first year was difficult, but then like this year it was just the same thing so it doesn't seem as difficult," Sagioglu said.

Being involved in the dual diploma program at has helped Sagioglu with her English, exposed her to a new culture and created friendships. She is also featured on one of SIUE's billboards.

"They just wanted me to be a part of an interview just like this one to talk about the dual diploma program and then they took my picture," Sagioglu said.

Sagioglu said she was asked if the pictures could be used for marketing and on the billboards. At first, Sagioglu's picture was only on the cover of the School of Engineering dean's report, "Engineering Momentum," but then she was asked if it could be on a billboard.

"I thought it was going to be something small. Then I came here this year and saw it in person and it was huge, right next to the highway," Sagioglu said. "At first it was very strange seeing my picture on a billboard, but now I'm used to it. It was awkward."

After graduation, Sagioglu said she will attend graduate school at Duke University to study engineering management.

Sevim said Sagioglu is a great choice as a commencement speaker because she is one of the first students graduating from the dual diploma program. ITU's chancellor, the director of international programs and the coordinator of the dual diploma program at ITU will be at commencement.

"I think she'll be very interesting and attractive to the audience as well. The dual diploma program [has] a girl from Turkey and excellent student who really had a good perspective in life and delivering the commencement speech," Sevim said.

Speaking at commencement, according to Sagioglu, is special.

"It's very special for me because I'm an international student and like they could think, 'It would be difficult for her to speak' or something like that, but I'm very proud of myself to be in such a position," Sagioglu said.

Sagioglu said her speech is about change, focusing it on Aristotle's quote, "Change is the only constant."

"I said that throughout our whole life we will be facing all of these big changes so this is not just one big change and you'll be done with it, but it's just the beginning," Sagioglu said. "We're going to face so many more changes and it will be the only stable thing in our lives."

Business minded: Strong portfolio, academics lead to success

BLAKE NICHOLS

Alestle Reporter

Giving a graduation speech can be no easy task. Senior business and economics major Linden Graber summed his thoughts on his graduation speech in a couple of sentences.

"Honestly, I'm terrified, but I'm also looking forward to it. My goal is to keep it positive, and hopefully really inspirational," Linden said.

Graber is a 2007 graduate of Belleville East High School and began his collegiate career at SIUE in fall 2007.

Graber is a 22-year-old undergraduate student who will be graduating in May and is also the speaker for the undergraduate and graduate School of Business and School of Nursing ceremony.

Graber said one reason he chose to attend SIUE is because he was a recipient of the Presidential Scholarship.

"I chose to attend SIUE because of its close proximity to St. Louis," Graber said. "I felt like there would be a lot of opportunities there. It's also a really familiar area, since I grew up around here."

Graber will be graduating with a Bachelor of Science in business, economics and finance.

"It sounds a lot more difficult

Linden Graber plans on attending graduate school in Texas, but said he will return to St. Louis once he graduates.

and complicated than it really is," Graber said.

He was an intern at Merrill Lynch from June to December in 2010 at the local Edwardsville branch.

Graber currently works at Neville, Richards, Waller Law Firm in Belleville.

Graber said he was involved in several groups in his first two years at SIUE. He was in Sigma Phi Epsilon, and was also their vice president of finance for two years. His involvement made him stick out to some of his professors.

One of the professors Graber said he particularly enjoyed was economics and finance professor Ayse Evrensel.

Evrensel could not think of a negative thing to say about Graber. She said she enjoyed having him in class and said he is a one of a kind student.

"I see Linden as a natural leader, a very good student," Evrensel said. "He expresses himself very nicely, he's always on time for class. If he has a presentation to do he's on the ball with it. He goes above and beyond everything that he does."

Evrensel said Graber doesn't treat his grades as if it were a competition, but still does a great job in his classes.

"Linden is the type of person that you can never tell if he's stressed because everything he does is with great ease," Evrensel said. "He enjoys learning and that makes me very happy. He retains so much information that a lot of students don't."

Evrensel said Linden has earned her respect because he is such a positive person and is an academic.

Linden Graber's sister, Ghilleen Graber, who also attends SIUE, said outside of the classroom he has a great personality as well.

"We are as close as a brother and sister could be, I'd say," Ghilleen Graber said. "I love Linden's sense of humor. He's a really funny guy, and he knows how to make fun out of every situation and release tension."

Ghilleen said she always remembers Linden being a straight-A student and his teachers always seemed to love him.

Linden will be moving to Texas after graduating to attend Baylor University in Waco to get his MBA.

"I think they have a really strong program and I have a nice scholarship," Linden Graber said. "They have a strong finance program which will be my concentration while I'm there."

After graduating from Baylor, Linden hopes to work in the field of personal investments, wealth and management. He wants to invest assets in portfolios and design financial plans.

He hopes to make his way back to the St. Louis area after graduating from Baylor.
