

Fraud arrest at SIUE

Alestle Staff Report

A one-time SIUE student was arrested in Dunham Hall for selling goods over the Internet, but never delivering them.

Oluwaseun Akisanmi, a former senior business major from Nigeria, was arrested Friday by SIUE police and was taken to Madison County Jail. He was charged with theft of more than $300, a felony. Akisanmi's bond has been set at $15,000. He could face up to five years in prison.

SIUE police arrested Akisanmi after being contacted by the Madison County State's Attorney's office. Akisanmi allegedly sold PalmPilots from his Internet business, www.textbooksforless.com, from Oct. 16 to 26, 2000, and collected a total of $1,285, but never delivered the merchandise, according to prosecutors.

SIUE Police Chief Richard Harrison said Akisanmi used the SIUE server and his transactions were traced to the SIUE system.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service have a hold on Akisanmi's visa. Harrison said Akisanmi has a student visa, but has not registered for classes in two semesters. Since he is not a registered student, his visa is invalid.

Code Blue boxes upgraded

PETE STUMP
NEWS STRINGER

SIUE is spending $40,000 to update software inside the Code Blue emergency stations to ensure the alarms are always working.

"They get used fairly often, particularly during winter by students whose door locks are iced shut or whose cars won't start," Police Chief Richard Harrison said.

The 42 tall columns topped by blinking blue lights are found throughout the campus. Each has a button-activated, two-way speaker system connected to the SIUE police department.

A red button on the station can be used to contact police during an emergency anytime of day. The stations also have a black button for non-emergency situations.

The upgrade will allow each station to monitor itself for malfunctions and send constant electronic reports to the main console at the police department.

runs a manual test on each station monthly.

Money collected through Parking Services is being used to pay the $40,000 for the upgrades, which are scheduled to be completed early in the fall semester.

Unpaid tickets bring tow trucks

KAVITHA KARETI
NEWS STRINGER

Students, staff and faculty who ignore SIUE parking tickets may find themselves without wheels.

In the last 12 months, towing companies have taken away 143 vehicles for unpaid fines, according to Cheryl Huber, records clerk for the SIUE police department.

It is not the number of tickets, but the amount owed in fines that may bring a tow truck.

Parking Services Agent Tony Langendorf said when a person has $100 in unpaid fines, the tow truck may be called.

Langendorf said a vehicle is usually towed when a Parking Services agent finds a vehicle in violation of a parking regulation. A check on the agent's hand-held computer may show outstanding unpaid fines. If that is the case, Langendorf said, an SIUE police officer will be called. The officer handles the necessary paperwork and makes the call to the towing company. Officers are also on hand to prevent any confrontations with hostile vehicle owners.

Langendorf said the cost of the tow is determined by the towing company, including any other additional charges, such as storage. Tows can range anywhere from $50 to $120.

Gary Cross, an owner of Cross Towing in Edwardsville, said every tow is different based on circumstances. The time of day, the type of vehicle and the way it is towed all affect the cost, he said. see PARKING, page 2

Pharmacy school OK'd

Alestle Staff Report

The board of trustees approved plans to make SIUE the home of the only pharmacy school in Southern Illinois.

"There's no program in downstate Illinois," Chancellor David Werner said. "There's a lot of interest out there for pharmacists."

SIU picked the pharmacy program because it fit with the nursing program in Edwardsville, the dental school in Alton and the medical school in Springfield, and because of the lack of a pharmacy school in Southern Illinois. Illinois has two pharmacy schools, both in Chicago.

The new school will require a $6.3 million, 27,500 square foot building to accommodate more than 300 students and 40 faculty members when the school is fully operational. The first students are expected to be enrolled in 2004.

Werner said the building will be privately funded rather than spending state dollars on the construction. Now that the board has approved the plans, he said the process to find that money can begin.

Architects are reworking estimates and plans for the new building that Werner said might be located on the central campus, north of the Science Building. However, plans for the site of the new building are not definite at this point.

The expenses will not end after construction is complete. Werner said running the school will cost around $4.2 million per year. See PHARMACY, page 2

Warning sirens improved

PETE STUMP
NEWS STRINGER

SIUE has two new storm warning sirens on campus.

The sirens, located in Cougar Village and on top of Rendleman Hall, are linked to Edwardsville's main storm warning system.

"We had dead spots on campus before," Police Chief Richard Harrison said.

University Housing and the state split the expense of the sirens with SIUE, which cost $25,000 each.

The sirens are tested on the first Tuesday of each month, along with warning sirens throughout the state of Illinois.

The entire campus is now within hearing distance of the siren system when it is activated.

Employee honored for June

STEFANIE ANDERSON
FOR THE ALESTLE

A three-time nominee for SIUE's employee recognition award was selected for the month of June.

Jeanie Dickerson, the secretary for Electrical and Computer Engineering in the School of Engineering, is the winner this month.

She was first nominated two years ago by former professor and Department Chair Raghu Bollini.

"I was just surprised to see his name on the letter of recognition," Dickerson said.

She was nominated more recently by current department Chair Oktay Atkin. Dickerson added that she had received another nomination in the past.

Dickerson received a plaque, a closer parking space for one month and a $25 gift certificate to the school bookstore.

"It's just very nice because I've been here 15 years and I don't get to keep in touch with everyone I meet. Now people I know and don't know pick up the phone and call just to congratulate me," she said. "I just love my job."

Any supervisor, co-worker or student can nominate a person by letter for the award.

The letter should say why the person deserves the award and is reviewed by a committee of five. Once a person has been nominated, the name remains in the pool until selected. The nominator does not have to re-nominate the employee.

The nominee is rated by the committee on work performance, positive morale, self-improvement, creativity to improve efficiency and enhancing the department or university.

The letter should address each area.

Dickerson added that since receiving the award she e-mailed Bollini to thank him for his nomination.

Professor John Borsa dies

Alestle Staff Report

An SIUE faculty member, John C. Borsa, died Friday morning in St. Louis.

Borsa, an associate professor in the School of Education, was in his sixth year of teaching at SIUE. He previously taught at the University of Missouri-St. Louis, and the Hancock and Parkway school districts in St. Louis County.

Funeral services were held at St. Ambrose Catholic Church in St. Louis, with burial at Resurrection Cemetery in St. Louis.

He is survived by his wife, two sons and three grandchildren.

Memorials may be sent to the American Cancer Society.

Downtime set for computers

TRAVIS ROSS
NEWS STRINGER

Everybody needs a little rest now and then and the SIUE computer system is no exception.

The Office of Information Technology has scheduled maintenance for the system from 4 to 8 a.m. each Monday.

"Any upgrades, patch releases or reconfigurations could require partial or total shutdown," OIT Telecommunications Director Angela Imming said.

She added that OIT does not expect to utilize the four hours each Monday all of the time and will send out reminders one week prior to any maintenance.

Imming said most maintenance and upgrades happen without disruption to users, but some events require that the network, or parts of the network, be temporarily unavailable.

"After you install upgrades, there may be some instabilities. SIUE stays current with code and there is less overhead and downtime," Imming said.

Cross added that, despite recent gas price hikes, tow charges have not gone up. However, starting July 1 storage charges will increase from $15 a day to $20, Cross said.

According to Cross, there is no charge for storage in the first 24 to 48 hours. But if students neglect their vehicles and do not respond within one or two weeks, they could find some hefty charges.

Cross said people need proof of vehicle ownership and money for the cost of the tow to reclaim their cars.

The unpaid parking fines must be settled with Parking Services.

PHARMACY

Werner said he expects $1.7 million to come from tuition, and SIU will request the rest from the state.

Once the school is in place, SIUE will accept transfer students who have already completed two years of science prerequisites, Werner said. Students will then have four more years to complete coursework and clinical work before receiving a doctorate.

Organizations should get involved

Something needs to be done. I'm talking about participation at campus activities. Actually, the lack of participation at events would be more accurate. If you read my columns, you've heard this before, but I may have a solution. Campus organizations could sponsor athletic events in an effort to boost attendance and increase school spirit. While the organizations are talking up athletic events, they could try to boost attendance at the events.

This should be an easy system to initiate. Before every athletic season, organizations would choose games and sponsor them.

The organization would be responsible for getting out the word and getting people there. The group's members could make signs, hold a rally, whatever it takes, within reason of course.

We have Pack the Gym nights for basketball to try to increase spirit and attendance, but they only work for one game. We might see several hundred people show up on a Pack the Gym night, but then we see low numbers at the next game.

If we get organizations involved, they can take pride in the teams and get other students involved in all sports.

I think people would see how much fun everyone has at athletic events if they came to just one. It's not all about the game. A lot of people go to games to meet friends and just hang out. And games are finished early enough to go out with friends afterward.

This is just one idea, but I wanted to throw it out there. Maybe someone in athletics or in an organization will see this and work with it.

If you have other ideas, send them my way, or call athletics and bend someone's ear over there.

I think campus organizations are the key to improving campus life. The organizations are the students.

I also want to say congratulations to a lot of people.

Congratulations to the softball team for bringing home second place in the region and congratulations to the baseball team for bringing home fifth place in the nation.

I also want to congratulate Dave Crouthers, Matt Wilkinson, Josh Clark, Mark Bugger and Bret Gaudrone. Crouthers, Wilkinson and Clark were drafted by Major League teams and Bugger and Gaudrone are playing minor league baseball.

All of you have made us proud.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

Lovejoy Library is more of a curse than a resource.

Not only does the facility lack many significant titles, making it nearly impossible to do adequate research for papers and projects, but some of the employees are incapable of courtesy and consideration.

I am enrolled in a literature course in which a suggested reading list is provided by the professor. Students may select books from that list, or find other titles to read for the course. Only one student or group may report on any one book. When I went to renew the book that only I may read and report on for the class, I was denied.

The student worker at the circulation desk was understanding and willing to help. She saw my point of view, and even knew which course I was taking. However, when she called over Charles Dugan, who is in charge of the reserve books, he was unwilling to even listen. He said he didn't care what the situation was, the reserve book policy could not be discussed further.

Of course, I could ask the professor to change the book from a seven-day reserve to a 14-day reserve. Or, I could leave the book on the shelf for 24 hours and then come back. Both of those situations significantly hinder my ability to prepare for my oral report on Thursday. Thus, because I planned ahead and checked out a book in advance, I am punished for it.

I understand the reasoning behind a reserve list and the policies that go with it. Many courses require research on the same topic by many students. In that case, bending the rules would be unfair to other students waiting to do their own research. However, in my case, nobody else was waiting on this book.

Thankfully, a friend was standing nearby and checked the book out herself and let me take it home. It's shocking and disappointing to me that students must manipulate the system to complete class assignments because of the uncooperative nature of library workers and policies.

Correction

SIUE staff and faculty members may either pay $100 or $70 for parking hanging tags, effective July 1.

The Alestle inadvertently omitted the $70 fee in a June 13 story about parking.

The Alestle regrets the error.

Dear Editor:

I would like to respond to Paul Pitts' comments in the June 13 Alestle regarding the Casey Martin issue.

I recently competed in the U.S. Amateur Public Links sectional qualifier at Spencer T. Olin Golf Course in Alton. The heat index was hovering around 100 degrees that day. Despite having a caddy to carry my bag, I can assure you that walking a hilly golf course in that heat was truly exhausting.

Further, at the higher levels of the game, where one or two shots determines a champion, that level of exhaustion not only affects the physical aspects of the game, but also the mental aspects. I assure you that Martin will have an advantage in that respect, and that is simply not fair.

I empathize with Martin's position. If riding a golf cart simply leveled the playing field, I would support the Supreme Court's decision. However, it is my opinion that this decision gives Martin an advantage not enjoyed by his fellow competitors. Martin has suggested that he does not get an advantage, based on his performance on the PGA and buy.com Tours this year. This may be a painful reality, but perhaps he is just not good enough to compete on those tours.

Stephen W. Tuholski Ph.D.
Asst. Professor Dept. of Psychology

Should organizations sponsor athletic events to boost attendance?

- Yes, great idea!
- I'm for anything that helps.
- Don't care.
- No, nothing works.
- Nope, dumb idea.

Fourth SIUE player receives MLB offer

"Bad to the bone" Mark Bugger smashes five school records his senior season

KELI KEENER
SPORTS EDITOR

This spring season marked both a beginning and an end for one of the most celebrated players in SIUE's baseball history.

Mark Bugger ended his 4-year run on the baseball team with his most stellar season to date.

As he walked to the plate at home games this season, the anthem "Bad to the Bone" was played. Little else could describe the man who broke five career records wearing a Cougar uniform.

This year, Bugger was tabbed First Team All-American. He became the first player in SIUE's baseball history to be named a two-time All-American; he was named to the Second Team last year.

Bugger broke five career records this season including the seemingly elusive National Collegiate Athletic Association Division II hits record, set by Mark Briggs of Lewis University in 1997.

Bugger became the first player in the school's history to record 300 career hits, a feat which he accomplished during the regular season on March 31 against Great Lakes Valley Conference opponent Indiana UniversityPurdue University-Fort Wayne.

see BUGGER, page 7

BRIAN WALLHEIMER/ALESTLE

Senior second baseman Mark Bugger broke five school records this season.

He is the fifth player ever to rack up more than 300 career hits in Division II baseball.

At SIUE, Bugger holds career records for hits with 356, at-bats with 903, runs with 204, runs batted in with 216 and doubles with 57. He finished with a career batting average of .394.

Bugger, a senior who made the move from shortstop to second base, continued to leave his mark in the record books after the regular season ended.

He exceeded the hits mark as the Cougars advanced into post-season play and the NCAA Division II World Series in Montgomery, Ala.

A product of Edwardsville High School, Bugger ranked 55th on the Division II baseball national list with his .409 batting average this season.

Bugger finished with a total of 356 career hits, which includes the school's single-season record of 110, compiled this year. He finished with seven home runs and 70 RBIs.

Bugger ranked first in the Great Lakes Valley Conference in hits, second in batting, second in RBIs, third in runs scored with 66 and fifth in slugging percentage at .599.

He came in first in triples with six and total bases with 161. Bugger was second in the conference this season in total plate appearances with 310.

Defensively, Bugger finished third in assists with 168, and second in fielding double plays, raking in 37.

He ended the season with 118 putouts, 168 assists and a .920 fielding percentage.

Last year, Bugger was named First Team All-Great Lakes Region and All-GLVC.

As the GLVC Player of the Year, he led the team in batting average at .414, at-bats with 220, hits with 91, RBIs with 59 and slugging percentage at .545.

In 1999, he ranked second on the team with a .360 batting average while leading the team in home runs with three.

As a freshman in 1998, Bugger broke the single-season freshman record for hits with 84, while batting .387, with eight home runs and 41 RBIs.

As one season of his life ends, another begins. Overlooked in the Major League Baseball Draft held a few weeks ago, Bugger is spending his summer after graduation as a starting player for the Gateway Grizzlies, a minor league baseball team out of Collinsville.

In the club's inaugural season, Bugger has played in all 14 games. He is currently batting .333 with six hits and four runs.

As if the clouds could not be lifted anymore, Bugger received an offer by the Montreal Expos last week.

Should he decide to take it, he would head to Jupiter, Fla., to join the Gulf Coast Expos in the Gulf Coast Rookie League.

Should he opt to stay on with the Grizzlies, he will await other forthcoming offers.

Everybody loves to trash teenagers, right? Maybe they don't realize that we do care. That we can make a difference. Get involved in Crime Prevention. Clean up parks. Teach younger kids. Start a school or neighborhood watch. And help make your community safer and better for everyone. Together, we can prove them wrong by doing something right.
