

Suspect named in attack on SIUE runner

Warrant out for Carbondale man charged with aggravated battery

ALESTLE STAFF REPORT

SIUE Police have a warrant for the arrest of Kevin D. McBride Wednesday for aggravated battery.

McBride, 20 of Carbondale, allegedly hit SIUE student and cross country runner Jason Olszowka over the head with a beer bottle on Jan. 12 at a party at 425 Cougar Village.

According to Police Chief Richard Harrison, the party got out of control and a fight broke out. Witnesses said some cross country runners were horse playing, pretending to fight, when someone misunderstood and began a real fight.

Harrison said Mustafa Cetin, Jewel Gibbs, Bilal Spiller and McBride were in a car after the fight and were questioned by police that night, but police waited to gather more information before making an arrest or issuing a warrant.

The incident resulted in the suspensions of Cetin and Gibbs from the men's basketball team and several runners including Olszowka from the cross country team. Cetin allegedly punched a hole in the upstairs hallway of the 425 building and was arrested for intentional criminal damage to state-supported property, a felony. He is set to appear in Madison County Circuit Court on Feb. 2 for a preliminary hearing.

Harrison said McBride is wanted on two other warrants for failure to appear in court stemming from a domestic battery charge. "He already has two other agencies looking for him," Harrison said.

SIUE Police will notify police in the Carbondale area that they have the arrest warrant for McBride. "We'll send notifications out that we're looking for him," Harrison said.

If convicted, McBride could face between two to five years in prison for the incident.

Olszowka could not be reached for comment.

Jason Olszowka received 15 stitches after an alleged attack in Cougar Village two weeks ago.

Service program looking to boost membership

ELIZABETH GRIMSLEY
NEWS REPORTER

American Humanics, a new program at SIUE, is aiming to promote its service-oriented curriculum and recruit interested individuals.

The group is sponsoring an open house from 5 to 8 p.m. Thursday in the Faculty Club on the second floor of the Morris University Center.

The American Humanics program combines coursework with co-curricular activities that allow students direct involvement in community service and nonprofit organizations.

According to Ann Parisi, American Humanics coordinator, this is the main difference between this program and programs offered by the Kimmel Leadership Center.

"The difference is that this program is more academically based," Parisi said. "It is aimed at students who are interested in a career in nonprofit organization. That doesn't mean you have to want a career in that area to be in the program, though."

Parisi has filed a formal request with the Illinois Board of Higher Education for academic programs in the field of nonprofit organization.

"Our hope is that we can offer a minor in the fall of 2001 and then the major would be available in the fall of 2002," Parisi said.

Members of American Humanics gather for an open house Wednesday afternoon. Interested students are invited to another open house Thursday.

ANURAG GUPTA/ALESTLE

Students can benefit financially as well as educationally, she said. The program has $1 million available for student loans and scholarships.

The program also offers training and skills needed to move into one of the 11,000 job openings in the field of nonprofit organizations.

The office has recently been moved into a new room on the third floor of Alumni Hall.

"Our office moved because we were located in an office called the Center for Organizational Research and Development, and we didn't really fit with that office," Parisi said. "Now we have our own door where students can come and go without disrupting that office."

The program receives funding from the W.K. Kellogg Foundation, but is part of the public administration and policy analysis department in the College of Arts and Sciences.

There is a set of requirements for being involved in the program. Students must have 180 contact hours in related coursework and 300 hours of approved internship work. They must also actively participate in the association and participate in co-curricular activities.

A certificate is awarded upon completion of the program verifying that all the requirements have been met, and the individual is recognized nationally as certified for nonprofit work.

"Last year we awarded two American Humanics certificates to members who went on to work for the Boy Scouts," Parisi said.

She also said that five more people will receive certificates this year.

For more information about American Humanics, contact Parisi at aparisi@siue.edu.

County drops charges against former student, sorority prez

ALESTLE STAFF REPORT

Felony theft charges have been dropped against former Alpha Phi President Christie Schneider, her father Paul Schneider Jr. and Dennis Butkovich of Alton.

The three were accused in 1996 of stealing $5,900 from a fund set up to buy a house in Edwardsville for the Alpha Phi sorority, but the Madison County prosecutors dropped the charges in November because of lack of evidence.

Madison County Assistant State's Attorney Thomas Nevins said his office couldn't prove that Christie Schneider had criminal intent when she transferred money to her father who was handling the renovation of a house in the 400 block of South Buchanan Street.

"Once we couldn't use the original theory that they violated sorority guidelines on the expenditure of money, it wasn't possible to prove criminal intent beyond a reasonable doubt which is our burden," Nevins said.

School of Education seeks new dean

ELIZABETH GRIMSLEY
NEWS REPORTER

The SIUE School of Education is taking the necessary first steps to find a new dean.

An 11-member committee has been selected to find a suitable candidate to replace the current dean, Mary Polite, whose two-year contract is drawing to an end.

"The committee is made up of people from the School of Education and some from outside," said John Borsa, committee chairman and assistant professor of education leadership.

Along with six faculty members from the School of Education, the search committee includes a kinesiology student, a superintendent of schools, a secretary and two faculty members from the College of Arts and Sciences.

The committee will begin the screening process on Feb. 9, but applications will be accepted until the position is filled. Borsa said applications usually stop coming in after the screening date, but no application will be turned away simply because it came in late.

Borsa said the position was advertised in The Journal of Higher Education, Education Today and Black Issues in Higher Education.

"The information about the position can be found on the school Web site, but that's generally not where applicants find the information," Borsa said.

Ultimately, the committee will screen the applicants, make the final cut and choose a few to visit SIUE. The Office of the Provost will make the final decision and be in charge of hiring someone for the position.

Helping-hand agencies look to SIUE

ANURAG GUPTA/ALESTLE

Students get information on volunteer agencies at the SIUE volunteer fair Wednesday in the Goshen Lounge. More than 40 agencies were available from various backgrounds. The fair was sponsored by the Student Leadership Development Program.

Campus Scanner

Graduates: The Annual Graduate Exhibition will be on display through Friday at the New Wagner Art Gallery in the Art and Design Building. More than 30 pieces are on display. For more information, call the art and design department at 650-3071.

Register: A voter registration drive will be from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Thursday in the Goshen Lounge of the Morris University Center. For more information, call the Kimmel Leadership Center at 650-2686.

SIUE-TV: Check out the latest "Off the Shelf" at 6:30 p.m. Friday on ECTV-Channel 6. Guest Nancy Ruff, an SIUE English language and literature professor, will discuss the upcoming trip to Greece and Turkey with SIU's "Expeditions in the Ancient World." Ruff talks about how traveling to the actual site of the "Iliad" and the "Odyssey" can help put the works in perspective.

Bowl: American Humanics is sponsoring a bowling fund-raiser for the Big Brothers Big Sisters of Southwestern Illinois. Bowling sessions will be at 6 and 7:45 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 8, in Cougar Lanes on the bottom floor of the Morris University Center. Teams must be registered by Friday. For more information, contact Ann Parisi at 650-3645.

Theater: "Alberta Hunter: Grand Old Lady of the Blues and Other Tales from the South," directed by SIUE Artist-In-Residence Lisa Colbert Bandele, will be performed by the Black Theater Workshop at 7:30 p.m. Thursday through Saturday, Feb. 1 through 3 in the Metcalf Student Experimental Theater. The story of Alberta Hunter is told through her songs and tales of growing up in Memphis just after the turn of the 20th century. In the second half of the evening, members of the Black Theater Workshop will focus on the works of writers and poets from the Black Theater canon.

Music: The 2000-2001 Coffee Concerts Chamber Music Series continues at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the Meridian Ballroom in the Morris University Center. Admission includes dessert and coffee served at intermission and free parking in the visitor lot. Tickets are $5 for students, $9 for seniors and $10 for the public. For more information, call 650-2774.

Art: The Annual Undergraduate Exhibition begins with an awards reception at 7 p.m. Monday in the New Wagner Gallery of the Art and Design Building. The pieces will be on display in the gallery through Feb. 16.

More music: Acoustic guitarist Coventry

Jones will perform at 6 p.m. Tuesday in Cougar Den as part of University Center Board's Coffeehouse Showcase. For more information, contact Jeremy Heigert at 650-3374 or visit www.siu.edu/UCB.

Give blood: The American Red Cross is sponsoring blood drives from 2 to 7 p.m. Monday at the Edwardsville First Baptist Church, 834 St. Louis St. and from 3 to 7 p.m. Monday at the Glen Carbon Community Center, 157 N. Main.

Service: Volunteers are needed for a one-day "Metro East Urban Plunge" Saturday, Feb. 3, at the following locations in East St. Louis: Holy Angels Shelter, Catholic Urban Programs, Lessie Bates Neighborhood Houses and the Griffin Center. Transportation will be provided. Participants will depart at 8 a.m. from parking Lot B and return at 4 p.m. Wear work clothes and sturdy shoes. Bring work gloves. Lunch will be provided at the soup kitchen. For more information, call 650-2686 or e-mail holyangels71@hotmail.com.

More service: Volunteers are needed for a computer rehabilitation project Saturday, Feb. 3 in Washington Park. Advance registration is required. Lunch and transportation will be provided. Participants will leave at 8 a.m. from parking Lot B and return at 4 p.m. Wear work clothes and sturdy shoes. To register, contact the Kimmel Leadership Center at 650-2686 or e-mail computerrehab@hotmail.com.

Business: As part of the SIUE business school's "Business Hour," series at 11 a.m. Tuesday in Room 2401 of Alumni Hall, David Steward, chairman and chief executive officer of World Wide Technology Inc., will speak about how his company's operation enables other international companies to share, distribute, organize and analyze information.

Seniors: "The Networked Word: A Discussion of the Nature and Educational Utility of Computer-Mediated Bulletin Board Discussions" is the topic of the dialogue with senior citizens set for 1 p.m. Wednesday in the Mississippi Room of the Morris University Center. For more information, call the office of continuing education at 650-3210.

SLDP: "Effective Meetings" is the topic of the Student Leadership Development Program module at 2 p.m. Tuesday in the Faculty Club of the Morris University Center. War on hemp, cannabis should end

MELINDA HAWKINS
COLUMNIST

Marijuana activists are heartened by recent signs that their struggles in the war on drugs, or more specifically the war on marijuana, are finally showing results.

The November elections saw a series of challenges to current policies on marijuana. Legalization activists are watching recent events with great interest as the war on marijuana is dealt a series of blows.

In California, voters overwhelmingly endorsed Proposition 36, the "treatment instead of incarceration" ballot initiative. Voters in Nevada and Colorado approved medical marijuana initiatives. In Oregon and Utah, voters overwhelmingly approved initiatives requiring police and prosecutors to meet a reasonable burden of proof before seizing money and other property from people suspected of criminal activity.

Perhaps the most significant event, for the first time in U.S. history, the U.S. Supreme Court decided that it will rule on whether federal law permits medical use of marijuana. Activists' concerns have often been stereotyped and trivialized by drug war supporters, but they have many reasons for wanting to end the war on a plant.

The legalization of cannabis is an environmental issue because the war on drugs has made it illegal to grow industrial hemp. Although industrial hemp has only minute amounts of THC, the psychoactive ingredient that gives marijuana its euphoric properties, the growing and cultivation of the versatile hemp plant remains illegal. This restriction has a disastrous effect on the environment. Why? Hemp can be grown and processed with a fraction of the toxic chemicals used to process cotton, wood pulp and petroleum.

Hemp can be used to make paper, textiles, plastics, clothing, paint, foodstuffs and animal feed. Hemp is a high-yield crop that requires almost none of the toxic pesticides that are poisoning our soil and water. Any product presently made from wood fibers or petroleum can be made from hemp with a tiny fraction of the toxic chemicals used to process wood and petroleum products.

Hemp was a fundamental part of American history. George Washington grew hemp and strongly encouraged his fellow citizens to grow it as a way of ensuring American independence from imports. Hemp was used to make the sails of the first ships to come to America, and the Constitution of the United States is printed on hemp paper.

Although opponents of hemp cultivation insist the crops would confuse law enforcement officials, cannabis legalization activists and environmentalists feel in light of our growing environmental problems, this argument is spurious.

Cannabis legalization is a civil and human rights issue as well. The war on drugs has made institutionalized racism and sentencing disparity the norm in law enforcement. Despite studies that show African-Americans use drugs at a lesser rate than whites, data from the FBI's 1995 Uniform Crime Report show the black arrest rate for marijuana to be 2.5 times higher than for whites.

In his book "Malign Neglect," criminologist Michael Tonry wrote: "Urban African Americans have borne the brunt of the War on Drugs. They have been arrested, prosecuted, convicted and imprisoned at increasing rates since the 1980s, and grossly out of proportion to their numbers in the general population, or among drug users."

Nationally, one of every three black males in his 20s is in prison, on parole or probation. In other words, more black youngsters will go to prison than to college. Drug czar Gen. Barry McCaffrey has said, "We cannot arrest our way out of this problem," but that is exactly what has been happening with each increase in drug war funding.

Due to the disenfranchisement of people convicted of federal crimes, approximately 30 percent of black men are unable to vote, many of these due to nonviolent drug possession convictions. The percentage is even higher in Southern states such as South Carolina.

The war on drugs has debilitated civil rights in other ways. Asset seizure laws have made it legal for law enforcement officials to seize property of citizens suspected of drug involvement without having to convict them of any crime. The burden of proving they were not involved in illegal activity falls on the accused, which is in opposition to the democratic ideal of "innocent until proven guilty."

World incarceration rates show the war on drugs has also contributed to America having the highest incarceration rate of any Westernized country. Our government imprisons 1.7 million people. Only 3 percent of federal inmates are violent criminals. About 60 percent are drug offenders. The FBI Uniform Crime Reports show that there were 704,812 arrests for marijuana, 88 percent of those for possession rather than sale in 1999 alone.

The war on marijuana is also a war on the sick and dying. Despite the fact many physicians recommend marijuana to counter the pain and suffering caused by glaucoma, multiple sclerosis, chemotherapy and AIDS-wasting syndrome, extremely ill patients continue to be treated the same as recreational users in the eyes of the law. Although there are legal drugs available to treat these conditions, many patients find these drugs difficult to use due to the dangerous and painful side effects.

In 1998 patients responded to the U.S. House of Representatives' scheduled vote on House Joint Resolution 117, which stated the House was "unequivocally opposed" to allowing seriously ill people to use medicinal marijuana.

Renee Emry and Cheryl Miller, both of whom are severely disabled by multiple sclerosis, engaged in acts of nonviolent civil disobedience. In the offices of U.S. Rep. Bill McCollum, R-Fla., and U.S. Rep. Jim Rogan, R-Calif., Emry and Miller smoked marijuana cigarettes to protest those representatives' opposition to physician-prescribed marijuana. Both were arrested and taken to jail in their wheelchairs.

"I got arrested today so that hopefully some day, other patients will not have to," Emry said. Seriously ill and dying patients continue to be prosecuted despite the fact 80 percent of Americans approve of prescription marijuana for patients.

Marijuana legalization activists hope the war on the cannabis plant is drawing to a much-needed close. It is in the best interests of the country that we end this war on a plant, and one can only hope that after reading this article you won't have to be a "druggie" to agree. Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

I am writing to express my agreement with your editorial titled "Bench Players Give Reason to Cheer."

I have attended many basketball games this year, and I really enjoy watching both the women's and men's teams. Both teams have a lot of talent, but as most of us know, the men's team has gone through some well-publicized trials lately. These trials are what make the efforts of Luke Humphrey, Garrett Thomas, Andrew Gajewski, Marty Perry, Nick Hartwig and Brandon Hilton very outstanding.

These seven guys have been playing their hearts out over the last few games, and I expect those efforts will continue. Expect this team to play exciting, competitive basketball that will be fun to watch. I know I will be at the games.

Oh, and while we are speaking of basketball, I would like to mention Misi Clark, who now leads all SIUE scorers with 1,950 points. This is a truly outstanding feat and cannot be mentioned too many times.

Student wins scholarship for minority teacher group

MAUREEN HAGRMAN
NEWS REPORTER

Brad Kimble, a senior English secondary education major, is the recipient of an Illinois Association of Teachers of English minority scholarship.

The annual IATE award is given to one student. The IATE chooses 30 colleges to compete for the award, and each college chooses one representative to submit work.

Kimble was selected to be the representative for SIUE. He submitted an essay on minority author Yusef Komunyakaa and a lesson plan on how to teach Komunyakaa to students.

As the winner of this award, Kimble was made an honorary member of IATE for one year and attended a teachers' conference. His paper will be published in the Illinois English Bulletin.

Kimble said the award and IATE provide an excellent opportunity and help fulfill some requirements for students.

"As an education major, you are required to continue your education after graduation," Kimble said.

"This organization and some of the workshops meet those requirements. In addition, you get to meet and know some of the best teachers from all over the state. They are willingly taking the time to further their education."

Kimble said he encourages all interested students, not just English education majors, to look into the award and IATE.

"This organization for English teachers also has other branches for science and math, and they are actively seeking more minority members," Kimble said.

"This is a good opportunity for any student who wants to join a professional organization."

He also said future students should attempt to win the award.

"SIUE has a fine reputation with IATE," Kimble said. "In the past 10 years, six people from here have won this scholarship. So more students should try to find out about it and submit work."

For more information on IATE or the scholarship, students should contact Brad Kimble at bjkimble@midwest.net.

Battle of the Bands rocked large crowd

FOR THE ALESTLE

Katherine Dunham Hall theater was transformed into a musical battleground for the Battle of the Bands Friday.

The U.S. Institute for Theatre Technology recruited 11 bands locally and beyond to battle it out to raise money for USITT's trip to the National Theater Convention in March in Long Beach, Calif.

The bands paid a $25 entrance fee, submitted a demo and competed for a $300 prize. USITT sold pizza, candy, chips and soda and charged a $5 cover to raise money for the trip. The USITT came out with approximately $1,200 profit.

The bands were of all ages. Azygous, among other acts, was composed mostly of high school students while Three Stage Virgin and Merry Merry Hereditary represented the older generation. SIUE was represented by its students in The JNMJ Band, fly from august and Kessel Run.

The styles of music featured that evening were as diverse as the musicians. The JNMJ Band played punky Weezer-esque songs while Merry Merry Hereditary maintained an acoustic, folky feel. Other acts, such as fly from august and Kessel Run, typified '90s pop rock. Any rock 'n' roll fan's taste could be met.

The show featured an amateur laser light show, random expulsions of bubbles from the ceiling and a fog machine. The audience got to feel the fog up close and personal after large amounts of it emerged from the stage during Kessel Run's set.

Beyond a few problems with the sound and the choking fog during the beginning of Kessel Run's set, the night went off without a hitch.

Sunrust landed the first place prize of $300. Sunrust led the voting with 46 and Paraffin Dora came in second with a total of 45 votes.

"We'd like to do it annually," USITT secretary Tammy Freed said.

Four "committed" couples are separated from their mates and placed with sexy singles whose only mission is to seduce them.

The couples said they are going on the show to test their love for one another. If they pass the test, they'll live happily ever after.

Dr. Frances Kimbrough, psychologist and marriage counselor, said if people know their mates are flirts, then putting them in a situation where they have the opportunity to flirt will only hurt the relationship.

"It's like testing an alcoholic by putting a bottle in front of him and seeing if he'll drink it," he said.

Kimbrough said it is easy for humans to be tempted by anything, whether it is alcohol, food or sex.

He said "Temptation Island" is another example of the media going too far in trying to entertain an audience.

"['Temptation Island'] is not even pleasant to watch because there are people who are going to get hurt," he said.

The Rev. Dave Konderla, associate campus minister at St.

Mary's Catholic Center in College Station, said he agrees with Kimbrough that this show is not good for relationships.

Konderla said he thinks a show like this is a setup because he cannot see two people who really love each other appearing on the show.

"It would be hard to convince me that these couples are truly committed to one another," Konderla said.

In upcoming episodes, one of the couples will be kicked off the show after it is revealed they had a child together. The news of their child has resulted in some Fox affiliates pulling the show from their lineups.

WRAZ-TV in Raleigh, N.C., decided to stop airing the show because it refused to condone such behavior. Tommy Schenck, WRAZ general manager, said in a written statement that the station had no prior knowledge that any of the couples had children.

"WRAZ will not support a program that could potentially break up the parents of a young child," Schenck said.

Konderla said that the institution of marriage is suffering and that this couple's child will also suffer.

"This show erodes the goal of two people trying to demonstrate heroic and sacrificial love to one another," Konderla said.

Konderla said there should be an alternative to shows like "Temptation Island."

"The media in general should strive to create shows that celebrate the noble qualities within us," he said.

Fox, home to favorites like "The Simpsons" and "Malcolm in the Middle," has not had the best luck with reality-based TV shows.

After "Who Wants to Marry a Multi-Millionaire," Fox has been accused of producing shows many claim contain "Foxploitation."

Konderla agreed that a show like "Temptation Island" exploits people's weaknesses to basic temptations.

Konderla said such shows remind him of stories about the days of the Roman Forum, when rulers had to keep people occupied by putting on gruesome battles.

"People pursuing immoral goals as entertainment reflects the culture watching it," Konderla said.

"Temptation Island" has held its own in its Wednesday night slot against NBC's popular "The West Wing." Aimed at 18- to 25-year-olds, "Temptation Island" reported 17.5 million viewers on the second night it aired.

Jennifer Carrisal, a junior political science and journalism major, said she thinks it appeals to audiences because they want to see what is going to happen to these people.

"Because it is so extreme, curiosity makes me want to watch it," she said.

Carrisal said shows like "Temptation Island" could have a negative influence on how young people view relationships.

"I think it shows casual sex as being a good thing," Carrisal said.

The men and women participating in the show have not gone without criticism. Many of the women are former models, and most of the men are there to appeal to a woman's desire for something more substantial than just physical attraction. Some have even called the tempters prostitutes.

"They are messing with people's lives; they are trying to break up a relationship," Carrisal said.

Even if none of the relationships work, at least they can say they got a free trip out of it. But will it be worth it?

'The Gift' leaves viewers in suspense

WILHELMINA MAURITZ
MICHIGAN DAILY

(U-WIRE) ANN ARBOR, Mich. — "The Gift" is very reminiscent of last summer's "What Lies Beneath." The whole aura of the movie is creepy. "The Gift" never lets you get too comfortable before giving you another jolt of scariness that sends chills down your back. Even the opening credits had a quick shock that made me jump in my seat.

The story follows Annie Wilson (Cate Blanchett), a widow and mother of three boys. Annie is a psychic, a power she received apparently from her grandmother, and makes her living giving people advice using her ability. Annie wears no crazy hats nor does she use a crystal ball to predict the future. She has a simple deck of cards, which she uses along with her natural gut instinct.

The majority of the town doesn't necessarily believe in what Annie does, but people all like her just the same because she is a wonderful person. She is caring toward everyone and always treats those around her, especially her clientele, warmly and with a great deal of respect.

For the most part, her clients are town folk that come to her for advice about medical problems and other simple everyday things. Of course, these are not the people who are of interest in the movie. The people we see are those with major problems, like an abused wife (Hillary Swank), an abusive husband (Keanu Reeves), a mechanic with a serious mental disorder (Giovanni Ribisi) and a father with a murdered daughter but no killer.

The latter is the main mystery of "The Gift," which revolves around Jessica King (Katie Holmes), the rich daughter and philandering fiance to a simple teacher (Greg Kinnear). A few days after she is reported missing, Annie is asked to help find Jessica. At this point Annie begins to see visions of Jessica's dead body while she is sleeping and suddenly she can't get the images out of her mind.

Annie gets these visions throughout the movie, and they are both scary and a bit confusing, because at times you aren't quite sure whether what you are seeing is a vision or reality. This is supposed to add to the eerie factor of the movie, but sometimes it was complicated.

There are also a variety of bizarre characters in "The Gift" that at times make the movie feel a little ridiculous. Ribisi, for example, goes way over the top with his dramatics in every scene he is in. The plot sometimes feels like it is trying to force suspects down your throat, and yet you know that if "The Gift" wants to be a successful mystery all the way through, the killer will never be the most obvious candidate.

At a time when horror movies and other sorts of suspenseful films are everywhere and most of them are not at all scary, "The Gift" is one that not only promises to be a great thriller, it delivers.

SIUE TRACK TRAVELS TO BUTLER
On Friday, the men's and women's track team will travel to Indianapolis to compete in the Butler Indoor Classic. This will be the teams third indoor meet of the year.

Cougars still cruising, take streak on road

Lady Cougars continue their conference-filled schedule in Kentucky this weekend

KUMAR BHOOSHAN
SPORTS EDITOR

As the season rolls on, so do the Lady Cougars.

SIUE is unbeaten in its last six games, all of which have been conference wins.

"We have been very fortunate lately," head coach Wendy Hedberg said. "We have been emphasizing rebounding and defensive intensity, and it's been paying off."

The Lady Cougars are coming off two close-call victories. One against the University of Wisconsin-Parkside came down to the end with Misi Clark making some clutch shots to top the Rangers 62-60. In its other recent close call, SIUE downed Lewis University, with four Lady Cougars finishing in double figures, and won 64-61.

SIUE will play both of its games in Kentucky this weekend, facing Kentucky Wesleyan College at 5:15 p.m. Thursday and Bellarmine College at 5:45 p.m. EST Saturday.

This will be the first meeting between SIUE and its two conference opponents.

KWC has struggled this year and is ranked 10th in the Great Lakes Valley Conference with a 1-8 GLVC record and a 4-11 overall record.

The Panthers will be led by senior guard Stephanie Jarvis, and senior post player Crystal Martin. Both have led the team in scoring a combined 10 times in 14 games.

Most of the Panthers' success has come at home this year. KWC is 1-2 in conference games and is two games over .500 including nonconference games.

KELI KEENER

The men's basketball team, 4-11 overall and 1-8 in the Great Lakes Valley Conference, will play its next four games on the road starting Thursday.

SIUE will face the seventh-ranked school in the nation, Kentucky Wesleyan College. KWC is 7-2 in the GLVC and 13-2 overall; however, the Panthers are 9-0 at home.

The Panthers lead the league in scoring margin, winning their games by an average of 21.2 points.

Senior 6-foot-9 center Chris Thomas leads the GLVC in offensive rebounding with 47, averaging 3.13 per game. Thomas recorded his fifth double-double of the season against Northern Kentucky University with 10 points and 12 rebounds.

"They (KWC) are a great basketball team," head coach Jack Margenthaler said. "They're highly ranked in the country and they're always tough on their home floor. It's a great place to play. I love to go down there."

"We haven't won there in nine years," he added. "They have a lot of enthusiasm and pride in their program. It's always an atmosphere that brings the best out of the best people."

In two games last week, the Panthers gave up a total of 21 three-pointers, 10 against the University of Indianapolis and 11 against Northern Kentucky University.

The Panthers lost to Lewis University 75-70, and were downed by the NKU 106-86.

Tip-off is set for 7:45 p.m. Thursday in Owensboro, Ky.

It doesn't get any easier when the Cougars move on to Louisville, Ky., Saturday to take on Bellarmine College, who is 9-6 overall and 6-3 in the GLVC. Bellarmine is sitting in fourth place just behind KWC. Junior guard Jared McCurry leads the team and is fifth in the conference with 17.5 points per game.

Game time is set for 8 p.m. EST.

With a limited bench Margenthaler's gang will have to slow the game down and play at a comfortable pace.

"These are two huge challenges for this team," Margenthaler said. "The key with us is to shorten the game, control the tempo and get a better look at the basket. I hope we get to step up and get our minds focused a little bit more and do a better job of executing offensively."

Clark continues to lead the wayCLARK
STAFF REPORT

To say Misi Clark has been a key factor in the Lady Cougars' success this year would be an understatement.

Clark, a senior guard from Paris, Ill., has been the floor leader for SIUE women's basketball for the last four years. Her accomplishments have not justified what she has meant to coach Wendy Hedberg's ballclub. In her tenure at SIUE, so far Clark has been named Great Lakes Valley Conference freshman of the year, named to the All-GLVC all three years and has also been named to the All-Region team. The way things are going this year, Clark should make some additional room for more honors at the end of her final year.

With a free throw against Lewis University Saturday, Clark became the all-time leading scorer in SIUE history among all men's and women's players.

By scoring her 1,950 point, Clark surpassed Jason Holmes. Holmes, now an assistant coach under Jack Margenthaler, played for Margenthaler in the 1993-97 seasons and finished his career with 1,949 points.

Setting records is not unfamiliar territory for Clark. She is the women's all-time leading scorer, the all-time leader in free throws made and attempted, and this year she set the school record for steals.

Cougar hockey keeps on fightingAMY GRANT
SPORTS STRINGER

The SIUE men's ice hockey club dominated the Northern Illinois University Huskies for 50 minutes Saturday.

Unfortunately the hockey game lasted 60.

NIU broke out first, scoring its first of seven goals just two minutes into the game.

Right winger Bobby Meszaros, with an assist coming from team captain Scott Cloin, capitalized on one of the Cougars' 11 shots with less than four minutes remaining in the first period to tie the score 1-1.

One of the Cougars' best scoring chances came from Mike Cusack seven minutes into the second period, and NIU's goalie was forced to make an outstanding save.

Just two minutes later, SIUE goalie Todd Bartoszkiewicz made his own stellar save on a breakaway shot from the right point.

That's when the Cougars faced a self-admitted breakdown. They lacked the same intensity they had played with in the first half of the game.

NIU scored its second goal with eight minutes left in the second period. The Huskies would go on to score another five goals in a span of approximately five minutes.

NIU's fifth goal was scored on the power play after SIUE defenseman Ray Welsch received a penalty for cross-checking.

The Huskies took a high-sticking penalty two minutes later, but SIUE failed to convert on the power play, and NIU scored its sixth goal short-handed.

"We have a bad habit of breaking down as a team," Cloin said. "For each team to have scored one goal in the first and third periods and for us to still lose 7-2 just goes to show that when we break down, we break down quickly."

SIUE didn't go down without a fight though, literally. In fact, Corby Carlson received a five-minute major and game misconduct for fighting with one minute remaining in the second period.

"We broke down in the second period and it turned into a physical game. The score wasn't reflective of how we played," Welsch said.

Trailing 6-1 in the third period, the Cougars came out strong and attempted to make a comeback but came up short.

Cloin scored SIUE's only goal of the period with 15 minutes remaining in the game. An assist on the goal was awarded to Brad Maggio.

NIU closed out the scoring with a power play goal and won the game 7-2.

SIUE's next game against Bradley is at 3 p.m. Friday, Feb.

Sophomore guard Luke Humphery is averaging 8.9 points and two assists a game for the Cougars this year.

Sheri McWhirter/Alestle

Earlier this year the Knights beat Puerto Rico Humacao 136-25, winning by the largest margin in school history.

They also set the record for most points and assists in a game. The Lady Cougars will also have to compensate for Rachael Young who earlier this year set the Knights' single-game record for scoring 38 points against the University of Missouri-St. Louis.

"We really need to focus on our defense," Hedberg said. "We can't have defensive breakdowns to play a team like Bellarmine."

Hedberg predicts that the game will be a physical one and come down to the wire.

"I can't remember the last time we beat Bellarmine at their place," Hedberg said. "It's usually a big battle and we are very confident right now."
