

Comptroller cautions against debt

DEREK SHELTON
 NEWS STRINGER

State Comptroller Daniel Hynes spoke to SIUE students Wednesday to stress the importance of staying out of credit card debt.

"We are on a fact-finding mission to see if this area is plagued with debt, and the numbers so far add up to national averages," Hynes said.

Hynes discussed reasons why young college students should stay debt free and how to avoid credit cards altogether with a political science class. The class members discussed the various aspects of owning a credit card and the debt that comes with it. Among the topics discussed, three of the most important were reading the fine print on card agreements, not using credit cards excessively, and not owning one at all.

Jackie Spiehlman, a junior who has worked her way out of debt, attended the discussion. "Be careful. Once you've had one you'll want another and another one. It really begins to add up," she said.

Spiehlman said she knows firsthand the dangers of reckless credit card use. At one point last year, she had a debt totaling over $500, which took her a full year to pay off. Finally, in March she became debt-free by paying her debt with grant money.

Hynes also addressed students having to drop out of college to pay off debt. He said he hopes to enact legislation to protect students from losing valuable educational opportunities.

Jason Holzum, a political science major and student trustee, said he thinks the state should limit the number of credit cards that freshmen receive. "I alone have received an uncountable number of credit card offers, but I just usually throw them away," he said.

In Illinois, the average student owns three credit cards and a debt of $1,700. The national debt is at $2,700. Hynes acknowledges that this is good for the state, but said Illinois should be doing more to protect the "people behind the averages."

"With the information gathered from this tour, I plan on formulating legislation that would force card issuers to exercise greater responsibility in the promotion and distribution of credit card companies," Hynes said.

After speaking to the class, Hynes met with Chancellor David Werner to address the issue of universities backing credit card company solicitation.

Hynes, who was elected in 1998, is set on driving the comptroller's office in a new direction. "We are now the watchdog, looking out for the little guys," he said. Hynes said that his office will not rest until all credit card companies change their policies.

Hynes admitted that he, too, had fallen into debt in college. "Yeah, I had some, but I always made sure that I paid it off," he said. "And I read the fine print."

SIUE sprinter runs into trouble on road

ANTHONY WATT
 ASSISTANT NEWS EDITOR

SIUE students will have to wait a while longer before they can use Bluff Road.

Jason Ward, a sprinter on the track team, allegedly drove through wet concrete in a construction zone on Aug. 27.

He was charged with criminal damage to state property over $10,000 but under $100,000.

"The contractor is going to have to jackhammer the existing concrete out and replace it," said Bob Washburn, director of facilities management.

"The construction workers were still there finishing the concrete and tried to wave him down," Washburn said.

He said damage to the 2,500 square-foot area may prevent the reopening of the road up to three weeks.

The repairs will cost an estimated $24,700.

Ward allegedly went around a construction barricade and caused damage to the concrete.

Police Capt. Gina Hays said Ward was issued a ticket for disobeying a traffic control device.

Track coach Darryl Frerker said he does not know if Ward's eligibility with the team will be affected.

A date for Ward's court appearance had not been set by Wednesday afternoon.

MINDY ERNST/ALESTLE

Jason Ward, a sophomore on the SIUE track team, has been charged with criminal damage to state property. The damage done to Bluff Road totals almost $25,000.

Unite for the sake of those after us

I found the answer to a question that has plagued me over the past year and realized that the solution is simpler than I thought.

Why don't students attend SIUE programs or athletic events? The answer came to me while watching football. That's not surprising since I spend quite a bit of my time watching football.

But Friday I went to Mount Olive to watch high school football with a news stringer from the Alestle. From that experience I realized why SIUE doesn't have much school spirit.

SIUE is not a community. Maybe that does not come as a shock to a lot of people, or maybe you think I am wrong. But community is a special thing that could benefit SIUE in a number of ways.

Let me start by giving my thoughts on what makes a community.

I looked up community in the dictionary and found that it is a group of people who live in close proximity or have similar characteristics. Well, proximity is relative to the situation. Close may mean in the same community, state or even country. So, I think SIUE could qualify as a community in that sense.

The other part of the definition talks about similar characteristics. I have blonde hair, but I don't consider all people with blonde hair who go to SIUE a part of a special community. I am male. I don't count SIUE males as a separate community.

I think the only thing I can find that is similar or the same for all people at SIUE is their ties to the university. But that is a broad generalization. In the same sense, I could argue that every person on earth is part of the human community. And while that is true, a community so large does not have the sense of intimacy found in other communities.

Let me get back to Mount Olive. Mount Olive is a community. People showed up for the football game in droves. Some people looked like high school students while others were students 50 or more years ago. The point is the majority had little or no ties to the high school, but they still went to the football game.

That is a community. SIUE cannot get 100 students to a soccer game. We are not a community. Granted, attendance at a soccer or football game is not the only defining characteristic of a community, but it is an interesting point.

People in small communities such as Mount Olive will probably talk about the good plays in that football game for a week until the next game is played. Then they will all gather and start the process again.

At SIUE, people are considered knowledgeable about athletics if they can tell you where a team plays its games. A majority of students do not take an active interest in SIUE athletics or programs. If they do, it is not apparent from attendance at these events.

Don't get me wrong, I'm not going to throw blame around. Maybe there is nothing to blame. Students may like the campus in its current state.

I, for one, do not like it. There is not enough interest among SIUE students when it comes to community and what is happening on campus. I hear people talk about life on other campuses and how different it is. We can have that at SIUE. It just takes effort.

The juniors and seniors can begin to set the example, but the lasting effect will have to come from the freshmen and sophomores. The lower classes will be here after I and other juniors are gone. They are the ones who will have to keep traditions going and start new ones.

The campus itself is less than 40 years old. We don't have the 100-year traditions found in other schools. We have to start them. So, start them.

If students want to have a party on campus with a few bands, go through the process and get it done. If students want something, they can do it. This is our university. We can mold it to fit us. We can mold it to fit future generations.

Someday 100 years from now, someone is going to paint the Rock and wonder who started it. It won't really matter because the tradition will be there. We have the opportunity to begin or add to traditions students will carry on long after we are gone.

Make SIUE what you want it to be. It can be anything and everything we see in other universities. But above all, we can make SIUE more than a campus; we can make SIUE a community.

Senate should back words with dollars

Staff Editorial
 Independent Florida Alligator

GAINESVILLE, Fla. - (U-WIRE) - Here's the good news. President Bush agreed to allow federal funding for embryonic stem cell research early last month. His decision put wind in the sails of a type of medical research that could prove to be instrumental in the next decade or so of medical technology.

His decision was not without controversy. Conservative groups all across the country blasted his decision, standing firm on their rigid moral beliefs and allowing them to have a sort of myopic effect on their judgment. But, the bad news may put them at ease.

The bad news is that there is a good possibility the restrictions Bush put on the research may hamper any real advancements from ever occurring. Bush decided public financing to work on those stem cell colonies, or lines, would only be allowed for those created before 9 p.m. on Aug. 9 - the moment he announced his decision to the nation in a televised speech.

Because of that, there is a real possibility that there are not enough lines to do any ongoing research. And, when Congress comes back from its summer recess, it will have to address that issue.

Tommy G. Thompson, secretary of health and human services, will testify on Wednesday in the first of three hearings the Senate has planned. The hearings are to decide if the restrictions on stem cell research will encumber the efforts of scientists trying to discover treatments for illness and disease.

This issue is likely to become a hot topic in political circles once again, now that there is concern that Bush's decision was greatly ceremonial but not ultimately helpful. His message may have been full of sound and fury, but the results may signify nothing.

Thus, this issue is, unfortunately, being taken in the wrong direction again. Politicians will pick their sides and fight to the death based on their party lines. But, this is not a political issue; this is a responsibility issue.

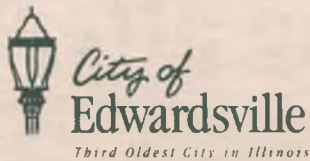

The people arguing this issue have a responsibility to move federal funding to a program that will help save lives. Period. Our government has already decided to back stem cell research. Now it must prove it is truly behind the decision.

Finance board puts off program request

TRAVIS ROSS
NEWS REPORTER

The student government finance board kept its first meeting of the year brief, deciding to table the only request brought to the board.

The only matter of business was a program request from the Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity requesting $1,230 to assist with its annual program, "Dedication to Women."

"This is an annual event that is open to everyone to honor the contribution of women to the past, present and future," Alpha Phi Alpha President R. Shawn Williams said.

Since Alpha Phi Alpha could not provide an evaluation of its last event, the request was tabled until the next finance board meeting.

The finance board's next meeting is scheduled for 2 p.m. Friday, Sept. 14, in the Morris University Center's International Room.

Judge Ann Callis released Brown on electronic monitoring July 10 because of complications with her pregnancy, a move protested by the Madison County State's Attorney's office.

Brown said she was trying to protect herself after her ex-husband sexually assaulted her.

The remodeled Speech Center is open

ALESTLE STAFF REPORT

Students needing to polish up on a class presentation can go to the Speech Center.

"People are nervous about giving a presentation in any class especially if they have never taken a public speaking course," Speech Center Director Jenita Hladyszewsky said. "They can come in here and see what it is like to give a presentation."

The center, in Alumni Hall Room 3323, received new equipment and an additional room over the summer. It is staffed by Hladyszewsky and two speech communications majors.

"We have a Web site which can help you do research for your speech," Hladyszewsky said. "We also have tutorials to help you outline it and we have one-on-one sessions where we can help directly."

She said the center also has Powerpoint and overhead projectors, and video equipment for taping and critiquing speeches.

"People think they need to memorize a speech," Hladyszewsky said. "That is not true at all. They need to learn to make a complete outline and write it on notecards."

Jenita Hladyszewsky works in the new Speech Center.

What is your child getting into at the playground?

Last year, a half million kids were seriously injured at their neighborhood playgrounds. Many of these injuries could have been prevented by the supervision of a knowledgeable adult. CHRISTY SCHICKER
FOR THE ALESTLE

The New Wagner Gallery is once again showcasing the most recent work created by Art and Design faculty.

The opening exhibit of the fall semester, the Annual Faculty Exhibition, is an occasion where new and returning art students can view the latest developments in their professors' oeuvres.

The gallery isn't just for the artistically astute, however. Any student who has an interest in art, a sense of curiosity or even a few extra minutes between classes might find the gallery, located just off the atrium in the Art and Design Building, a place where something interesting can always be discovered.

A work titled "Backpack" (2001) by Paul Dresang, professor of glass and ceramics, is a porcelain sculpture displaying an acute sensitivity of the medium. Dresang, famous for his trompe l'oeil pieces, creates highly simulated textures of materials such as leather and wood. In "Backpack," a folded leather backpack, three wooden toys, two rubber balls and a photograph are sculpted to their most minute detail, with each object displaying the characteristics of its referent material.

"Homecoming" (2001) by John DenHouter, assistant professor and foundations coordinator, is a large oil

DenHouter creates a dream-like, other-worldly environment through the qualities of light, shadow and space. A purple shadow, cast by some unseen element, looms across a road in the foreground while a line of football goal posts in a field gleam bright yellow and orange in the sun and recede in sharp perspective. Above the land, a cloud is painted in heightened realism, its brightness achieved by a multitude of colors contained in the white highlighted area. The painting, with its rich blues, purples, oranges, yellows and whites, creates a wonderful sense of the intensity of light.

"Quarter Turn" (2001) by Jane Barrow, area head of painting, is an abstract oil painting that conveys movement and energy. Active, fluid brushstrokes are balanced against a geometric framework of horizontal and vertical divisions, creating a sense of harmony, precision and control.

A digital ink jet print by Dan Anderson, area head of ceramics, titled "Penland Silos" (2001), shows a scene of two defunct silos in a Penland, N.C. landscape. One silo is overgrown with vegetation, and the barn reveals its own decay, with broken wooden slabs laying on the ground amid other detritus. The piece has a quiet poignancy about it which speaks of desertion and neglect, of the flowering of human life and activity, and its inevitable decay and return back to the earth.

Bill Klingensmith, area head of computer graphics, includes a work of digital transfer on wood-fired stoneware titled "Prepare, Create and Cause" (2001). A triptych of small stoneware slabs hangs on a wall, and images of a hand assuming various gestures are superimposed on the stoneware, along with the separate title words printed underneath each successive image. What is interesting in this work is the conveyance of abstract actions through two different means of representation – those of written language and hand gesture.

The position of the hand in all three images corresponds directly with the word printed beneath it. "Prepare" is below a fist, the clenched fingers implying tightness and control. "Create" is an open hand with fingers unfolding, perhaps referencing the looseness or surrender of creation. The hand also appears to be offering the viewer something, as though an act of creation might be akin to an act of compassion. The last hand is "Cause," and it displays the gesture of pressing down, a gesture which could be read as forceful or smothering, and possibly relating to the end product of creation in which the finished work produces its effect.

The importance of text is also addressed in a work titled "Unfortunately/Fortunately" (2001) by Steve Brown, assistant professor in photography. This piece, made with digital ink jet prints and mixed media, includes two images of blown-up fingerprints in brown ink hung on the wall, while two Chinese ceramic style bowls sit atop squares of black cloth on pedestals below. Folded fortunes, free of their cookie shells, fill the bowls, while a sign between the pedestals points to the bowls of fortunes and instructs the viewer to "take just one please." Printed on the fortunes are inscriptions bestowing the viewer with either a good or bad fate.

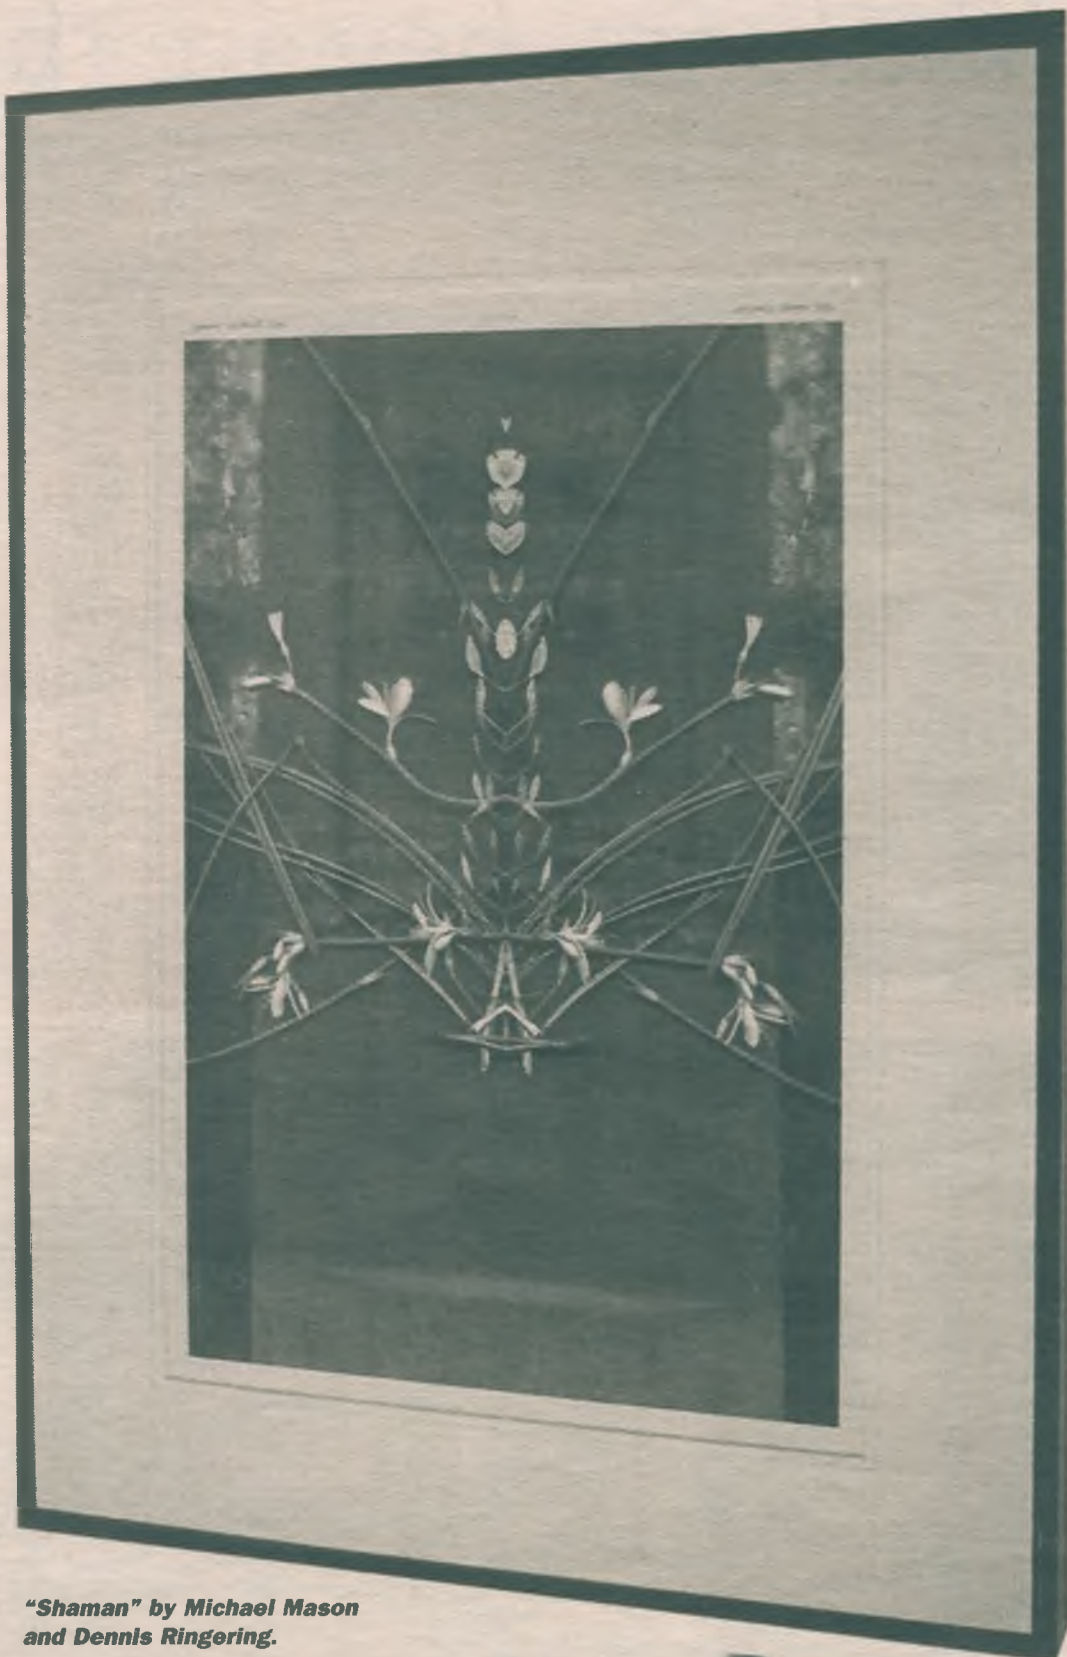

Brown's work is heavy with implication and suggests a number of possible interpretations. The two large fingerprints suggest the concept that destiny is predetermined or rooted in the body – that the future can be read in the lines of the hand, or the loops and whorls of a fingerprint. And yet fate might be something that one chooses at will from a number of possibilities thrown together arbitrarily. The difference between a tragedy and blessing might just be the way one chooses to view those prospects in the larger fabric of life.

A work by Michael Mason of the University Museum and Dennis Ringering, area head of drawing, addresses the theme of divination. The work, a digital print with pastel, conte and charcoal titled "Shaman" (2001), illustrates a bilateral pattern of flowers, stems and other natural materials. A faint image of a bird with spread wings appears above the central pattern, perhaps referencing a transforming shaman.

Professors who also have work in the exhibit include Marcus Howell, term professor in printmaking, Michael Joslyn, term professor in drawing, Gussie Klorer, professor of art therapy, Paulette Myers, area head of metalsmithing, Luanne Rimel, term professor in fibers, Terri Schweitzer, assistant professor of art education, Laura Strand, area head of fibers, Savneet Talwar, assistant professor of art therapy, and Joe Weber, professor of art education.

The Annual Faculty Exhibition will be on display through Sept. 14. New Wagner Gallery hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. For more information, call the art office at 650-3071, or visit the Web site at www.siue.edu/ART.

Students, beware the "freshman 15"

ELIZABETH A. LEHNERER
LIFESTYLES STRINGER

As students head off to universities across the country, many are looking forward to meeting new people and learning new lessons. One thing they are not looking forward to is gaining weight.

The "freshman 15" is a common occurrence with new college students. Newcomers to college life gain an average of 15 pounds in the first semester. The weight gain is contributed to fast food, odd eating patterns and hectic schedules. The first weeks of school are so busy that new students do not realize they are not taking care of themselves.

Erin Kranc, a sophomore, said, "My first year I gained some weight, but once I got used to college living, I lost it."

Most students find that statement to be true. The amount of fast food available can make overeating easy.

Julie Korte, a sophomore who gained eight pounds her first year, said, "I don't live on campus so I don't have a card to scan. So when I'm hungry, I eat what is cheap and available, which usually means a Coke and a bag of M&Ms."

Many freshmen are aware of the phenomena and are trying to guard themselves against the weight issue.

To stay in shape, freshman Dan Timmermann jogs every other day, swims and bikes, and is also considering taking a kickboxing class at the Student Fitness Center.

Catherine Brown, a freshman, said "I go to the gym every day but Friday and try not to eat late at night."

Jaime Santos offered a different approach. "I use Metabolife. It's expensive but it works," she said.

Help can also be found in Center Court, the cafeteria on the lower level of the Morris University Center. Bill Canney, assistant director for dining services, is responsible for many changes in the past year.

"Before I came here there were no vegetarian or vegan foods offered. The Market Basket was no more than apples, oranges and bananas, and the variety of bread, well, there wasn't one," Canney said.

Center Court now offers a larger selection of fruits, breads and fresh vegetables. Vegan and vegetarian dishes are also offered at all meals, and all grilled or fried foods are cooked in fat-free oil.

Canney recently implemented a nutrition program on the computer in the Center Court. The computer, complete with instructions, contains nutritional facts on prime vendor products sold there.

"We always want to make sure students have a choice. The whole key really is a balanced diet," Canney said.

The Student Fitness Center is free to all students with a valid student identification card. The SFC offers basketball, volleyball, badminton, racquetball, floor hockey, an indoor track and a swimming pool as well as extensive exercise equipment and a weight room.

For $75, students can purchase 10 one-hour sessions with a personal trainer. The Wellness Center, in the lobby of the SFC, is open weekdays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and provides educational information to students who focus on a healthy lifestyle.

Lady Cougars take perfect mark on road

Three games into the regular season schedule, the women's soccer team has had nine different players score its nine goals.

The team's freshmen have come on strong and started to prove themselves, while the old reliables have continued to come through as well.

Coach Brian Korbemeyer said he was happy with his team's play.

"I'm very happy with the way things turned out," Korbemeyer said. "Our team has really played aggressive and that has been very positive for us."

The Lady Cougars improved their record to 3-0 last weekend as they traveled to Evansville, Ind., and racked up two shutouts in the process.

SIUE took wins over Northern Michigan University 1-0 and the University of Southern Indiana 2-0. The Lady Cougars handed the NMU Wildcats their first loss of the season.

JESSICA CLOSEN/ALESTLE

The Lady Cougars soccer team is tied for first place in the Great Lakes Valley Conference.

"Northern Michigan was a really tough team," Korbemeyer said. "They were a real physical team and that's what our team needed."

Junior forward Colleen Creamer scored the only goal for SIUE. She was assisted by sophomore midfielder Erin Gusewelle who was able to clear the ball on a corner kick in the 89th minute.

The goal marked Creamer's first of the season after assisting on two previous goals for the Lady Cougars during pre-season games.

The win over USI was another non-conference triumph. Three freshmen came through in the Lady Cougars' victory over the Screaming Eagles.

Lindsey Tiemeyer scored in the 31st minute on an assist from Gusewelle.

Lindsey Eubanks scored later in the 72nd minute with some help from freshman forward Ann Crawford.

Meanwhile, Jessica Brown posted her second straight shutout while tending goal.

With the loss, USI moved to 0-2 on the season.

This weekend the Lady Cougars will play two more non-conference games.

SIUE will take on Ferris State University at 5:30 p.m. on Friday.

The Bulldogs, who hail from Big Rapids, Mich., hold a record of 1-1-2.

SIUE will then meet Grand Valley State University at 10 a.m. on Sunday.

Grand Valley State tied Lewis University 2-2 in its home opener last week. The Lakers battled back from a 2-0 halftime deficit to earn the tie. The Lakers, who will make the trip from Allendale, Mich., are 1-1-1 on the season thus far.

Both games will be held at the University of Missouri-St. Louis.

The SIUE men's soccer team will travel to Memphis, Tenn., to take on nationally ranked Christian Brothers University Saturday.

The Buccaneers won the Gulf South Conference Championship last year and advanced to the first round of the National Collegiate Athletic Association Tournament.

Coach Ed Huneke said that his Cougars will have their work cut out for them.

"Christian Brothers is a very good team," Huneke said. "They were one of the best teams in the nation last year, and they have beaten us for the last two years."

The Cougars have been productive on both sides of the ball this year but Huneke said his team will have to perform really well against one of the best teams in the nation.

"Christian Brothers plays a very hard, aggressive English style," Huneke said. "We are going to have to work the ball around well on the ground because Christian Brothers is more comfortable when the ball is in the air. We also have to be careful of quick attacks."

The Cougars are coming off of a 1-0-1 weekend.

The team played Gannon University and Truman State University at Quincy in Soccer Bowl IX Sept. 2 and 3.

In its first game, SIUE beat Gannon University in overtime. Gannon scored the first goal five minutes into the game.

The Cougars equalized the game when Justin Huneke scored in the 75th minute of the game off of a Matthew Horan assist.

Justin McMillian again put the ball in the back of the net and put the game away with his second goal of the game 13 minutes into overtime.

The Cougars then came back the next day to face Truman State University.

Again it took overtime to decide the outcome of the game, but this time the Cougars had to settle for a tie.

The game ended with SIUE and Truman State tied at two goals a piece.

Cal Thomas scored the Cougars' first goal off of an assist by Justin McMillian.

Senior Chris Knopp scored the game-tying goal for the Cougars in the 80th minute of the game.

After Soccer Bowl IX the Cougars improved to 3-0-1 overall this season.

Huneke said he liked what he saw out of his team last weekend.

"Overall I was pleased with the manner in which we played," Huneke said. "A win against Truman State would have been preferred, especially considering the flow of the game, I feel we dominated. These were two very strong teams and to come out of the weekend without a loss is a plus."

The SIUE men's and women's cross country teams began their seasons on a positive note at the SIUE Open on Saturday.

The women's team controlled the race with the top four places going to SIUE runners in the 4,000-meter run.

Amanda Bozue placed first, followed by Breanne Steffens with second, Carrie Carducci, third, and freshman Mary Witte placing fourth.

Maria Ewersmann placed fifth for the Cougars and right behind her, placing sixth, was Natalie Kocher.

Bozue and Steffens both ran faster times than last year.

Newcomer Chenoa Glenn placed 10th respectively, to give the women's team its top seven runners and the team title.

Lead by two-time All Region selection Jason Olszowka, the men's team placed second in its 8,000-meter race.

The SIUE men's top seven all placed among the top 20.

The men's top seven included Olszowka, who placed sixth overall.

Tyler Krauss placed ninth overall, and behind Krauss was Ryan Boyll who finished 10th, Nick Campbell 13th, and freshman Joshua Helton had a 16th place finish.

David Owens and David Droege rounded out the top 20 with Owens finishing 17th and Droege finishing 20th overall.

Other Cougars with strong performances were freshmen John Sadowski, Richard Skirball, Steve McNamer and Robbie Old.

Coach Darryl Frerker was pleased with his Cougars' first showing of the season.

"On average both teams ran faster than last year; some of our runners were almost one minute and a half faster than last year at this race."

For the men's team Olszowka, Krauss, Campbell, and Droege all ran faster times than their first race last season.

Droege shaved off the most time by taking two minutes, 12 seconds off of his 2000 SIUE Open time.

Coach Frerker knows that with the level of competition this weekend the Cougars will need to use their momentum from the SIUE Open.

"This weekend we are going to take a closer look at times and gaining experience," Frerker said. "Being at Purdue with that level of competition we are going to focus on personal records and competitiveness."

The men's and women's cross country teams will travel to West Lafayette, Ind., this weekend for the Purdue Open.

SIUE looks to rise above .500

SPORTS REPORTER

Although members of the women's volleyball team are currently treading water in the standings, they hope to pull ahead after the tournament this weekend.

The Lady Cougars will travel to Ohio this weekend to compete in the Findlay Classic.

They face Hillsdale University and the University of Findlay Friday and Wayne State University and Bellarmine College Saturday.

"I think the first two matches on Friday will be the toughest matches of the tournament," head coach Todd Gober said. "We're starting right off the bat against the best competition."

Findlay was undefeated throughout its first four games this season, but lost the previous three in the Northern Alabama Invitational last weekend.

Wayne State finished last season with a record of 11-17, but hopes to improve its team with a stronger defensive core this year.

Warrior Senior Anavia McClure is one of the leading blockers on the team. She is currently eighth on WSU's all-time list with 220 block assists.

Along with improving their record, Gober hopes to decide on a lineup this weekend.

"We're still shuffling everyone around and trying to find the right mix of players," Gober said. "Before our conference games start next week we need to have our lineup set."

The Lady Cougars played a game on the road Wednesday night against Central Missouri State University. Results from that game were not reported by deadline.

"Our game against Central Missouri is another important one," Gober said. "We've got a good non-conference schedule to start the year and that helps us to find our weaknesses."

Central Missouri holds the record of 18 straight titles in the Mid-America Intercollegiate Athletic Association conference. They shared the title with Truman State University last season.

SIUE is coming off of a .500 weekend at the Rockhurst Tournament in Kansas City, Mo.

The Lady Cougars won their first two games against Southwest Baptist University and Dallas Baptist University, but lost the following two to Pittsburgh State University and Rockhurst University.

"We were hoping for a better record coming back home, but it's early in the season and we're still working out a few things," Gober said. "I'm okay with being .500 at this point in the season."

In the second game against Dallas Baptist, Amanda Wulfe recorded 31 total attacks in the 3-1 win.

Amanda Hampton finished the game with 25 set assists and Stephanie Trame had 18 digs in the four matches.

The games the following day wouldn't prove to be as successful.

SIUE was leading Pittsburgh State two matches to none when the Gorillas came back to win the next three and take the game.

Outside hitter Jennifer Trame had 14 kills and 30 total attacks in the following game against Rockhurst, but the Lady Cougars lost that game in four matches.

SIUE currently has a record of 4-4 overall this season.

The Lady Cougars' first home game is at 7 p.m. Friday, Sept. 14, against the University of Missouri-St. Louis.

Golf tees off season

KUMAR BHOOSHAN

After the first two matches of the season, coach Larry Bennett said his Lady Cougars golf squad is already ahead of the game.

The Lady Cougars traveled to Michigan over the weekend and came out with seventh- and ninth-place finishes.

In their first match of the season, the Lady Cougars finished No. 7 out of 16 teams in the Ferris State Invitational at Ferris State University Friday.

"We had a really good trip this weekend," Bennett said. "We showed a little rust but are better off than we were last year at this time."

Bennett said the depth in the lineup was apparent early on.

"Our top part of our lineup stumbled a little and didn't shoot as well as they could have," Bennett said. "But the bottom of our roster really shot well and kept us in contention."

The Lady Cougars finished with a total team score of 708. Northern Kentucky University placed first overall with a two-day score of 665.

Bennett said he was glad his team got rid of some opening-match anxiety.

"We came out a little rusty," Bennett said. "Our first match gave us an opportunity to get our nerves and jitters out of the way."

Newcomer Deanna Bock

placed No. 19 overall with a two-day score of 172.

"She shot really well considering she has never seen the course before," Bennett said. "She could have shot better, but overall did really well."

On Monday and Tuesday the Lady Cougars traveled to Allendale, Mich., to compete in the Grand Valley State Invitational.

SIUE finished ninth overall, shooting 709 as a team. The University of Toledo finished first shooting 617.

"We stayed really confident," Bennett said. "When you get a lot of teams all at once you end up playing for six hours a day and our team stayed tough."

Katie Farrell had the best finish for the Lady Cougars.

She placed No. 41 overall by shooting a two-day total of 175.

Kacy Gruenkemeyer, Deanna Bock and Brittany Auld were all able to shoot under 180 as well.

Bennett said he is happy with what he saw out of his squad last weekend.

"All in all it was a really positive trip for us," Bennett said. "We played a couple of really tough courses and had a really good showing."

On Sunday and Monday the Lady Cougars will play host for the SIUE Invitational that will be played at the Woodlands in Alton. Tee-off has not been announced.
